PERSHING IN CONFIDENTIAL NOTE TO BAKER SEES POSSIBILITY OF FRENCH REVOLUTION

General Disturbed Over Indifference To Shipping Needs

CHAPTER VII.

As the French authorities wished to honor our national holiday they requested that some of our troops parade in Paris July 4, 1917. We were not prepared to make much of a military impression, as our men were largely recruits. But to stimulate morale the French wanted to demonstrate that the Americans were actually coming, so a battalion of the 16th Infantry was brought up from Saint Nazaire.

The untrained, awkward appearance of this unit, which was accepted as the cream of our regular army by the French officials, no doubt tended to confirm their belief that it would be some time before we should be able to organize an effective combat army.

If they could have foreseen the triumph of this same battalion at the peak of the great counter-offensive on the field of Soissons just one year later we might have been spared many delays and difficulties in carrying out our plans.

Nevertheless, the first appearance of American combat troops in Paris brought joyful acclaim from the people. On the march the battalion was accompanied by a great crowd, many women forcing their way into the ranks and swinging along arm in arm with the men. With wreaths about their necks and flowers in their hats and on their rifles, the column had the appearance of a moving flower garden.

With only a semblance of military formation the animated throng pushed its way through avenues of people to the martial strains of the French band and the still more thrilling music of cheering voices. Many dropped on their knees in reverence as the column went by.

Gives Colonel Stanton Credit.

The battalion marched to the cemetery where the tomb of Lafayette is located. The ceremony there consisted of a few speeches, the principal speaker being Mr. Brand Whitlock, our ambassador to Belgium. I had been asked to deliver an address but had designated Colonel C. E. Stanton, of my staff, an old army friend and something of an orator, to speak in my place. However, I was prevailed upon to speak extemporaneously.

It was on this occasion that utterance was given to an expression that could be born only of inspiration, one that will live long in history: "Lafayette, we are here!"

Many have attributed this striking utterance to me, and I have often wished it could have been mine. But I have no recollection of saying anything so splendid. I am sure those words were spoken by Colonel Stanton, and to him must go the credit for so happy and felicitous a phrase.

The parade of our troops through Paris doubtless fortified the morale of the people to a certain extent, but we all know that eventually something very much more effective would have to be done. While it was important to consider the temporary state of mind of the Allies, yet after all the outcome of the war would depend upon the size of the force we could bring to their aid. To get at the real situation before advising the war department of what we should undertake to do, a thorough study was made of the actual and potential strength on both sides.

The real question was whether the Allies could hold out until we were ready. It was clear that no half-way measure on our part would answer and that Allied hopes lay in American military assistance on a vast scale at the earliest moment.

Cable for 1,000,000 Men.

The Allies thought an American force of 500,000 men the maximum that we could have in France in 1918, but in my opinion that would not be enough to meet the situation. If we could have had half a million fighting men in France in the early spring it would have been a different matter.

But looking ahead it was necessary to allow from 35 to 40 per cent for the services of supply, which would leave out of this number only approximately 300,000 fighting troops. Although this would aid, we could not be content merely to lend a helping hand but must prepare to strike a decisive blow.

While the appearance on the front of any American force was still months away, yet there was little doubt that if we could induce Allied co-operation we should be able to give much greater assistance than they believed possible. Our study having confirmed the correctness of my tentative estimate made on the Baltic, I therefore cabled Washington July 6 as follows:

Plans should contemplate sending over at least 1,000,000 men by next May . . . This estimate would give practically half million men for trenches. Inasmuch as question affects all Allies whose common interests demand that we exert maximum military power consistent with transport problem, suggest early agreement be reached among Allies which would provide requisite transportation. . . . and limit sea transportation to food and military supplies and the exclusion of every kind of luxury as well as other supplies in excess of immediate needs of countries dependent upon overseas supplies.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Now governor of Porto Rico, as he appeared in France in the war days.

The question was, therefore, one of sea transportation, but so far all efforts to get the Allies, especially the British, to consider giving help to bring our men and supplies had been futile. They did not seem to realize that America would be practically negligible from a military standpoint unless they could provide some shipping. Nor did they seem to appreciate that time was a vital factor.

But the spirit of full co-operation among the Allies did not then exist. They seemed to regard the transportation of an American army over-seas as no concern of theirs. This apparent indifference also gave further color to the suspicion that perhaps after all an American army as such was not wanted. The situation from our standpoint was grave and embarrassing for it looked as though it might not be possible for us to save either the Allies or ourselves.

I recall an after-dinner discussion of this problem with Admiral Sims, during which I stated that according to our plans we should eventually need ships, port and rail facilities and personnel to handle 50,000 tons of freight per day from home for the 2,000,000 men we expected to have. It was somewhat of a surprise to find that Sims apparently regarded this as very much of an exaggeration or else just an army joke.

Although I insisted that it was a positive and serious statement based upon our preliminary study, I doubt whether he was convinced until the time came in 1918 when we had that number of men in France and were actually discharging daily and sending to the front over 45,000 tons of munitions and other supplies.

Reveals Situation to Baker.

Reviewing the situation in France I wrote Secretary of War Baker July 9:

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I feel it important that I should write you confidentially something of the general situation in France as it appears from certain facts that have come to me since my arrival in Paris. Sometime before our arrival, as you know, the French army had been badly hammered, so much that its morale dropped to a very low ebb. As a consequence also the people themselves became very much disheartened and gave voice to rather severe criticism of the army management in general.

The result of all this was that Nivelle was replaced by Petain as commander-in-chief.

Dissatisfaction in the army has rather continued to grow and has probably been encouraged by the French civil socialistic element, no doubt influenced by German socialists. It is generally known that several instances of mutiny have occurred among the troops, and that it became necessary recently to execute some of the ring leaders, variously reported to number from 30 to 120.

The socialistic element of the chamber of deputies itself has subjected the army to criticism that still further served to unsettle the minds of the people, and add to the discontent of the army.

The fact is that France is very tired of this war. The common people openly complain of the heavy taxes, and protest that they are being ground down to enrich government contractors, and possibly officials well up in government service. Prices of food are high, so that the general cost of living weighs heavily upon the civilian population. Coal costs from $80 to $90 per ton and the supply is very limited. Complaints from families have their effect on the men in the ranks, so that the fighting ability of the troops may be seriously impaired by their discontent. The army authorities seem to be gravely concerned, as is indicated by the fact that General Petain last week asked me to meet him at the home of a mutual friend for conference.

At this meeting, he told me frankly that affairs were not going well in France, and that unless the government and the people would stand by the army and assist at home, instead of undermining its morale by criticism and fault-finding, he felt something bordering on revolution might result. Such an outcome, he is what I propose to say, if it meets your approval. It will take you about four minutes to read, and me about nine minutes to deliver, but I shall commit it to memory and will do the best that is within me to make the address acceptable.'

"General Pershing took the manuscript, read it carefully, and made no comment. I said to him: 'Do you approve?' and his answer was: 'I would not change a word, Stanton, under any circumstances. I think it is splendid.' And he added at the bottom of the last page of my manuscript, 'O. K. J. J. P.'

"The expression 'Lafayette, we are here!' was the culmination of the peroration of my address, and the original manuscript verifies the statement that it was a part of the address prepared and uttered by me.

"The reception of my address was extremely enthusiastic and seemed so genuine that General Pershing was prevailed upon to take the rostrum and deliver a short address."

Meeting Pershing Gives Big Thrill To Georgia Girl

BY MAINER LEE TOLER.

"I never pass an American girl over here without shaking her hand."

These words, uttered in a deep bass voice, caused me to turn around quickly and find myself standing face to face with General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces. This was my first introduction to this distinguished general. The incident—to me, it was an event—took place early in 1919 on a roadside "somewhere in France," where I was standing ankle deep in mud serving hot coffee from a rolling canteen to hundreds of American doughboys. It occurred in the late afternoon as General Pershing was returning to general headquarters at Chaumont after reviewing the troops of the twenty-ninth division, better known as the "Blue and Gray," of which General Morton was commanding officer.

The memory of that event thrills me even now after 12 years and the American girl to whom General Pershing spoke has become a grown-up woman. At that first meeting with America's highest ranking soldier I seemed to have struck a responsive chord in his great human heart when I acknowledged that to grasp his hand was indeed an honor long hoped for, and added: "But my canteen mate, Mary Jenkins, anticipates it with even more joy."

"Not Miss Mary B. Jenkins, of Wellesley College?" inquired the stalwart commander.

"Yes, it is she of whom I speak," I replied.

Without a moment's hesitation the general requested me—his request was a command—to accompany him to our canteen near-by to meet Miss Jenkins.

With my doughboy buddies gazing in awe-stricken manner at "Georgia," the nickname they had given me, I climbed into the tonneau of the big seven-passenger khaki-colored Cadillac flying the flag of four stars, with the commander of the American expeditionary forces seated by my side. In that brief ten minutes General Pershing and I talked of Miss Jenkins, who had been a classmate of the late Mrs. Pershing, who, as Miss Frances Warren, graduated with the class of 1903 at Wellesley College. I recall with pleasure the simplicity, the cordiality of the general's greeting to his wife's devoted friend—a wife whose memory he cherishes with love and reverence.

It was a gracious gesture of General Pershing to include me in his invitation to Miss Jenkins to dine with his staff the next day. There we met those officers who had stood bravely and loyally beside their chief in trials that perhaps no commander of armies had ever before experienced. I recall on that day meeting Colonel George Marshall, an ever-ready right hand aide to General Pershing, who is now detailed at Fort Benning, Ga.

My next personal contact with General Pershing was the following May in Paris. There I had the pleasure of serving him a real, honest-to-goodness American ice cream soda in a Y. M. C. A. canteen, where, with 24 other American women, I assisted in mixing and serving this typical American drink to several thousand soldiers daily. General Pershing whose headquarters had moved to Paris at that time, stopped by the canteen frequently with his young son, Warren, who came to Europe in the Spring of 1919 to join his father.

My last meeting with General Pershing took place in May, 1930, in Paris where I was attending a convention of the Women's Overseas Service League. He was a guest speaker at the banquet given at the Lutetia hotel. As he spoke to that large group of American women who served as welfare workers in Europe during and after the World War, my thoughts strayed to that eventful day in 1919 when I first met this soldier of soldiers.

Colonel Stanton Explains 'Lafayette, We Are Here!'

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Colonel C. E. Stanton, U. S. A. retired, who now lives in this city, modestly accepts the credit given him by General Pershing in the chapter of the Pershing memoirs to be published in Sunday's issue of The Constitution, as author of that famous phrase, "Lafayette, we are here!"

General Pershing, of course, has said repeatedly that it was not he who uttered those ringing words, but despite his efforts to give Colonel Stanton the credit for them, the story has persisted that Pershing was their author.

"The address containing the phrase was made by me at Picpus cemetery, Paris, July 4, 1917," Colonel Stanton explained. "I have made no attempts at publicity, and at the time I didn't realize that any part of my address would command the widespread attention given it.

"June 28 General Pershing sent for me and said: 'There will be a celebration in Paris July 4, in which the American Expeditionary Forces are expected to take part. The Sons of the American Revolution have an annual custom of placing a wreath upon the tomb of Lafayette. Their orator will be Brand Whitlock, United States minister to Belgium. It is proper that an expression be had on behalf of the American Expeditionary Forces, and I depute you for this duty.'

"I asked the general what he desired me to say, and he remarked: 'You will be the best judge, and it will please me greatly if you acquit yourself with credit.'

"Realizing that the occasion was memorable, that it was America's natal day, that our troops were appearing for the first time in Paris and that much interest was centered in the American forces, I gave much thought in preparation for my address. I submitted the manuscript to General Pershing July 1. 'General,' I said, 'here

Pershing's "Rolling G. H. Q." Often Sprayed By Shrapnel

BY GENE MORGAN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(NANA)—It is after the dinner hour in General John J. Pershing's rolling G. H. Q., somewhere in France. The long table, with its 14 places for host and guests, has been cleared. Now a great map of northern France is spread on the table and the commanding officer of the American expeditionary forces, with several other high officers and French and American aids, bends over the map.

There is a pattering sound on the roof of the dining car, like gentle rainfall. Through the long, ten-car train rushes a slender, mustached officer, ordering window shades and vestibule curtains drawn and lights extinguished. The strategists of the high command, meeting in General Pershing's private dining car, may imagine it is rain they hear. But the younger officer knows that the pattering sound is caused by pieces of air bombs raining on the car.

The G. H. Q. train, carrying the brains of the A. E. F., is under fire in an airplane raid. But the train has been darkened; there are no marks to distinguish it from an ordinary civilian train. Soon it rides safely out of the bombardment. General Pershing, unperturbed, puffs a cigarette; then, with the staff officers, engrossed in their maps of the war front, "carries on!"

Skipper of Rolling G. H. Q.

The foregoing is a vignette from the war memories of a Chicagoan who knew Pershing through 20 months of intimate association. For nearly two years Earl L. Thornton—now a colonel in the United States army reserve, as well as on Governor Emmerson's staff—administers personally to General Pershing's comfort and physical welfare. He was skipper of the rolling G. H. Q., the special train over most of France and Belgium and into Italy and Germany, from Atlantic port to battle line—traveling altogether more than 75,000 miles.

Colonel Thornton, now an executive at the Palmer House, a hotel man for 32 years, was moved to recall his war-time "close-up" of Pershing, the man, as well as Pershing the soldier, by reading the first chapters of the autobiography of America's most distinguished living soldier, now appearing serially in The Constitution.

Fate's shuffle transformed Thornton, a captain of the quartermaster corps newly arrived in France, into major-domo of the traveling headquarters, from which messages daily sent great armies into action. He was ordered to Chaumont, General Pershing's stationary headquarters, in January, 1918. Here he was ordered to organize the train, henceforth officially designated as "the commander-in-chief's field headquarters train."

With his hotel experience and much native energy, Captain Thornton set about his job. Soon the train was ready. One of the cars contained a power plant for lighting the train, as well as telegraph and telephone apparatus.

Then there was the office car, a remodeled "wagon-restaurant," its walls lined with maps. It contained telephones, which could be connected with military lines of communication five minutes after stopping at any station.

In that car the all-important after-dinner conferences were held. The general's own car followed. It contained a bedroom, a dressing room and a library, and also four compartments, which at various times were occupied by Secretary of War Baker, General Dawes, General Petain, Premier Tardieu and other notables.

The rest of the train was made up of sleeping cars and a dining car for accompanying officers; cars for the enlisted personnel, and, finally, an

When Gen. Pershing Said Last Goodbye To Correspondents

BY JULIA COLLIER HARRIS.

General Pershing's story, now running in The Constitution, must necessarily appeal to thousands of readers who, for one reason or another, feel a deep interest in anything that relates to the World War. It carries an unusual interest for me because I was in Paris during the war at the time of the peace conference and when General Pershing departed for America with the last of our troops.

Just before the latter event, the American newspaper correspondents were invited by General Pershing to a reception at his home on the left side of the Seine, in the Rue de Varennes. My husband was at this time Paris correspondent for the New York Herald and I was doing work for the New York Herald Syndicate; so we were among those who gathered on the emerald-green lawn behind the high stone walls that enclosed the stately old residence which had been put at the disposal of the American commander-in-chief. First impressions of famous people, even though they may not always be the most reliable ones, are at least the most vivid, so I quote from my diary of those days my brief account of this gathering:

"Around July 29 (1919) we went with other correspondents to General Pershing's home, Rue de Varennes. The house and grounds are stately and beautiful. We sat for ten minutes or so on the terrace overlooking the garden, waiting for the general to appear. He came in, seated himself at a table facing us, and gave us an opportunity for a last interview.

"The main statement in this interview was that he hoped the bodies of American soldiers who fell in France would not be removed from that country. He then explained in detail how they would be cared for by France, if left.

"The general is a handsome man, very soldierly, but without much personal magnetism. He appears at first glance to be unusually self-contained, even cold—he does not 'go out' to people. However, this may not be his real nature. The great sorrow he had in losing his wife and children may account for his reserve. He is said to be, in reality, most kind and human. On the other hand, he is said to be not particularly popular among his men because of his rigid disciplinary measures. However, in war times, what else could one expect?

"Our photographs were taken in a group and I had the honor of standing next to General Pershing. After the reception we all went to the Vincennes parade grounds for the review. In the car with us were Mrs. Wilson, of the Baltimore News; Mr. Benham, of the World and a member of the Associated Press. General Pershing stood at salute while the American regiment passed in review. The French gave our men a great ovation. It was a very fine sight."

Looking at the photograph of General Pershing taken at that time I am struck with the close resemblance to current photographs of General Pershing. In the eleven years which have passed, the general has changed very little. He is still the handsome, soldierly figure that welcomed the American correspondents at his Paris home on a July afternoon in 1919.

Editor's Note: The group photograph referred to in the foregoing article is printed today in Page One of The Constitution's Gravure Pictorial section.

How Pershing Met Crisis in Offensive Of Meuse-Argonne

BY COL. GEORGE C. MARSHALL.
Assistant Commandant, Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga.

Editor's Note—The accompanying article on General John J. Pershing as commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Forces was written by Colonel George C. Marshall, assistant commandant at Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga. Colonel Marshall sailed for France in the first convoy of the First Division, remaining with that division until July 18, when he was transferred to general headquarters for one month to work on plans for the St. Mihiel offensive. After joining the First Army for that operation he became chief of operations for the First Army during the Meuse-Argonne campaign, later becoming chief of staff of an army corps. When the corps was about to be demobilized in the spring of 1919 Colonel Marshall became aide to General Pershing, a post which he retained until his departure for China in 1924. When the marriage of Colonel Marshall and Mrs. Katherine Tupper Browne took place in Baltimore last October, General Pershing acted as his former aide's best man.

General Pershing's memoirs should not only provide vividly interesting reading for America but prove an invaluable document for future reference in the development of our national defense. Inevitably there will be comparisons with the memoirs of General Grant and the recent biographies of conspicuous World War figures. In several respects the basis for General Pershing's story differs from all others: He was 3,000 miles from home, the commander-in-chief of our field armies for the entire period of their participation in the war; he not only fought his armies, he had first to organize and train them and he had to create at the ports and across central France a complete supply, transportation and hospital service, as well as an overseas war department. He was at one and the same time a diplomat, a statesman and a military commander. Fortunately for the world, the war ended so abruptly that few had opportunity to realize the wonder of his achievement.

In March, 1918, there was one American division, of 27,000 men, ready for battle. Four months later 300,000 of our soldiers were fighting in the Marne salient, and within seven months 29 combat divisions, six army corps, and two field armies, approximately a million men, were advancing against the enemy. In rear of this vast force another million of men and training, or operating a colossal supply service and preparing to serve three million in the spring and four million by the summer of 1919.

General Pershing's story will shed a direct light on our desperate struggle to develop America's military power and carry it to the battlefield, but he will probably gain little by its publication. His greatest moments will either not be mentioned or touched upon so modestly that few will appreciate the perfection of his leadership in the great crises of our participation in the war.

His first estimate of the situation in July, 1917, and his declaration of the magnitude of the effort America must make, in striking contrast with the narrow view of the war department, was a magnificent stride toward eventual success. His decision to train our troops for open warfare, rather than indoctrinate them with the paralysis of trench warfare methods, required rare courage. It opposed the views of every great allied leader then in command. He dared to differ radically with the unanimous view of men who had three years of war experience. That he was not early relieved, due to a deluge of criticisms and attacks on him, was a tribute to the never-failing support of President Wilson and Mr. Baker. The great German offensive of March, 1918, came in time, to prove him right, as it proved the others to be wrong.

General Pershing was engaged in a continuous struggle with our allies over the disposition of the American troops. All wanted our fresh, vigorous men to bolster up thinned and war-worn ranks. None felt that we could create the vast and complicated mechanism of a great field army in time to save the situation. With tact and tolerance and with occasional compromises, he met the prolonged efforts of war councils, the leading statesman of Europe and the allied commanders to bend him from his purpose. And this despite his embarrassment in having to depend on them for cannon, aeroplanes, artillery ammunition, tanks and large quantities of supplies. Yet when the shock of the German assault precipitated the crisis in March of 1918, General Pershing rose to the occasion and voluntarily, in a few sentences renounced all his slowly won concessions toward the formation of an American army, offering his troops to be scattered along the front from Belgium to Switzerland. Months elapsed before he was able to reconstruct the shattered program for the development of our army.

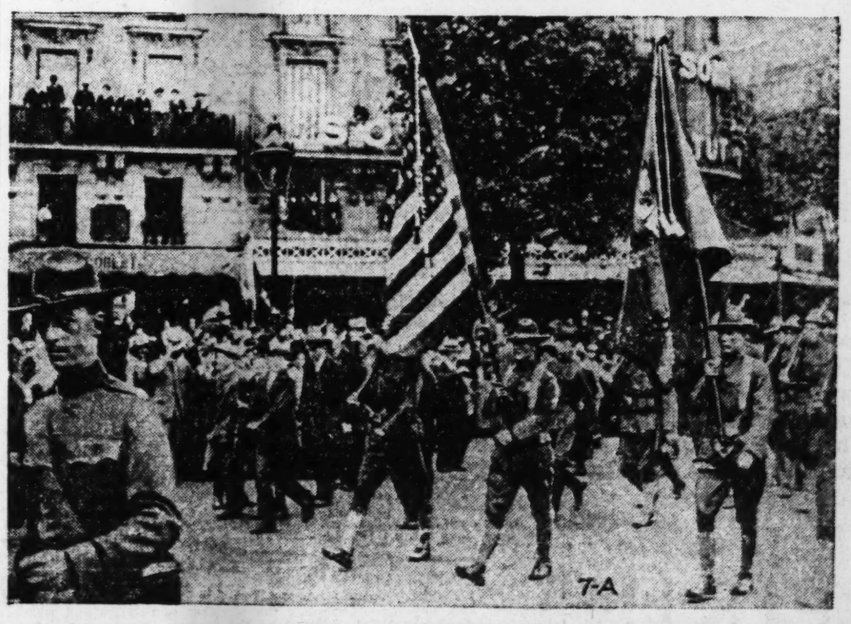

The preceding incidents concern matters not directly involving General Pershing with leadership in battle. But in October, 1918, came the critical moment for the American expeditionary forces. The battle of the Meuse-Argonne had raged for two weeks. Necessity had compelled the employment of partially trained divisions previously inexperienced in battle. Casualties were heavy, daily advances negligible, roads all but impassable, troops exhausted and the weather cold, wet and gloomy. Pessimism was widespread and few officers could see any light in the sky. Gratuitous criticisms from our allies, desirous of obtaining American troops, poured in. American officers of high rank implored their chief to break off the battle.

Out of this forest of gloom and obstacles General Pershing strode, the great leader. Determination written clear in his face, in the very tones of his voice and in his confident bearing, nothing daunting him, he drove, led and cheered the army on to attack after attack. The American soldier responded and finally, on November 1, the army lunged forward in a general assault which broke through the hostile positions and, with increasing momentum, plunged ahead until the heights overlooking Sedan were reached on the morning of November 7.

Few are familiar with this phase of the Meuse-Argonne operation. Public interest was centered on the final exchange of notes between President Wilson and the crumbling German government. Everyone promptly forgot the pessimism, the fears and the weak pleadings of those October days. All jubilated over the battle won, but few realized when and how it was won.

So far as an individual can be said to have decisively influenced the course of such a great operation, General Pershing won the Meuse-Argonne battle on its blackest day at its gloomiest moment. Washington at Trenton and Valley Forge, Grant and his great adversary, Lee, in the wilderness, displayed this rare quality of leadership which triumphs over adversity and difficulties in war.

War Department May Revive Order Washington Founded

BY REX COLLIER.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The "Order of the Purple Heart," a decoration for military gallantry founded by George Washington during the revolutionary war, may be revived by the war department as a special recognition of meritorious service not otherwise eligible for reward.

General Pershing's mention in his war story of the need for such a special decoration has brought to light a recommendation of the general staff that the revolutionary medal be restored to the list of government decorations for conspicuous service.

"A just regard for highly meritorious services requires recognition of signal accomplishments both in peace and in war," a statement from the office of the chief of staff points out.

"While various decorations have been provided for heroism and distinguished service in war, there is no adequate way of rewarding those who perform acts or service in peace and in war, which, while highly meritorious, are not included in the categories contemplated in the law for providing for the award of decorations.

"Washington first recognized this need and established the military medal to be awarded for conspicuous fidelity. He created as a decoration the Order of the Purple Heart as an award for military merit. His order has never been revoked, but it has not been observed since his own period as commander-in-chief. A recommendation has been made by the general staff for its restoration."

Washington's Order.

The general staff has a copy of Washington's general order establishing the decoration. It is dated August 7, 1782, and reads:

"The general, ever desirous to cherish a virtuous ambition in his soldiers, as well as to foster and encourage every species of military merit, directs that whenever any singularly meritorious action is performed, the author of it shall be permitted to wear on his facings over the left breast, the figure of a heart in purple cloth or silk, edged with narrow lace or binding. Not only instances of unusual gallantry, but also of extraordinary fidelity and essential service in any way shall meet with a due reward.

"Before this favor can be conferred on any man, the particular fact, or facts, on which it is to be grounded must be set forth to the commander-in-chief accompanied with certificates from the commanding officers of the regiment and brigade to which the candidate for reward belonged, or

Atlanta's passenger-hopping gentry, ordinarily a not ungenial group of individuals, is likely to be quite gloomy this afternoon, what with a nice parachute jump scheduled for the airport visitors and pouring rain as the alluring menu to be dished up by our weather person, Emmett Plunkett, whose skill as a 'chute performer is surpassed only by his artistry on the harmonica, commonly called the mouth-organ, is scheduled for the feature event this afternoon, and it will take place in the neighborhood of 3:30 o'clock if meteorological conditions are even half-way reasonable. Visitors are requested to stick around a while after the jump is concluded and taste some of the pleasures to be derived from a hop aloft.

After attracting a tremendous amount of interest during its two-day stay here, the Pitcairn Autogiro, in charge of James G. Ray, chief test pilot, departed at noon Saturday for Spartanburg, S. C., from which point the flight to Philadelphia will be resumed today. New bolts were required for the rotor blades and Ray decided to have the work done at Spartanburg Saturday night.

Fully 400 open-minded visitors were at Candler field yesterday morning to look at the strange craft, and though they were given ample opportunity to inspect the ship on the ground, they were shown only one demonstration flight, C. H. Dolan, operations manager for Eastern Air Transport, being the passenger on the single hop taken. There seemed to be a good deal of misconception and speculation surrounding the operation of the rotor system. Started by a power take-off from the autogiro's Whirlwind engine, the blades, from that point, operate independent and rotate under the pressure of the wind produced by the movement of the machine. The blades, which revolve at speeds varying from 120 to 150 r. p. m., furnish 80 per cent of the lift at high forward speed and 100 per cent in vertical descent, its manufacturers assert.

Happening along at Greensboro just after a would-be Eastern Air Transport passenger, bound for Atlanta, had been turned down because of lack of space in a Kingbird, James A. Perry, Jr., in a Curtiss-Wright Flying Service Robin, picked up the disappointed wayfarer and brought him into Atlanta. Perry was returning to Candler field after a charter trip to Washington Thursday. This is an indication of the co-operation given transport companies by all operators at the airport.

Miss Ruth Stewart, St. Louis aviatrix, whose Gipsy Moth was damaged during an attempted night landing a few weeks ago and then put back into shape by Curtiss-Wright mechanics, took off shortly before noon Saturday for Tampa, where she will watch the air meet to take place there Monday and then fly along to the few remaining points to be visited by the Florida Air Tour planes. She is carrying J. T. Wagner, also of St. Louis, as a passenger.

Possibility of a repetition of Miss Stewart's unfortunate accident—assuming that it was chargeable entirely to the field's shortcomings—now seems obviated with the action of the council finance committee in placing the sum of $6,500 in the January money sheet for electrical work at the airport. Joe Berman, new chairman of the borough aviation committee, is to be congratulated for his insistence that Atlanta find the money to revise a system which is a definite hazard to those pilots who are forced to land after nightfall. The money—if council sees fit Monday to accept the finance sheet as drawn—will provide the transfer of the airport floodlight to some point along the southern side of the field; the revision of the boundary light system, such as it is, and the placing of day markers and the installation of a flashing code beacon in accordance with department of commerce requirements.

A real flying family, consisting of Captain George R. Hutchinson, his wife, Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson; their two daughters, Janet Lee and Blanche Kathryn, age 4 and 7, respectively, accompanied by their two-month-old pet African lioness, will arrive in Atlanta Monday, January 26, on a record 22-day trip during which they will call on the governors of every state in the Union. Candler field is one of the final stops to be made, the tour to end on January 28 at New York city.

Flying in a new Stinson Junior, the Hutchinsons started their long journey at Washington on January 3, armed with President Hoover's signature on a scroll upon which is inscribed a message to America—"The Spirit of '31." Captain Hutchinson plans to have the governor of every state in the union affix his signature below that of the president and become the proud possessor of probably the only document of its type in existence.

Georgia is 'way down in the list of licensed pilots as of January 1, 1931, according to statistics just issued by the department of commerce, aeronautics branch. With 15,280 pilots holding department licenses, this state has only 71, according to the figures. Georgia has 40 licensed airplanes, 7,354 being the total for the entire country. The totals show substantial increases since January 1, 1930, according to Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce, on which date there were 10,215 licensed pilots and 6,685 licensed aircraft. The number of unlicensed aircraft decreased during the same period from 3,155 to 2,464.

Among the 15,280 persons who held pilots' licenses at the beginning of the new year were 385 women, of whom 35 were transport, 50 limited commercial and 297 private pilots. The list of licensed mechanics includes five women. The state of New York, the study shows, had the greatest number of licensed planes, with 1,022; California was second with 1,013, and Illinois third with 485. California led the pilot list, with 2,852; New York was second with 1,641, and Illinois third with 931. In all there were 5,792 transport, 1,957 limited commercial, 98 industrial and 7,433 private pilots on January 1, 1931.

THERE IS NO PANIC, THORPE DECLARES

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A caustic indictment of "depression talkers" was delivered here today by Merle Thorpe, editor of The Nation's Business, who said "America has been depressed, dejected and gloomy just because everybody keeps saying that there is a depression and every one has come to believe it even if the facts belie the thoughts."

"This business depression is just a state of mind and the sooner the individuals realize that the future of the nation is in their hands and that depression is an individual ailment which has become nationwide, the depression will end," he declared.

In support of his statements he asserted that "more automobiles were sold last year than ever before in history;" that "46,800,000 freight cars were unloaded in 1930, the largest figure in history;" that "the shoe companies maintained their average sales of two and a half shoes per person," and that "the total increase in bank deposits was something like $52,000,000 and life insurance, another form of saving, showed $18,500,000,000 worth of business—also a new record.

Mr. Thorpe averred that he had recently gone to his tailor to buy his customary two suits for the year, but that "the tailor so impressed me with his talk of hard times that I became alarmed myself and bought only one suit."

He said that "recovery from this state of mind depends on the individual."

In talking with newspapermen, Mr. Thorpe also directed criticism at "the government entering into business competition," politics in general, and said that he had noted a "positive trend towards socialism," in the country at large.

BANKING CHIEF SEES BETTER TIMES

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Pointing to "hopeful signs of renewed industrial and commercial activities throughout the country today," Rome C. Stephenson, of South Bend, Ind., president of the American Bankers' Association, here tonight for a local bankers' banquet, predicted that "it will not be many months before business is back to normal."

"There is no doubt whatever that the low point in our economic depression was passed in December and business now is gradually improving throughout the country," declared Mr. Stephenson in discussing the situation.

"Banks throughout the country are in an excellent and strong financial position and there is no doubt that they will emerge from this depression stronger and better qualified to serve their patrons than ever before."

Townsfolk Watch Fire While Bank Is Robbed

ROCKTON, Ill., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Most of the folks here are fire fans. It was not surprising, therefore, when most of the townspeople went to see the Rockton grade school burn, that it was convenient for two men to walk into the state bank, take $2,000, and leave while the fire was still burning.

Hog Yields Millions Of Dime Sandwiches

CARLISLE, Pa., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Picture a ham weighing 105 pounds and a slab of bacon tipping the scales at 42 pounds. These were the weights of only two of a number of pieces of pork which "Huntsdale Rainbow," a pure-bred Poland China hog, yielded when butchered of Newville, near here.

NEW SCHOOL BUDGET HIT BY MRS. NELSON

Sutton Also Attacked in Statement Made by Board Member.

Declaring that the school budget calling for expenditures of $3,722,000 for 1931 should not have been presented to the finance committee for consideration because it had not been approved by the board of education in regular session, Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, commissioner from the sixth ward, issued a statement Saturday flaying the automatic increases for the instructional staff.

She also criticized Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, for alleged failure to provide a detailed allocation of the budget, which she held was necessary in order that members of the board of education might know where the money is to go.

The board received the budget formally at its reorganization meeting, January 2, but deferred consideration pending allocation of school funds by council, which is slated for Monday.

Text of Mrs. Nelson's statement follows:

"The school budget presented to the finance committee of city council last week had no right to be submitted to them, because it had not been examined by the board of education in session nor approved by them. At the December meeting of the board Mr. Sutton stated in substance that he would not go into details as he had heretofore. Mr. Noland at once said that he must have details. I said the same. But Mr. Sutton ignored these just requests.

"In 1930, the wildest budget was presented to us that I had ever seen in all my public life. I pointed out many extravagant features. Some of the most important principals and P.-T. A. officials agreed with me. Since a board member had the audacity to object to certain items in his budget, Mr. Sutton determined that this year the budget should be so vague that we could not understand it clearly, hence could not point out defects. His argument was that it might cost $500 to give details to the board of education.

"I am at a loss to know why it should cost so much. But Mr. Sutton had the principals make their requests in detail and he proposed salary raises, yet thought it unreasonable to give details to the board, so we could know just what we are voting for. Even if it cost $500, that would be a trifle compared to what we might save from that budget. Last year Mr. Ritchie sent tentative budgets for each ward to its commissioner, informing us that there was no prospect for hardly any of the items enumerated.

"I therefore asked my principals to list the necessities, so we might at least work for them. Three of my schools then voluntarily agreed to cut out something over $12,000. Every one of these items thus eliminated had been restored to the budget, when it was presented to council!

"In the 1931 budget Mr. Sutton states, 'The morale of our teachers and principals is of a very high order. This has been brought about by the board of education having put into operation a salary schedule, etc.' This implies that the teachers' morale is not caused by fine character, but by a certain salary. This is very uncomplimentary to principals and teachers, and is absolutely untrue. The morale of our principals and teachers was just as high before the salary raise, as it now is. We cannot depend upon any of the Sutton statements regarding the low cost per pupil in our schools, because we cannot depend upon anything he says.

"Mr. Gaines states that the average pay for teachers in the elementary schools is $143.05—for principals from $212.50 to $290 a month. Junior and senior high teachers is from $131 to $231. The average high school salary is $192.69. The salary for junior and senior high principals is from $230.83 to $352.67 per month. No income tax on these salaries, teaching five hours a day, five days a week, three-month vacation on full pay. In addition, there is the automatic increases. Which means that a teacher or principal can live at home with his family and attend a college a few miles from Atlanta for a few weeks and then receive a degree. Then his salary jumps.

"One year Mr. Sutton stated at a board meeting that the automatic increase would be $166. I made a memorandum of the amount. Mr. Ritchie informs me, in answer to a request, that the automatic increase for September through December, 1930, was $29.997.88 and that this may be the estimate for 1931—which makes the sum total for 1931 $119,-991.52.

"Atlanta's financial situation does not seem to be nearly as bad as that of various other cities. Yet we know what it is here. The salary of educated men of family cut to $100 a month. Many thousands out of any job, not only workmen, but in some cases men who have spent thousands on their education, dropped through no fault of theirs. Young couples straining to pay their instalments on homes, many going under the hammer. Yet it is proposed to increase a necessity like water rates! That increase would in too many cases cut off the nickels and dimes children take to Sunday school, lessen their amount of milk at home, etc. Why should we pay teachers $120,000 per year to receive a degree? Why shouldn't they possess sufficient knowledge to do their work when they are appointed? Our average is 1,000 applicants on the waiting list. Plenty to choose from. Then with superintendents, three assistant superintendents and supervisors galore, it would seem that the steps of these teachers might be guided in right paths without bleeding taxpayers a second time. We have not the slightest evidence that these expensive automatic increases make teachers a particle better. To have satisfactory teachers they must possess a thorough education in the fundamentals, common sense, patience, knowledge of human nature, a sensible curriculum, and time enough to do justice to that curriculum. Many teachers and P.-T. A. members declare that they do not possess these things now. There is a widespread belief among those close to our schools that the fundamentals of education are not as well taught in our schools now as they were 40 years ago, the trouble being that there are too many fads, too many interruptions, teachers cannot do their best.

"Cut off every dollar of automatic increase. Give us money for necessary repairs on schools. This would help children and give idle men jobs. Investigate our schools. You can give a better education on less money."

NO PAIN!

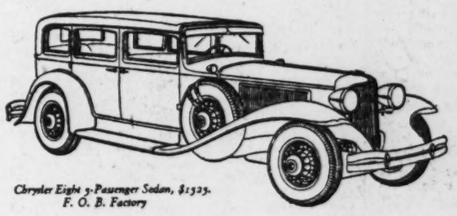

There is one form of relief from pain that is always permissable. "Don't let the patient suffer," says the doctor, "for pain retards recovery." The nurse gives Bayer Aspirin knowing it can do no harm, only good. The patient takes it gladly, because it means immediate relief. Men and women use these tablets freely to spare themselves needless pain.

Do you let Bayer Aspirin help you in all the ways it might? To end a headache. Break-up a cold, soothe a sore throat. Ease the misery from neuralgia or neuritis. Relieve the worst case of rheumatism; sciatica; lumbago. Quiet a grumbling tooth, or any other nagging pain. And Bayer Aspirin is the standby of many women at times when they would suffer severely without its aid!

Get genuine aspirin. The box should say Bayer. The tablet stamped Bayer does not depress the heart. When you take Bayer Aspirin you know what you are taking. What do you know about an imitation, except that it costs a few cents less?

Mayor's Committee To Launch Big Drive to Assist Jobless

Better Business Group Seeks To Create Work. Campaign in Newspapers, Radio and Pulpit.

Appeal to the public to help create work for Atlanta's unemployed—the thousands of breadwinners who are seeking the means to support their families—will be made in a broad campaign by the Atlanta Better Business committee beginning Monday.

Through newspapers, by radio, posters of every size, pulpit and forum messages and window displays, the appeal will ask Atlantans to help provide work. The posters as prepared Saturday bear this request:

"Clean Up, Paint Up—Repair, Rebuild—Now!"

"The Need is Great—the Cost is Low!"

The appeal is accompanied by a statement by Mayor Key, who urges a response not only as a means of providing work for the unemployed but also of developing new aspects of cleanliness and beauty here.

Most Important Item.

The better business committee has planned to make this campaign to create work one of the most important items of its activity. The committee, which has been in operation since December 8 for relief of the unemployment situation, presented Saturday a review of its work in the existing emergency, showing service to 4,294 cases of need caused by unemployment in the period of December 8 to January 10.

The number of cases involved 6,999 persons, and were served at cost of $6,282.28.

Increasing need of service in the existing emergency was revealed in the item of the report that relief was necessary for 1,346 persons in the single week ending January 10, and that the cost has mounted to $2,500 a week. Funds for the work have been raised from private sources and the report asserted that Atlantans of large and moderate means alike have given "with generosity and spirit in keeping with the finest traditions of the city."

The report explained that the Atlanta Better Business committee, organized of representative citizens in line with President Hoover's national program of unemployment relief, perceiving that the task was one of social service and human problems, decided to utilize the city's established social welfare agencies, which are those maintained through the Community Chest, rather than set up a new machinery.

To Avoid Duplication.

The policy in this respect, it was explained, was to avoid duplication of effort and money and to make use of an organization of proved effectiveness in dealing with human need. However, emergency headquarters were established at 85 Poplar street, opposite the postoffice building, as a means of speeding up the special relief needed in unemployment cases and of being in direct touch with the Community Employment Service in the same building.

Objects of the emergency work were outlined as to relieve the established social service agencies of the unusual burden which conditions placed upon them, to register all cases of need growing out of unemployment, to ascertain the financial situation and necessities in each case, and to provide a machinery for immediate relief.

The review of the work explained that although the Community Chest campaign of last fall was successful, the funds subscribed then were adequate only for the regular program of human helpfulness by the 38 Chest agencies, and that the unemployment situation was an emergency not anticipated nor provided for in the routine of necessary social service.

As indicating the necessity and extent of the employment relief program, the report asserted that of 145,305 workers in Atlanta, a total of 14,000, or approximately 1 in 10, is jobless. Of this number, according to the report, 6,000 to 8,000 are breadwinners with dependents looking to them for food, shelter and the necessities of existence.

The normal number of unemployed in Atlanta was estimated in the report at 3,000. It was said 7,342 applications for work have been filed at the Community Employment Service, the bureau maintained through the Chest.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

PERSHING FEARED FRENCH REVOLT

said, would permit the Germans to dictate the terms of peace instead of the Allies. He, of course, feels that our entering the war has brought courage to the nation, but realizing as he does that we shall not be in a position to render any material assistance before next spring, he thinks that, in addition to that, some outside pressure might be brought that would check political intrigue among government officials and prevent a further loss of confidence among the people at large.

As you know, of course, politics ordinarily plays a very important part in every act of the average French public official and they are inclined to over-play the game. Of course anything like a revolution in France at this time might not be easy to stop, and the final burden of the war might thus fall upon our shoulders. Realizing the low spirits of the people, I have taken advantage of an occasional opportunity, without appearing to meddle and without talking too much, to speak encouragingly of the splendid stamina of the French people and of the army, and have endeavored to inspire confidence among them in their military organization and its commander.

With this same idea of bolstering up French morale, General Petain has issued a public statement setting forth the reasons why the French are fighting. Before giving it out, he asked me if I would do something to back it up after it was published. I am enclosing a translation of General Petain's article, and my brief comment published the following day.

General Petain believes that perhaps there may come a time when President Wilson, for whom the whole French nation have a sublime admiration, might take some action through the French ambassador at Washington, or otherwise, that would stiffen or maybe frighten the French government into a full realization of the seriousness of these matters and of their responsibility in the premises. By this I mean the civil end of the government in whose hands rests so much obligation to support their army commanders.

Disagreed With Ambassador.

On the other side of general view of the subject, our ambassador here, (Mr. Sharp) holds the opinion, which I have gained from general conversation with him, that all factions of France are working together harmoniously. I should add also that many others hold this same view. Of course they all know of the general complaints and all that, but they do not regard them as indicating anything serious. I have the very highest regard for Mr. Sharp and for what he says, and what I say is in no way a criticism of him. He is in every sense a high-minded and, I believe, efficient and conscientious official. But I am writing in order that you may also have the viewpoint of the French commander-in-chief, whose views I could not safely mention to anyone else.

It must be stated that our Fourth of July celebration with troops participating has stirred all France; also that yesterday the government and the chamber of deputies seem to have had a very satisfactory understanding, and the French people are in much better spirits than when General Petain made the above comments on the situation. General Petain, himself, now says that the morale of the army has improved lately. So for the present things look better.

My own opinion is that the army, as it stands today, can hold on until spring against any probable effort of the enemy, but that poverty and discontent, magnified by the socialistic press, especially should the government fail to continue to back up the army, may so dishearten the people and the army that the latter will lose its morale and disaster will follow.

I shall do everything consistent with my position to encourage and hearten both people and soldiery. With the Red Cross now under an organization that is working practically under my very general control, much can be done to cheer up the soldier in the trenches and to help his family at home during the coming winter. The Y. M. C. A. is also working with us in its own field toward the same end.

I should very much prefer that all this be held as entirely confidential in so far as my conference with General Petain and my remarks about the ambassador are concerned. For General Petain's sake, as well as my own, no suggestion or recommendation should be made connecting him or me in any way with whatever course that may be considered advisable, should future events seem to suggest action along the lines indicated.

I trust, Mr. Secretary, that you will understand that I am writing you only because I feel that in no other way could I place before you a view of the situation and its possibilities. In conclusion, I would add that I have the utmost confidence in General Petain, and believe that he is a loyal patriot, whose sole aim is to serve and save France.

With high personal esteem and respect, I remain

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) JOHN J. PERSHING.

automobile car which carried the two big autos which enabled Pershing to get as close to the front as the army's head could be permitted to go.

Breakfast at 7:30.

Aboard his rattling headquarters General Pershing's business day began promptly at 7:30 a. m. He lived in what doughboys would have considered luxury. Let Colonel Thornton tell about it.

"The general's breakfast mostly consisted of fruit, wheat cakes, boiled eggs, toast and tea. Breakfast aboard the train was informal—that is, the guests might come in singly, eat and depart at will. The general was tolerably fond of wheat cakes—probably an old Missouri custom. After some difficulty, we succeeded in teaching the French chef how to put the chief in good humor for the tremendous work of the day.

"Luncheon and dinner were formal affairs. There were place cards, and each man was seated according to rank. Room for fourteen at that long table and no more. The overflow, if there happened to be any, ate with the aids in their mess car. Talk about 'high ranking' stuff! More than once a brigadier general, a guest aboard the special, found that there were so many excellencies ahead of him at the chief's table that he had to be content with a place with mere colonels, majors and captains!

"But the general's breakfast was a thing of great importance, in spite of its informality. We never had to confess a shortage of boiled eggs. More than once we sent out a foraging expedition through the countryside, to get one 'oof' here, two more there.

"The doughboy out in the rain probably didn't dream that General Pershing faced the rain, too. During the Meuse-Argonne drive, our special was parked in the shelter of a grove near the village of Souilly. All about us the terrain was shelled day and night, but for some reason the enemy artillery and aircraft never spotted our train.

"There, no matter how hard it was raining, General Pershing would step out of his car and walk up and down the train's length for an hour or more, selecting one of his aids as a walking companion. Although I was many years his junior it taxed my endurance to keep up with him on these vigorous hikes. The walk finished, he would return to his office car, tackling reports, messages and orders with renewed vigor. Physically and mentally he seemed almost tireless."

Several times, while making inspections of various parts of the front, or while on the way to pay official calls to allied chieftains, the general's train came under fire of long-range artillery or of airplanes.

Many Narrow Escapes.

"During the Big German push in 1918 Secretary Baker was a guest aboard the train," Colonel Thornton recalled. "At Amiens a great crowd stood in the railroad yards watching the railroad station. 'Find out,' said Mr. Baker to Count De Chambrun, of the general's staff, 'what all the excitement is about.' 'Mr. Secretary,' the count replied, 'the enemy is shelling the railroad station.' In another moment we were rolling past the station, with its shattered roof and broken windows.

"Whenever the general visited England the special train would wait for him in Boulogne. There we had narrow escapes from several air bombardments. Another time, when the general was bound on an official visit to the king and queen of Belgium, the train ran into a heavy shower of metal near Dunkerque. Pershing was forced to transfer secretly to a motor car and proceed by an indirect route, while the train backed out of the danger zone.

"The lighter side of General Pershing's character, in contrast with his austere dignity during trying days, scarcely made itself manifest until after the armistice. Then his young son, Warren, came to join us and the atmosphere brightened. Once, at Le Mans, the general ran a foot race with his boy the length of the train. I've forgotten who was victor, but the general came in joyous and panting. When we crossed over into Germany young Warren, in his little suit of khaki, and with a toy gun, mounted guard over his father's car, as did demure little Rene, daughter of Captain the Count De Marenches. One day a civilian managed to get on the train but was quickly ejected via an officer's boot. After that Warren kept a bayonet on his toy rifle.

"Throughout 20 months of service with General Pershing I did not receive a cross word from him or anything approaching a reprimand. He was kind and considerate, but quickly moved to wrath by failure to carry out his orders precisely."

Colonel Thornton's war decorations include those of officer of the Order of the Crown of Belgium, Defenders of Verdun, France; Officer de l'Instruction Publique, France, and Knight of the Order of Saints Maurice and Lazarus, Italy. The "souvenir" he would have prized most highly was left behind. That was General Pershing's old "wagon-restaurant," sprayed by rain, hail and shrapnel, where the war was won over maps—and where little Warren mounted guard with his toy rifle.

STOCK LAND BANKS BILL IS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The senate banking committee today approved the house bill to liberalize the law regarding mergers of joint stock land banks.

No action was taken on the Harrison bill to extend the time for mortgage payments to federal land banks.

Testimony in favor of both bills was presented to the committee yesterday, but members of the farm loan board opposed the Harrison bill.

The bill which was reported would allow one joint stock land bank to purchase another which had gone into receivership and to operate in the state in which the second was located.

N. Y. MAGISTRATE DENIES HE'LL QUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud, one of whose decisions is under scrutiny in an inquiry into magistrates' courts, telegraphed the New York Sun today from Del Ray Beach, Fla., denying he intended to resign.

At a recent hearing a young businesswoman whose real name was concealed charged she was "framed" by vice squad men and found guilty by Magistrate Renaud on the testimony of a single policeman, although her husband and four character witnesses testified for her.

Clothing materials which normally go to foreign and island chapters were turned over by the District of Columbia chapter to the National Red Cross to be made into garments for drouth sufferers.

WASHINGTON ORDER MAY BE REINVESTED

other incontestable proofs, and upon granting it, the name and regiment of the person with the action so certified are to be enrolled in the book of merit which will be kept at the orderly office. Men who have merited this last distinction to be suffered to pass all guards and sentinels which officers are permitted to do.

"The road to glory in a patriot army and a free country is thus open to all—this order is also to have retrospect to the earliest stages of the war, and to be considered as a permanent one."

Apparently this badge was bestowed but rarely during the revolution. So far as existing records show, only three American soldiers ever received it. They were Sergeant Daniel Bissel, of the second Connecticut regiment, Continental army; Sergeant Daniel Brown, of the fifth Connecticut regiment, Continental army, and Sergeant Elijah Churchill, of the second Continental dragoons, also a Connecticut organization.

From papers now in the library of congress and elsewhere the story of the exploits of these early heroes has been reconstructed by John C. Fitzpatrick, an authority on Washingtoniana, now with the George Washington bicentennial commission but formerly assistant chief of the manuscript division of the library of congress.

Sergeants Churchill and Brown were decorated for heroism in action, while Sergeant Bissel won his award for daring and efficiency as a spy.

Sergeant Churchill's citation, dated May 1, 1783, and signed by Lieutenant Colonel Jonathan Trumbull, Jr., is among the Washington papers in the library of congress. It states that "Whereas it hath ever been an established maxim in the American service that the road to glory was open to all, that honorary rewards and distinctions were the greatest stimuli to virtuous actions and that distinguished merit should not pass unnoticed or unrewarded; and, whereas a board of officers . . . have reported in the words following: 'That Sergeant Churchill, of the second regiment of light dragoons, in the several enterprises against Fort St. George and Fort Slongo on Long Island, in their opinion acted a very conspicuous and singularly meritorious part; that at the head of each body of attack he not only acquitted himself with great gallantry, firmness and address, but that the surprise in one instance and the success of the attack in the other, proceeded in a considerable degree from his conduct and management' now therefore, know ye that the aforesaid Sergeant Elijah Churchill hath fully and truly deserved and hath been properly invested with the honorary badge of military merit, and is hereby authorized and entitled to pass and repass all guards and military posts as fully and amply as any commissioned officer whatsoever; and is hereby further recommended to that favorable notice that a brave and faithful soldier deserves from his countrymen."

Forlorn Hope.

The certificate in Sergeant Brown's case recited that "in the assault of the enemy's left redoubt at Yorktown, in Virginia, on the evening of October 14, 1781, he conducted a forlorn hope with gre... bravery, propriety and deliberate firmness, and that his general character appears unexceptional."

Mr. Fitzpatrick explains that a "forlorn hope" was the nickname for a dangerous movement of an advance party, the hazards of which were "so great that the attackers can have but a forlorn hope of coming through alive." Sergeant Brown's party was the first to dash forward in the face of withering fire, and the audacity of the attackers so confused the British that the redoubt was captured in less than 15 minutes of fighting.

Sergeant Bissel was honored by General Washington for a daring adventure inside the British lines, in quest of information for the American forces. An entry in Washington's general orders, dated June 8, 1783, at Newburgh, says:

"Sergeant Bissel, of the Second Connecticut regiment, having performed some important services within the immediate knowledge of the commander-in-chief, in which the fidelity, perseverance and good sense of the said Sergeant Bissel were conspicuously manifested; it is therefore ordered that he be honored with the badge of merit. He will call at headquarters on Tuesday next for the insignia and certficate to which he is hereby entitled."

The first board to consider candidates for the Purple Heart was appointed by General Washington in 1782. A general order directed that: "The inspector general (or in his absence the inspector of the northern army), the adjutant general, Brigadier General Huntington, Colonel Greaton and Lieutenant Colonel Barber or any three of them are appointed a board to examine the pretentions of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers who are candidates for the badge of merit; the board will report their opinion to the commander-in-chief. All certificates and recommendations will be lodged with the adjutant general, who will occasionally summon the board to assemble."

General Washington's order establishing the order of the Purple Heart was a "permanent" one. Since it has never been revoked, it is necessary only to revive it for modern application, the general staff holds. The order has lain dormant so long, however, it is probable a new general order will be issued to restore it. Since the original order was formulated by the "commander-in-chief," it is likely the new proclamation will come from the present commander-in-chief, President Hoover.

Military Medals.

The only military medals awarded by the government now are the congressional medal of honor, the distinguished service cross, the distinguished service medal, the soldier's medal, the distinguished flying cross and so-called campaign or service medals, such as the victory medal, not for special individual deeds.

The time limit for award of the congressional medal of honor, distinguished service cross and distinguished service medal for World War service expired seven years ago, but a special act of congress in 1928 authorized the war department to consider for further awards all applications which were pending when the time limit expired. Under this extended authority a number of decorations have been conferred during the past few years.

So far 93 awards of the congressional medal of honor "for individual acts of gallantry in the World War" have been made, in addition to six medals bestowed on unknown, unidentified soldiers and one conferred on Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh by special act of congress. Before the World War a total of 1,723 congressional medals had been issued.

The distinguished service cross, "for acts of heroism performed during the World War," has been awarded to 6,310 persons. The distinguished service medal has gone to 2,157 men. The soldier's medal, authorized in 1926, has been given to 29 men. The distinguished flying cross has been conferred on 47 aviators, and 1,267,736 victory medals have been issued.

Military decorations are granted by a special board of awards at the war department, headed by Brigadier General George M. Simonds, assistant chief of staff, war plans division.

$100,000,000 IS ASKED FOR PUBLIC BUILDING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—An administration proposal for an additional $100,000,000 public building program was introduced today in the house by Chairman Elliott, of the public buildings committee.

The measure was introduced at the request of the treasury. In addition, it would increase the annual outlay for public buildings from $50,000,000 to $65,000,000 and would abolish the restriction providing that not in excess of $10,000,000 could be expended for federal buildings in any one state.

Elliot explained that all of the new fund would be expended outside the District of Columbia. At present, public building construction amounting to $363,000,000 had been authorized outside the District of Columbia but $48,000,000 of the construction is being held up pending disposal of existing structures.

CLUB TO OBSERVE 16TH ANNIVERSARY

The birthday of Kiwanis International will be celebrated by the Atlanta Kiwanis Club on Tuesday when Kiwanians here will join with the 1,869 other clubs in the United States and Canada to commemorate the 16th anniversary of the organization, Dr. Gordon G. Singleton, president of the Atlanta club, announced Saturday.

The first club was organized in Detroit in 1915. On January 21 of that year the first meeting was held. The service organization has grown rapidly and today there is a membership of approximately 100,000. Raymond M. Crossman, of Omaha, is the International president. Kiwanis International will hold its next annual convention in Miami May 3-7, 1931.

"The Atlanta club is now 14 years old," said Dr. Singleton, "and we have enjoyed the growth and development that has come to the international organization of which we are a chartered and active unit."

A splendid program of entertainment and information has been prepared by Will J. Hammond, first vice president of the club.

KEY HOSPITAL PLEA DISCUSSION MONDAY

County Finance Committee Will Take Up Request for $350,000.

Fulton county contributions for 1931 to local hospitals, military units and other causes will be considered by the finance committee of the county commission at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mayor James L. Key has asked for $350,000 from the county for Grady hospital, Battle Hill sanitarium and the contagious disease hospital, but has received no encouragement from the commission on the county's prospects of being able to give this sum.

The 1930 appropriations were: Georgia Tech, Battle Hill, Grady and the chamber of commerce, $10,000 each; Scottish Rite hospital, Atlanta freight bureau, $5,000 each; Atlanta convention bureau, $3,600; 122d infantry, national guard, $2,500; U. S. naval reserve, $1,500; Troop C, 108th cavalry, $1,200, and Uncle Remus Home, $500.

MANAGERS' SECURITIES IS DISSOLVED BY G.M.C.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—How 80 executives of the General Motors Corporation became millionaires through purchase of its stock was recalled today with the dissolution of the Managers' Securities Company.

It was this company through which the executives were enabled to purchase 4,509,000 shares of General Motors stock in 1923, for about $44,000,000, or an average individual investment of $550,000. Today the stock is valued at $164,000,000, which, divided equally, would give each executive $2,050,000. In addition, there have been several stock dividends and split-ups.

The men who achieved financial independence under the plan will now be able, if they desire, to obtain actual possession of the stock for the first time. The assets of the Managers' Securities Company have been taken over by the General Motors Securities Company, formed 10 years ago by the E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Co. to hold the latter's investment in General Motors.

Previously the stockholders of the Managers' Securities merely owned shares in a company that indirectly owned 4,509,000 shares of General Motors stock. Now they will receive stock in the General Motors Securities Company, which they may exchange for the underlying General Motors stock. Although this privilege has been available since December 31, 1930, it is understood that few, if any, of the executives, all of whom are understood to be holders of General Motors stock acquired independently, have taken advantage of the offer.

A new seven-year plan now is in effect through which General Motors has agreed to sell 1,385,000 shares of its stock to more than 200 executives. The new plan went into effect last year.

1,500 To Attend Annual Farm And Marketing Conference

Every County in State Likely To Be Represented at Meeting in Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Fifteen hundred persons are expected here January 26-31 for the annual farmers' week and marketing conference at the State College of Agriculture.

Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the college, today estimated that the attendance would include representatives from practically every county and agricultural, commercial business and industrial enterprise in the state.

The conference, Dr. Soule said, has for an objective this year of the re-stabilization of rural life.

"No more important or essential subject has ever engaged the attention of the delegates who will be present," Dr. Soule said, "that being true, the very best program which it has been possible for us to organize and develop has been prepared.

"A thoroughly practical and concrete procedure has been worked out and will be placed in the hands of those in attendance, as a basis for solving the problems now confronting them.

"They will be asked to take these conclusions back to the communities from which they come and help put them into effect.

"The possibilities for rendering a fundamental and essential service to Georgia through the agency of this conference are therefore of a most important and fundamental nature.

"We have diversified our crops to a remarkable degree and have gone a long way toward making our 'live at home' program a practical entity rather than a mere theory. As a result of this, Georgia is even now in a better position than any other southern state.

"The task which confronts us is a tremendous one and while we have not been able to accomplish all that seems desirable, our progress along many lines has been remarkable."

The questions to be discussed include those of improving farm practices, the enlargement of marketing and research facilities and the dissemination of new and valuable information for the benefit of Georgia farmers and homemakers.

Governor-elect Richard B. Russell, Jr., and prominent farmers and educators are on the program for addresses and as leaders in important subjects to be discussed at the conference.

Canning Course to Be Given.

The first commercial canning course offered at the Georgia State College of Agriculture will be given from January 27-30, inclusive.

The entire program will be handled by state college authorities and will cover almost every angle necessary for the success of the canning industry in Georgia.

In commenting on the necessity for such a school and a larger industry, Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the college, sponsoring the school, said:

"The fact that we are importing vast quantities of canned goods that we should now be producing at home and sending to other less favored sections, constitutes a matter upon which we should center our energy and zeal at this time.

"Canning enterprises can fortunately be organized and handled on a community basis. The capital needed for plants of this character can often be raised locally and, therefore, set up on a thoroughly sound co-operative basis."

There will be sessions both morning and afternoon in the horticultural building of the state college, closing with a general discussion of the course and a question box.

Missing Youths Found By Police in Macon

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Lure of the ocean and its nymphs and pleasure boats prompted two Knoxville (Tenn.) boys to run away from home, they told Macon police Friday.

The boys, Franklin Burr, 16, and Ray Evans, 13, left their homes last Tuesday and started for Florida.

They arrived here. The police, in the meantime, had received requests from Knoxville to be on the lookout for them. Both were picked up as they were about to continue their journey southward.

"I've never seen the ocean," said one of the boys. "We learned in school that there is a lot of coast in Florida, and we've seen a lot of tourists going that way, so we followed."

The boys were penniless when they reached here, police said.

MELON ACREAGE CUT IS URGED BY FIROR

Agriculture College Professor Warns Against Unsatisfactory Market.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Professor G. H. Firor, extension horticulturist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, issued a warning Saturday that unless 1931 watermelon acreage is reduced below that of 1930 last year's unsatisfactory market situation may be repeated.

Total watermelon acreage of the country showed an increase of about 9 per cent last year over 1929, the horticulturist said, with marked increases in Georgia, North and South Carolina, Missouri and Arkansas.

Carlot shipments in 1930, Professor Firor said, amounted to about 59,000 cars, an increase of about 6,500 cars over 1929. The previous peak was about 55,000 cars in 1926.

Unusually rapid marketing of the Georgia crop also contributed to the "discouraging results," he said. Carlot shipments from Georgia during the week ended June 21 were reported at 133 cars, and increased to more than 4,500 cars the following week. During the same week Florida shipped more than 3,500 cars and the total figure for the country was reported to be more than 10,000 cars, believed to be the highest weekly movement on record.

Especially lower prices prevailed last year in Georgia and South Carolina, Professor Firor said. In these two states increases in production were largest.

In Alabama, Arizona, Mississippi and Texas the 1930 acreage showed little change from 1929. Prices in those states, the horticulturist said, averaged about the same as in 1929.

LYONS-TO-BLITCHTON ROAD PAVING SOUGHT

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Reports here Saturday from Washington said Congressman Edwards, of Georgia, had taken up with Georgia and federal representatives, as well as with officials of several Georgia counties, the proposal to get route No. 30 on the program for this or next year.

The highway proposed by him to be paved runs from Lyons through Reidsville, Claxton, Pembroke and connects with Route No. 80 at Blichton. The congressman was reported to have discussed the matter not only with the state highway board and the chief of the United States bureau of roads, but with county commissioners and representatives in the state legislature of Chatham, Bryan, Evans, Tattnal and Toombs counties.

TWO STUDENTS NAMED TO SIGMA DELTA CHI

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Valco Lyle, Athens, and H. H. Martin, Commerce, have been selected for membership in Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity by the University of Georgia chapter.

Both of the pledges are juniors in the Henry W. Grady school of journalism. Mr. Lyle is sports editor of the Athens Banner-Herald and has had several years of reportorial experience.

Mr. Martin, also a reporter on the Banner-Herald, is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The date for the initiation of these two new pledges and Frank Drake, news editor of the The Red and Black, who was pledged during the fall term, will be fixed at the next meeting of the fraternity.

NAVAL STORES LEADERS WILL MEET TUESDAY

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Representatives of the different branches of the naval stores trade will meet here at noon Tuesday to consider the proposed cancellation of existing freight rates on naval stores to, from and between points in southern territory.

It has been proposed to substitute for present carload rates 19 per cent of the existing first-class rate on turpentine. Further, it has been proposed to cancel all existing less than carload commodity rates and apply in their stead the class rates based on classification ratings.

Ocean Pushed Back 100 Feet at Tybee

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Atlantic ocean has been pushed back 100 feet from the Fort Screven reservation at the north end of Tybee island by a steel anti-erosion structure erected under supervision of United States engineers. The effect of the structure has been to turn the force of destructive northeasters and straighten out waves.

3 DAWSON BANKS PAY DIVIDENDS

McDonough, Cornelia and Canton Institutions Report Prosperous Year.

DAWSON, Ga., Jan. 17.—Stockholders and directors of the banks of Dawson held their annual meetings and reports of the institutions show sound financial condition.

Semi-annual dividends were declared by all three banks, the Bank of Dawson declaring 4 per cent on a capital stock of $100,000; the City National bank 5 per cent on a capital stock of $100,000 and the Dawson National bank a 2 per cent dividend on $200,000 capital stock.

Officers and directors for the year were selected as follows:

Bank of Dawson: M. C. Edwards, president; J. P. Perry, vice president; J. M. McNulty, cashier, and C. G. McLendon, assistant cashier. Directors: M. C. Edwards, J. P. Perry, W. A. Baldwin, Eli S. Lewis, T. B. Raines, S. P. Kenyon, J. W. Salter, W. H. Gurr and J. M. McNulty.

Brewer, vice president; F. M. Reeves, cashier. The First National bank had a prosperous and satisfactory year in 1930, and the regular dividend was declared and paid.

BANK OF CANTON PAYS 10 PER CENT DIVIDEND

CANTON, Ga., Jan. 17.—Reports of a profitable year and the payment of the usual dividend to stockholders featured the meeting of Bank of Canton. In addition to 10 per cent paid on its capital stock of $150,000 the bank placed a substantial sum to the credit of undivided profits. The bank has a surplus of $150,000.

The following directors were elected: R. T. Jones, Sam Tate, William Galt, P. W. Jones, G. B. Johnston, E. A. McCanless, H. C. McAfee, J. E. Johnston, W. L. Blackwell, J. H. Johnston, R. G. Bell, Roy Crisler, L. L. Jones, T. J. Ponder and W. S. Elliott.

The directors elected the following officers: R. T. Jones, chairman of the board; Sam Tate, E. A. McCanless and Roy Crisler, vice presidents; W. S. Elliott, vice president and cashier; H. L. Chaffin and C. C. Bell, assistant cashiers.

THOMAS COUNTY BOARD MAKES SALARY CUTS

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—The board of commissioners of Thomas county adopted a program of economy at their second meeting of the month by inaugurating a general cut in salaries of all county officers and employes under their jurisdiction, with the exception of county physician and county attorney.

Salaries of the farm agent, the road superintendent and the clerk of the board of commissioners were reduced 10 per cent each. The county probation agent received a cut of 5 per cent, and the superintendent of the county farm had 25 per cent sliced off of his salary.

The board re-elected all the incumbents of 1930, Pat Ward being named as farm agent; R. E. Brown, road superintendent; S. L. Heald, clerk of the board; Mrs. W. T. Wilson, county probation agent; C. W. Johnson, superintendent of county farm; Dr. James W. Reid, county physician; A. M. Lacy, county attorney.

State Deaths And Funerals

MRS. FLORENCE CARDIN.

OCHLOCKNEE, Ga., Jan. 17.—Funeral services were held Saturday from the family residence here for Mrs. Florence Cardin, who died at her home Friday. She was 61 years of age. Before her marriage she was Miss Florence Singletary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Singletary, and was born in Quincy, Fla., on December 1, 1865. She moved to Ochlocknee with her husband a number of years ago and was prominent in church and civic affairs. She is survived by six children, Mrs. R. W. McMillan, Mrs. W. M. Mr. Adair was 28 years of age, and was an employe of the Greene Motor Company. He is survived by his mother and a brother. The body was sent to Carnesville, Ga., for funeral and interment.

Col. A. G. Harris, 83, Ordinary Of Henry County Since 1908

COLONEL A. G. HARRIS.

Tift County Woman Heads Board of Trade

TIFTON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A woman will guide the destinities of Tift's county-wide civic organization, the Tifton County Board of Trade.

Mrs. P. D. Fulwood, a native of Tifton, and prominent in church, civic and social life of the city, was named president for 1931 at the organization's annual meeting.

Joseph Kent was named first vice president; J. S. Taylor, second vice president, and W. J. Davis, treasurer.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE IS HELD IN WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 17.—The annual missionary institute of the Waycross Methodist district was held at the First Methodist church, here, with delegates present from Alma, Blackshear, Broxton, Brunswick, Darien, Douglas, Folkston, Hebardville, Hinesville, Homerville, Jesup, Ludowici, Nahunta, Odum, Pearson, Screven, St. Marys, Waresboro, Waycross, White Oak and Willacoochee.

Of the 24 churches in the district only one was not represented, West Green, and the delegates from that church was kept away by illness.

The Rev. James R. Webb, presiding elder, was in charge. The devotional was led by the Rev. J. D. McCord, of Hinesville, and the opening prayers were by the Rev. C. W. Curry, of Jesup, and the Rev. Norman Lovein, of Macon.

Addresses Made.

The addresses of the morning session were by the Rev. George E. Clary, of Macon, conference Sunday school secretary; the Rev. John M. Outler, of Waycross, chairman of the conference missionary board; the Rev. A. W. Rees, of Brunswick, speaking on "Church Extension;" Walter A. Seaman, of Waycross, district lay leader, and Ralph Smith, of Brunswick, and S. M. Moore, of Douglas, associate district lay leaders, and Dr. George L. Morelock, of Nashville, general secretary of the laymen's movement of the Southern Methodist church.

The speakers stressed that all the work of the church is to be considered as a unified program; that no activity is to be emphasized above others; that there is to be no competition between or jealousy among parts of the program and the agents in charge of these parts.

It was also pointed out that the work of the church will go forward and that kingdom extension will become a reality only to the degree that the members of the church give liberally of themselves and of their substances; that so long as a church is willing to be behind with its obligations no revival of spiritual value may be expected within the church; that payment of obligations and a just regard of obligations necessarily precedes spiritual revivals; that if the pastors really want revivals in their churches they must work first of all to the end that the churches pay all obligations in full, and promptly.

Resolution Passed.

A unanimous resolution was passed that all the churches in the district have half of all financial obligations in hand by the district conference in May.

It was agreed also that a young person from each of the four groups in the district—Brunswick, Douglas, Waycross and Jesup—speak at the district conference on "The Program of the Methodist Church," the winner to be awarded a trip to the Epworth League assembly in Macon.

The presiding elder announced that no quarterly conferences would be held during the time of the pastors' school in Macon so all pastors might attend the school.

It was decided to recommend to the bishop that an award of $25 be made to the church making the greatest advance in carrying out the full program, the award to be applied to the superannuate endowment of the winning church.

At 1 o'clock all of the delegates were guests at a luncheon served by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church.

Great-Grandfather of Confederate Veteran Lived To Be Almost 120 Years of Age.

BY MRS. HUGH J. TURNER.

McDONOUGH, Ga., Jan. 17.—A. G. Harris, himself an octogenarian, today mentions the fact that his great-grandfather, Samuel Harris, lived to be almost 120 years of age and died within a few hours of his wife after a wedded life of 87 years.

Judge Harris, the "first citizen" of Henry county, has been ordinary consecutively since 1908.

He was born in Meriwether county March 15, 1847. He received his early education in this and Monroe counties and lacked only one term of obtaining his medical degree from the old Atlanta Medical College, while Dr. Westmoreland and Dr. Willis were instructors at that institution.

Mr. Harris was instrumental in creating the Flippen militia district in this county and has been a successful farmer and merchant.

In reviewing his experiences as ordinary, Judge Harris compares the operation of county government now with the system which was used in 1909. At that time he had charge of all the finances, the chain gang, etc. In addition he, starting with no funds, completely equipped the chain gang. In 1913 the commissioners were elected.

Judge Harris has the rank of colonel, as assistant to the adjutant general, in the state organization of Confederate veterans. He is acting commander of the Henry county group. During the War Between the States he served in the Georgia Reserves and took part in the campaign around Chattanooga. He was with the troops that captured General Stoneman near Macon.

Among his distinguished ancestors are the eight sons of Samuel Harris who served in the American Revolution. One of these sons, Thomas Harris, was the first sheriff of Mecklenburg county, N. C., before the war. Robert and James, two other sons, were members of the Mecklenburg convention which defied Great Britain a year before the Declaration of Independence.

Judge Harris is looked upon now as one of the "boys" and whenever any of the officers at the courthouse have a trip to make or some enterprise of an exciting nature on foot, he is the first to be ready to go.

Judge Reprimands 12 Students After 'Graveyard' Party in Athens

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A "graveyard" party in which a group of freshmen were the center of attention, and their higher ranking classmen in the University of Georgia were hosts, brought 12 students to the police court on charges of disorderly conduct.

Judge Vincent Matthews reprimanded the students and on their pledge not to disturb property in the burial ground again, dismissed the cases.

The keeper of the cemetery said he heard a noise in the graveyard Monday night and blew a wistle. Some of the students fled and others were greeted by police a short time later. The keeper said a few monuments were knocked over and some lots damaged.

"Fun is all right," said the judge, "but you boys must realize that the cemetery is a sacred place. We do not have much trouble with you, so I wish to ask your co-operation in this matter. With your promise not to damage any more property, I am going to dismiss this case. You may take me to be soft-hearted. I can be hard boiled. Next case!"

JURY MAY PROBE FATAL GUN DUEL

Details of Cochran Bank Director's Death Still Unknown.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Bleckley county grand jury which assembles Monday probably will investigate a gun battle in the Bleckley cotton warehouse at Cochran last Wednesday in which a bank director was killed and a warehouseman wounded.

Funeral services for L. S. Phillips, who was shot dead in the battle, were held at Cochran Thursday. J. F. Abney, manager of the warehouse, is improving at the Macon hospital from wounds in the abdomen and the chest. Physicians said his recovery is assured.

Sheriff W. H. Jones, of Bleckley county, has not been able to ascertain who fired the first shot, he said. The shooting occurred as the climax to an argument about banks in general, and the Luther Williams Bank and Trust Company, in Macon, in particular, according to the sheriff.

Mr. Phillips was a director of the state bank, and his son, Leo Phillips, is assistant cashier. Mr. Abney is the father of G. G. Abney, who was assistant cashier of the Luther Williams Bank and Trust Company, and Marion Abney, who was an employe of the same institution.

INDICTMENTS DROPPED AGAINST FLOYD BOARD

ROME, Ga., Jan. 17.—All indictments against members of the Floyd county board of roads and revenue, growing out of a recent probe of the board's administration by a Floyd grand jury, were nolle prossed Friday by Judge James Maddox, of the superior court, following a recommendation made by Solicitor-General Neil Andrews, of the Floyd circuit.

In asking that all charges be dropped Mr. Andrews stated: "While I do not say that evidence in these cases is not enough for conviction by a jury, I do not think it worth while to use the time and expense necessary to push charges, in view of the result of other cases tried this week."

Two cases against O. N. Richardson, former chairman of the board, were tried during the week and he was acquitted, as was C. A. Todd Sr., present vice chairman of the board. Lon Hall, warden of the county chain gang camp, was also acquitted by a jury on a charge of embezzlement.

The following is the list of cases that were nolle prossed in court: O. N. Richardson, three cases of forgery, accepting a bribe, malpractice; James Morris, Homer Davis and John F. Sproull, malpractice; C. A. Todd Sr. and O. N. Richardson, conspiracy, and O. N. Richardson and E. E. Lindsey, conspiracy. All these men listed above are members of the county commissioners, with the exception of Mr. Richardson, who recently resigned as chairman, and E. E. Lindsey, local broker. Two cases against Lon Hall, county warden, for embezzlement, were also dropped.

The nolle prossing of the cases brings to a dramatic close a long fight carried on by Mr. Andrews, solicitor, and his assistant, Dean Owens, for the conviction of members of the county board. The cases were begun six months ago, but no acquittals could be obtained in the courts and the cases were dropped.

Public Works Burglar Sentenced in Macon

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Three times a burglar of public works, J. W. Waters, 23, Saturday afternoon stood before Judge H. A. Mathews, of Bibb superior court, and heard imposed upon him a penalty of 20 years in the penitentiary—the limit of the Georgia law.

Waters was pleading guilty this time to the burglary last November 20 of the Fort Hawkins school. It was his third offense, records show.

Beginning in 1929, the young man has burglarized the Mulberry Street Methodist church, and the tool house of the Bibb county engineering force, it was said.

The law requires the maximum penalty in repeated cases.

Pair Convicted, Hanged Same Day In Hancock's First Capital Cases

BY G. B. MOORE.

SPARTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—According to the records of Hancock superior court the first two capital felony cases tried in this county after it was created from Washington and Greene counties in 1793 was one for horse stealing—a capital felony in Georgia at that time—and the other homicide. Convictions were returned without recommendations to mercy, and the prisoners were hanged on the same day they were convicted.

In the homicide case the trial jury returned a verdict into court that is probably without parallel, so far as verbiage goes. The verdict read: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty and recommend him to the mercy of God only." No mention was made of mercy in the case of the convicted horse thief. The prisoners were convicted on different days of the court term.

On the same days on which they were convicted and sentenced the sheriff, according to the court minutes, made his return. After stating the case the return in each instance was, "I have this day executed the sentence of the court," the return being officially signed by the sheriff of the county.

When Hancock county was created by the general assembly the town of Sparta, now the county seat, was the center from which future growth was to radiate. The courthouse and jail, crude affairs of logs, were located near the present Sparta and Sandersville road, four miles south of Sparta, in a neighborhood known as Jessamine Bower. That community has been wiped out by time and no signs of the old log courthouse and jail remain, though older residents of the county recall them distinctly.

At that time there was no court of final review in the state, the supreme court being established years later, the judgments and decisions of the superior courts being final.

Hard Times Talk Silenced By Revival in Nashville

U. S. Aid for Family Of Slain Negro Sought

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Harry E. Nottingham, Bibb county legislator, Saturday started his task of obtaining affidavits to submit to Washington authorities substantiating a claim for aid for the family of Sam Knight, negro, who was slain in a liquor raid on the Cochran road, the night of August 1, 1930.

Mr. Nottingham and W. T. Anderson several days ago requested Representative Sam Rutherford to present the matter to the claims committee in Washington, and late Friday were informed that the request had been tentatively submitted to the chairman of the committee.

In the raid in which Knight was killed a prohibition agent, Herman Warr, was also fatally shot.

UNIVERSITY OPERA PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Series of Presentations To Be Offered During Summer School in July.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Operas which will be presented at the 1931 session of the University of Georgia summer school have been announced by Director Joseph S. Stewart. They are: "Romeo and Juliet," Gounod's immortal opera based on Shakespeare's greatest of all love dramas, July 22; "The Bohemian Girl," Balfe's "ballad operetta," perhaps the most beloved light opera ever composed, July 23; "Phoebus and Pan," Bach's classic presentation of a fabled singing contest, and "Don Pasquale," Donizetti's most brilliant and tuneful comedy, July 24.

All the operas will be sung in English. No charge will be made to regular registered summer school students. The casts will be announced soon.

"The plans for the opera season for 1931 assure a most brilliant program of grand opera, and the first light opera, ever undertaken by the University of Georgia summer school," Dr. Stewart said.

During the past five years the following operas in full have been given: "Carmen," "Madame Butterfly," "Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," "Martha," "Cavalleria Rusticana" (twice), "Hansel and Gretel," "La Serva Padrona," "Il Trovatore," Sampson and Delilah," "Rigoletto," "Traviata," "Orpheus" (Gluck), "Secret of Suzanne," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Mignon," "Bianca" (Hardley), "The Barber of Seville," and parts of Werther," "The Tales of Hoffman," and "Madame Pompadour" have been performed.

AGED NEGRO COUPLE SAVED FROM FLAMES

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—While flames were about to engulf them early Saturday morning as they remained helplessly frantic in their little home just off the Jeffersonville road, Tilman and Jessie Malcolm, aged negro couple, near invalids, were rescued by Will Patterson, their son-in-law, just a minute before the roof fell in, sheriff's deputies reported.

Patterson left his own home in flames in order to rescue his parents-in-law, while Charlie Patterson, his 25-year-old nephew, charged with having set fire to the buildings, is alleged by officers to have stood guard with a gun in his hand daring any one to escape the burning flames, the officers said.

The younger Patterson was arrested at noon charged with arson. He is in the Bibb county jail. The Malcolm home was totally destroyed, while only the front porch was burned from the Patterson residence.

Patterson denied the charge placed against him, but witnesses said he had remarked earlier in the night that he would "burn you all up," and later ignited the two kerosene soaked shanties, standing side by side, the officers charge.

They said Patterson made no effort to use the gun after he had dared occupants of the house to flee. Officers said the offense is punishable by death.

RECEIVERS ARE NAMED FOR ATHENS COMPANY

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Three leading Athens businessmen, D. C. Collier, president of the Southern Manufacturing Company; A. G. Dudley, president of the Athens Manufacturing Company and Climax Hosiery Mills, and Andrew C. Erwin, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Mutual Insurance Company, Saturday were named receivers for the Southern Manufacturing Company, capitalized at $900,000 for purposes of reorganization.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed with W. G. Cornett, United States referee, Saturday. R. P. Arnold, R. P. White, James White, all local textile manufacturers, were announced as appraisers.

G. NIXON POPE, 38, DIES IN BIRMINGHAM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 17.—(AP)—G. Nixon Pope, 38, died in a hospital Saturday of pneumonia following a week's illness. He was a member of a prominent south Georgia family and a graduate of the University of Georgia. Surviving are the widow; one son; a sister, Mrs. Knox Henderson, Enterprise, Ala., and his mother, Mrs. J. D. Pope, Albany, Ga. The body will be sent to Albany for burial.

South Georgians, Stirred by Nationally Known Evangelists, Travel Miles To Attend Services.

NASHVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—In this little town, where people go to bed early, get up early and refuse ordinarily to be hurried or worried by passing events, something has happened that has set the community on edge. It is nothing more or less than a religious revival, but it has produced an upheaval, the like of which both church-goers and unprofessed Christians have not seen before since houses of worship were built here, to quote leading churchmen.

The spectacle is presented not only of an entire community, of several thousand souls, men, women and children, going to church daily for a period of three weeks, but a whole county and section, many miles distant, thrusting aside the routine duties of everyday life and facing churchward.

From Enigma, Alapaha and Willacoochie, southward to the Lowndes county line, and over into neighboring counties, people have flocked here, crowding the highways with their family flivvers and other means of conveyance. Nashville is a tobacco mart when the bright leaf is swapped for the golden sheckles of the $16,000,000 south Georgia tobacco crop—crowds then are not an unusual sight—but this is a different scene—an army of church-goers, earnest, devout, God-fearing, with an objective other than money making.

Nationally-Known Evangelists.

The revival, conducted by two nationally known evangelists, the Rev. George Bell and Fred Clark, one a Scotchman and the other a Welshman, with many successful religious campaigns to their credit both in America and Europe, is being held in the Baptist church. It is not, however, a denominational affair. On the contrary it is conspicuously interdenominational with people of every creed and race participating, except of course, the negroes, a respected element of the population, who worship in their own churches.

The big religious event, now drawing to a close, will go down in the religious and church history of the town and section, according to Joe Lawrence, editor of the Nashville Herald, who Saturday described the scenes and results on the religious awakening of his section of state.

"Nothing like it has ever been seen here before," said Editor Lawrence. "It has swept the community like a cyclone. Understand it is not religious frenzy. There is a fervor and sincerity about it all that cannot fail to impress even the most hardened skeptic. Talk of hard times—and it has been heard here, as elsewhere, has given way to a brighter and better outlook on life. After all, those of us who believe in the Bible and its teachings, may point to it as a torch that will lead us out of the wilderness, speaking both spiritually and in a material way. Why shouldn't it be a cure for business ills?

"People who have flocked to the church for three weeks, night and morning, have listened with abated breath, sparkling eyes and craned necks. Frankly, they have been astounded. At times, during the services, the silence, beyond the voice of the speakers, is so intense that one is reminded of hearing the proverbial pin drop.

"There is nothing stale or stereotyped about the preaching of the two evangelists, who are men of unusual magnetism and power. It is in a word, full of virtue, gripping the intellect and pricking the heart. They have left and are leaving, after they are gone, a lasting impression of 'men who walked with God.' People here and throughout the section are lifted to a higher plane by reason of their visit."

BARNESVILLE P.-T. A. IN REGULAR SESSION

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—The Augusta Lambin Parent-Teacher Association of Barnesville met at the Gordon grammar school. Mrs. Lewis Johnson, vice president, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. C. E. Suggs. The program was featured by a lesson in "Discipline" by Mrs. A. M. Lambdin. A chapter from "Child Guidance" was presented.

It was voted to send a telegram to the Lamar county representative, Colonel Harvey J. Kennedy, requesting him to give his aid to the public school during the extra session of the legislature. Mrs. Johnson appointed the following visiting committee for February: Mrs. J. E. Gillebeau, Mrs. Trice Syring and Mrs. C. O. Sims.

CAMILLA WILL HOLD SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

CAMILLA, Ga., Jan. 17.—A Sunday school rally will be held next Thursday in the Baptist church here for the churches of the Tucker association. Prominent Sunday school workers who will attend include Miss Edwina Wood, of Columbus; Mrs. Ethel Davis, of Atlanta; Mrs. J. J. Heard, of Vienna; Mrs. O. M. Gerald, of Atlanta; Mrs. H. C. Hayslip, of Atlanta; Gaynor F. Bryan, of Sandersville; Miss Susie Eubanks, of Conyers.

Lanier County Farms Produce Big Turnips

LAKELAND, Ga., Jan. 17.—With two turnips of unusual size produced on Lanier farms this season, the county is challenging others to produce bigger and better turnips.

During the past week James Gaskins, a Lanier county farmer, placed on exhibition in Lakeland the two turnips, one measuring 16 1-4 inches around, and then fearing that this might not hold the state championship, the other was put up, measuring 17 3-4 inches around its girth.

Lanier county enthusiasts declare that all other products of the county are in the same proportion.

State Civic Clubs Plan Contest In Use of Georgia-Grown Products

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A state-wide contest among the civic clubs of Georgia in the use of Georgia products in their meals during 1931 was announced Saturday in a letter from the district governors of Rotary, Civitans, Lions, Exchange and Kiwanis to the presidents of the local clubs.

The contest will begin the first meeting in February and will end with the last meeting in November. Between the present and the first of February each district governor will acquaint his clubs with the rules of the contest and the individual clubs will be entered. Each club will have a Georgia products committee whose duty shall be to confer with the person in charge of purchasing supplies for luncheons and to see that as many items as possible are Georgia-raised. The committee shall also make an oral report at each meeting, counting every item, even salt and pepper, on the percentage of Georgia products. Monthly reports sent to the district governor will determine the winner.

In selecting the winner, the percentage of Georgia products used will be the chief factor, but in case of a tie that club which had the greater number of meals will be winner.

The contest was suggested by W. T. Anderson, president of the Macon Rotary Club, as a means of stimulating the consumption of Georgia-raised food.

Court Adjourns.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Jan. 17.—The hold-over term of December city court closed Friday with Judge D. R. Bryan, justice of the peace, on the bench for Judge Harry Spooner, who was disqualified.

GOVERNMENT COST UP 59 MILLIONS

Expenditures Drop Sharply But Operating Costs Shoot Skyward.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Expenditures of the government for the first six months of the current or 1931 fiscal year dropped below those for the similar period of the previous fiscal year by $184,811,945 but the cost of operating the government exceeded that of a year ago by $59,078,144.

The treasury's statement of financial operations for the first six months of the current fiscal year as compared with the 1930 fiscal year today showed that total expenditures, including public debt retirements amounted to $1,801,082,916 as compared with $1,601,089,458 in the previous year. The public debt retirements for the current year totaled $94,294,000 in the six months as compared with $384,805,403 in the first half of the previous year.

Expenditures by departments showed that those of the legislative branch had increased approximately $2,000,000, while those of the executive branch increased $9,000; the treasury $45,000; war department $7,000,000; justice $6,000,000; postoffice $22,000; agriculture $28,000,000; commerce $11,000,000; labor $850,000; veterans' administration $116,000,000, and of the District of Columbia $300,000.

The state department expenditures decreased, as compared with the same period of the previous year, $250,000; navy $5,000,000; interior $91,000,000, and independent establishments and commissions $16,000,000.

The federal farm board was credited with expenditures of $80,556,770 in the six months, $31,468,153 of which was spent in December.

The statement showed that on January 15 there was a deficit of $194,964,902 in the treasury. Expenditures since last July 1 had amounted to $2,106,211,790, while receipts totaled $1,911,246,888.

Atlanta Dictaphone Branch Office Wins Company's Trophy for Sales

Merrill B. Sands (left), vice president of the Dictaphone Sales Corporation, presents the national branch trophy to Everett N. Brown, manager for the company in this territory. Directly behind the trophy is C. J. Smith and on the extreme right is F. O. Norwood, both connected with the Atlanta branch.

Achieving the highest percentage of monthly sales quotas, the Atlanta branch of the Dictaphone Sales Corporation won for 1930 the national branch trophy offered by the company in competition with the other branches throughout the United States and Canada.

Merrill B. Sands, vice president of the company, came to Atlanta to present the trophy to Everett N. Brown, manager of the Atlanta branch, which shows the highest percentage of monthly sales quotas achieved during the past year.

Mr. Sands says that the race for the trophy was very close, two branches having tied for second place, close on the heels of Atlanta. Los Angeles and Philadelphia came second in the race. Mr. Sands points out that the geographical distribution of the three leading contestants makes the winning of the trophy by Atlanta all the more significant.

The trophy will remain in Atlanta in the custody of Mr. Brown during the year 1931. It becomes the permanent property of the dictaphone branch that first wins it three times, and Mr. Brown has adopted as the motto for his southern division this year, "Come and Get It."

The Dictaphone Sales Corporation maintains offices in all parts of the United States and Canada, Atlanta being the headquarters for the southeast. The Atlanta branch territory includes Tampa, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Miami, Jackson, Miss.; Birmingham, Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga, Charlotte, Greensboro, Knoxville, Savannah and Macon.

In reference to the presentation of the trophy to Mr. Brown, Mr. Sands said that it should be a source of great interest to everybody in the southeastern United States that in the year 1930 this trophy was won by the Atlanta branch, as it is an indication of prosperity here in comparison with the other sections of the country.

SOLONS SEEK LAW CURBING 'REDS'

Fish Committee Reports on Investigation of Communists' Activities.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Fish committee today termed communism a grave threat to democratic government, reported the communist party extremely active in America, and outlined legislative means of combating the radical cause.

After eight months of study, the committee submitted a voluminous report, recommending that aliens who advocate overthrowing the government by force be refused admission to the United States, and more stringent deportation laws.

It was signed by Chairman Fish, Representative Bachmann, republican, West Virginia, and Representatives Eslick, Tennessee, and Hall, Mississippi, democrats.

The fifth member of the committee, Representative Nelson, republican, Maine, filed an individual report.

Bachmann immediately introduced a bill to prohibit the entry of avowed communists into the United States. Fish said he and other committee members would place in legislative form other recommendations for which law is required. They include:

Deportation of alien communists; denial of naturalization and the cancellation of citizenship of communists; empowering the justice department to investigate communist activities; a prohibition against sending propaganda for revolutionary communism in the mails or in interstate commerce; a law to prosecute communists or others spreading false rumors to cause runs on banks; immediate consideration of an embargo on Russian manganese.

In addition, the committee recommended that the treasury seek permission to investigate through agents the alleged production of lumber and pulpwood by convict labor and the use of forced labor in soviet Russia.

The Fish report also recommended that the communist party of the United States be declared illegal and that states be requested to take appropriate action to have the party excluded from recognition.

Nelson's recommendations included more stringest administration of the visa laws, the deportation of undesirable and criminal aliens, the encouragement of organized labor and more careful postal supervision of radical publications. He also indorsed giving the justice department power to follow up radical activities.

New economic and social conditions, Nelson said in his report, require "a new attitude of thought and a more liberal approach to some of our problems.

"The crisis that American industry and American labor is facing today, speaks, in no uncertain terms of something wrong in our social and industrial system, which calls for further and deeper study of causes, effects and cures," he added.

Bolshevism, he said, "was born out of a social and political chaos that can never obtain here in America."

There will be no weakening in our ideals of democracy—simply an extension of those ideals into other fields."

"In proportion as we work out economic justice here in America and so order our social system that labor shall share in the economic life of the nation as fully and fairly as it now shares in its social and political life, in just that proportion will radicalism fall of its own inanition and the threat of communism cease to disturb us."

"The United States has more to lose from the economic system in Russia if the five-year plan succeeds than any other nation," the Fish report said. "We find there is not sufficient competent legal evidence in the record to prove the connection of the Amtorg Trading Corporation with subversive activities."

The committee outlined the communist youth movement here and said publicity and support of organized labor is the "best means of combatting communism."

Boy's Honesty Is Rewarded

Hollywood Residents Make Choicest Haul

HOLLYWOOD, Fla., Jan. 17.—(UP)—The five thousand residents of Hollywood were still having a glorious week-end today, at the conclusion of a glorious week of "fishing."

At Golden Beach, four miles south of here, residents of the community were still frantically fishing with surf tackle, hoping to pull in another sack or two of a rum cargo which lay seven feet under the waters. When a liquor boat laden with 500 sacks of fine Scotch whisky went aground Monday it did not take long for word to spread.

One winter resident put a bathing suit on his Scotch gardener, it was said, sent the hired man into the ocean waters, and told him to spend the day hunting. He was said to have been rewarded to the extent of 125 sacks. About 350 of the vessel's load of 500 sacks have already been recovered by the water and shore searchers, and throughout the week neighbors have been dropping by to see each other, sampling the contents of the various sacks, and giving thanks to Father Neptune.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

W. S. Richardson, Fulton county tax collector, Saturday warned the public that a 50 per cent penalty attaches to the special state occupation tax after January 31. Payments on this tax and also on ad valorem taxes are very slow, he said. The extension of time for payment of ad valorem taxes without fi. fa. costs expired Saturday.

this famous oil spray treatment soothes colds away

THERE'S been a lot of sound progress made in the treatment of colds during the past few years. And the "Pineoleum" oil spray method, recommended by thousands of doctors, has radically changed the public's ideas about the treatment of colds.

"Pineoleum" is modern . . . speedy . . . effective. It does three things, and does them well: (1) It bathes the inflamed membranes in a spreading, penetrating film of oil that protects the tissues and inhibits the growth of germs. (2) It acts at the seat of the trouble—the passages of nose and throat. (3) Its bland and healing oils clear the air passages, soothe the angry membranes and rid you instantly of that stuffed-up feeling.

Use it for the children before they start for school. They like it . . . it's not like "taking medicine" . . . and there's nothing to upset the stomach! At your drug store.

NATIONAL 'THRIFT WEEK' IS INAUGURATED TODAY

Atlanta Hostesses Find Interest in Cultural Events

The influence of that great exponent of thrift, Benjamin Franklin, finds present-day expression in national "thrift week" which begins today, this being the 225th anniversary of the birth of the eminent statesman and philosopher. Vitally interested in the promotion of thrift and in the matter of family finance, the housewives of America, linked together in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will observe the week and have indorsed it without qualifications. Never was the time more opportune than the present for putting into practice this fundamental virtue, and women's organizations throughout the country have advocated its observance.

Atlanta hostesses, it would seem, are observing thrift week too, for the social calendar indicates that very little entertaining is planned, with only affairs of an informal nature scheduled for the day. Rather attention is centered on cultural affairs with the keenest interest displayed in the concert to be given this afternoon by Ruth Posselt, the noted young violinist, at Broadlands, the Pace's Ferry road home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson. Another event of interest is the meeting of the Every Saturday Club, which will take place at the home of Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman on Peachtree street at 11 o'clock.

Social Events.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Noble will entertain this evening at their home, Wakefield, on Habersham drive, inviting a group of their friends to a buffet supper. Another affair of like nature is that at which Mrs. Charlotte Meador Fletcher will be hostess at her home on Fourteenth street, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Pope, who will leave at an early date to make their home in Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Caldwell Holliday's party at the Piedmont Driving Club dinner-dance this evening will be a complimentary gesture to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hull, whose marriage was an event of social importance taking place the first of the month. The dinner-dances at the Piedmont Driving Club and the Biltmore hotel are popular affairs of the week-end at which social Atlanta will assemble.

Mrs. Simpson Entertains.

Mrs. Tom Simpson entertained at a bridge-luncheon Wednesday at her home on Delaware avenue. Mrs. L. L. Simpson won top score prize, Mrs. Ben Richards won consolation, and Mrs. W. N. Carter made low score. The guests included Mesdames Henry Reaves, J. S. Wilson, W. H. Mitchell, J. B. Grant, C. D. Crabill, Greer Hendrix, L. L. Simpson, W. S. Loftis, W. N. Carter, T. A. Simpson, Ben Richards, Leo Sudderth, W. P. Suttles and E. F. Wisotzkey.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. R. L. Chappell entertained at her home on Hardendorff avenue Thursday in honor of her little son, Ralph Laurence, Jr., who celebrated his second birthday. In the contest pinning the tie on Buster Brown the prize was won by Jimmie Biggs. The Valentine motif was carried out in the decorations and in the birthday cake on which burned two tiny tapers. The guests included Patricia Winifred Shackleford, Betty Anne Wilson, Leila Anne House, Margene Branch, Mary Elizabeth Rambo, Caroline Satterwhite, Jacquelin Pope, Billie Evans, Jimmie Biggs, Maynard Fuller, Earl Tidwell, Jr., and Ted Goodrich.

Boulevard Park Club.

Mrs. H. A. Agricola was hostess to the Boulevard Park Woman's Club at her home on Elkmont drive, Monday. Reports of Christmas activities were brought in by various committees. Mrs. Clarke Donaldson was authorized to purchase oranges for the inmates of the Old Ladies' Home.

An "all-day sewing" will be held the third Friday in each month for the Junior Needle-work Guild under the direction of Mrs. E. D. Thomas and Mrs. H. M. Williams.

Whitefoord Club.

Whitefoord Garden Club met Friday at the home of Mrs. James Hanson, 1365 Wylie street, and Mrs. J. R. Bachman visited the club and discussed plans for practical study to be undertaken during the year. The club will buy one of the books recommended by Mrs. Bachman and begin the study at once. By unanimous vote the membership limit was placed at 25.

Mrs. C. L. Smith, president, appointed a nominating committee headed by Mrs. Owen Phillips. The committee will report at the February meeting and election of officers will be held. A social hour followed the business session.

Brides Are Feted.

Mrs. Miller Van Allen entertained yesterday at an informal tea at her home on Peachtree road in honor of Mrs. Harvey Cutts and Mrs. Paul Cox, recent attractive brides. Mrs. Van Allen was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. E. H. McGehee, of Talbotton.

Those invited were Mesdames David W. Martin, Earl Champion, B. R. Adams, R. Denny King, Giddings Wilkes, Henry H. Ware, Walker Bowen, William A. Garrett, Hal Morris, Randolph G. Wilson, Jake Shelor, Yancey McCall, William S. Dennis, William R. Bentley, O. B. Schaeffer, Edward Merritt, Stewart Brown, Frank Sarrison, Thorpe Hill, J. S. Roberts, Terry Strozier and Frank R. Pope.

East Atlanta, O. E. S.

East Atlanta Chapter No. 108 Order of the Eastern Star held installation of officers Tuesday evening in the chapter room. Mrs. Donna Lawhon, grand associate conductress, was the installing officer and was assisted by Mrs. Ophelia Owens, as grand marshal; Mrs. Dena Clarke, as grand chaplain, and Mrs. Floy Hollingsworth, as grand organist.

Officers installed were: Mrs. W. A. Berry, worthy matron; worthy patron, E. B. Gooch; associate matron, Mrs. R. D. Sherrill; associate patron, W. A. Berry; secretary, Mrs. J. S. McWilliams; treasurer, Mrs. I. F. Bowden; conductress, Mrs. R. R. Hudson; associate conductress, Mrs. S. Griffin; chaplain, Mrs. Claude Hightower; marshal, Miss Maude Lee; organist, Mrs. C. E. Chase; Ada, Miss Nelle McDuffie; Ruth, Miss Rubie Hudson; Esther, Mrs. E. B. Gooch; Martha, Miss Edna Sherrill; Electa, Mrs. C. S. Godwin; warder, Miss Willie Mae Lee; sentinel, R. R. Hudson.

Following a short talk by the worthy matron, Mrs. Barry, she was showered with flowers and gifts from her friends and officers.

Daughters of America.

True Blue Council No. 31, Daughters of America, held installation of officers Thursday evening. Mrs. Cora Cash, assisted by Mrs. Katie Grennor and H. G. Cash, installed the following officers: Mrs. Etta Chambers, junior past councilor; Arthur Wright, associate junior past councilor; Mrs. Clara Thompson, councilor; Frank Anderson, associate councilor; Mrs. Albena Holder, vice councilor; John Wallace, associate vice councilor; Mrs. A. B. Drake, conductor; A. B. Drake, warden; Mrs. Emma Gill, inside sentinel; J. C. Strong, outside sentinel; Mrs. H. Haley, trustee; Mrs. Lillie Anderson, assistant recording secretary; H. G. Cash, captain of the degree team; Mrs. Lula Mae Young, pianist.

This affair will assemble 40 members of the young married set and will be the first of a number of social gayeties at which this interesting acquisition to Atlanta society will be honored. Mrs. William Caye and Mrs. Glenville Giddings Jr. will be among others who will entertain for Mrs. Crichton, who, with Dr. Crichton, will return tomorrow from their wedding trip to Florida.

Miss Evans Weds Douglas Cowan at Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Maud Evans and Douglas Cowan was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fannie M. Evans, on Washita avenue, with Rev. Robert H. Lamkin, uncle of the bride, officiating, assisted by Rev. E. C. Cowan, father of the bridegroom.

The home was decorated with palms, ferns and early spring flowers. A program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Hinda Roberts, who also played Mendelssohn's wedding march and the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." Preceding the ceremony Mrs. G. A. Mitchell sang "All For You" and "L'Amour-Toujours-L'Amour."

Miss Frances Lamkin, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She was becomingly gowned in yellow point d'sprit over yellow satin. Her slippers were yellow and she carried a bouquet of yellow snapdragons and calendula.

The bride's brunette beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of lustrous white satin and her veil of tulle which was held to her dark hair with a chaplet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

The bride entered with her mother, Mrs. Fannie M. Evans, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, Edward Cowan, who acted as best man.

Mrs. Evans, the bride's mother, was gowned in pale blue georgette; she wore silver slippers and her corsage was of pink roses.

Mrs. E. C. Cowan, mother of the bridegroom, wore dark blue georgette.

Mrs. Julia Lamkin Hunt, the bride's grandmother, was gowned in midnight blue lace over tan satin.

Mr. and Mrs. Cowan will be at home temporarily at 1046 Washita avenue.

Mimosa Club Meets.

Donald Hastings gave an interesting and instructive talk on the care of roses at the meeting of the Mimosa Garden Club held recently at the home of Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr. "Roses give such glorious returns when properly nurtured," said Mr. Hastings, who gave a very practical and accurate lesson for amateur gardeners. There was a very interesting discussion concerning the preservation of the dogwood and azalea trees. The club will assist in introducing a bill before the legislature to protect these trees.

Mrs. Smith Honored.

Mrs. Charles G. Smith was hostess at her home on Thirteenth street at a miscellaneous shower, honoring Mrs. William C. Smith, formerly Miss Beulah Marie Fuller.

The guests included Mesdames J. H. Fuller, W. S. Smith, of Birmingham; Ruth Meade, of Asheville; Joseph A. Di Christini, Louise Windham, B. A. Wesley, S. H. Donaldson, R. A. Day, Mary Jenkins, R. A. Noted Young Violinist Gives Recital Today at Broadlands

An event of cultural interest scheduled for today is the recital at which Ruth Posselt, noted young American violinist, will give this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Broadlands, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, on West Pace's Ferry road. This drawing room affair will assemble a number of prominent Atlantans who are interested in music and who will accord this gifted and charming musician an enthusiastic welcome.

Prize Winner.

Miss Posselt is the winner of the 1929 Schubert memorial prize for young musicians. She is still under 20 and besides being a remarkable artist, she possesses a magnetic and vivid personality. Atlanta music lovers who recall the three artists, Muriel Kerr, Sada Suchari and Isabel Yalkovsky, appearing under the sponsorship of the Schubert Memorial Association in Atlanta last season, will know the quality of excellency they may expect in a recital by one of their prize winners. Miss Posselt won in a competition in which 152 violinists from all parts of the United States contested. Mrs. Ruby Chalmers will accompany Miss Posselt at the piano.

Miss Posselt will open her program with a "Theme" by Cornell, arranged by Tartini-Kreisler; other numbers to include "Siciliano et Rigaudon" by Francoeur, arranged by Kreisler; the "Paginini Concerto in D" with Cadenza by Ondricek; "Poem" by Fibish-Kubelik; "La Capriccosa," Reis; "The Ghost Dance," by Levy; "Tango," Albeniz-Dushkin; "What the Swallows Told," Burleigh; "Introduction et Tarentelle," Sarasate.

Transportation.

Any person without means of transportation to Mrs. Richardson's home will be furnished a place in an automobile going there. On purchasing a ticket at Phillips & Crew, it is merely necessary to state that the purchaser would like to be carried to Mrs. Richardson's; her name will be registered and at 3 o'clock automobiles will be at Phillips & Crew to carry ticket-holders to Mrs. Richardson's free of charge. There will be automobiles for as many as need transportation, but it will be necessary to state in advance that a seat in a car will be required. The admission fee is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

The election of Mrs. Fay Gaffney, of Columbus, for vice president general from Georgia was unanimously recommended.

Mrs. Christian Clarke was elected chapter parliamentarian. Mrs. J. N. Brawner was appointed chairman of the kettledrum party which has for many years been an annual social affair sponsored by the chapter members and their friends. The event will take place February 17 in Habersham Hall.

The birthday anniversary of the chapter will be featured on February 14 with the planting of a tree, given by Mrs. V. O. Rankin, on the grounds of Habersham Hall, in honor of Mrs. William Lawson Peel, founder of the chapter. Appropriate exercises are planned, the regent, Mrs. A. R. Colcord, making the dedicatory address.

The program was introduced with a group of songs sung by Miss Frances Woodberry, accompanied at the piano by Miss Helen Schied. Commemoration of the birthdays of Woodrow Wilson and Benjamin Franklin was featured at the close of the business session.

College Park Music Club Plans Show

College Park Music Club met Wednesday afternoon at the clubhouse, with the president, Mrs. Clarence W. Wall, presiding. The club heartily indorsed the plan of the ways and means committee with Mrs. C. W. Best chairman, to put on a fashion show in early spring. Interesting announcements pertaining to the biennial convention to be held in California were made by the president, Mrs. Wall, and letters from Miss Evelyn Jackson, relative to the McDowell festival program during the week beginning February 6, was read. The club was cordially urged to have either a junior or senior representative on this program.

After the business session Mrs. Wall presented Mrs. F. L. Beers, who gave a most instructive and entertaining lecture on "The Relationship of Music to Social Conditions." She traced the development of music and of civilization from the earliest beginnings to the present stage of marvelous perfection and power. The exposition was illustrated by groups of songs portraying the characteristic emotions of the period represented. The singers were dressed in the costume of the period, and Miss Manore Conlay represented the romantic period, and sang "The Lass With a Delicate Air," "When Love Was Blind," and "The Last Rose of Summer." Mrs. C. W. Wall illustrated the mid-Victorian period, and sang "Ben Bolt," "Billy Boy," and a more modern selection, "Jean." Miss Charlotte Adams, of Atlanta, rendered a group of modern piano numbers, consisting of "Kiss Waltz," "With Pleasure" and an original composition, as yet unnamed and unpublished.

Mrs. Julia Jackson Turner acted as installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Estelle Wilson, marshal; Mrs. Avis Brown, chaplain, and Mrs. Pearl Simmons, organist. The following officers were installed by Sister Turner: Mrs. Ruth Hathcock, worthy matron; Dr. C. L. Wall, worthy patron; Miss Anice Troth, associate matron; Loy Powell, associate patron; Mrs. Myrtice Minhinnett, secretary; Miss Alma Owens, treasurer; Mrs. Inez Haynie, conductress; Mrs. Signe Powell, associate conductress; Mrs. Carrie Allen, chaplain; Mrs. Mattie Bohler, marshal; Mrs. Edna Wall, organist; Mrs. Louise Nalley, Ada; Miss Kate Adams, Ruth; Mrs. Claudell Hunt, Esther; Miss Chessie Adams, Martha; Mrs. Annie Laurie Powell, Electa; Mrs. Della Hughes, warden; T. T. Thomason, sentinel.

Several distinguished visitors were present, including Henry Brown, past grand patron, Order of the Eastern Star, state of Georgia. After the installation talks were made by Mrs. Turner and Mr. Brown. Officers of the chapter were remembered with gifts for the service they had rendered during the year. Following the installation a reception was held in the banquet hall.

BEAUTY FASHIONS

A POPULAR "ENSEMBLE" STYLE.

7070. This model comprises a one-piece dress and a Bolero with a fitted sleeve and small turned up cuff. Light weight woolen or linen is suggested for its development. The dress has long shoulders forming a short sleeve extension over the top of the arm. Its slightly bloused waist portions are lengthened by yoke portions shaped in points on the front and to these yoke portions the skirt is joined forming deep box plaits in front. A neat and comfortable collar finishes the neck. A long straight tie or a bow tie forms a suitable trimming. A narrow belt covers the joining of the yoke to the waist portions.

Designed in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years, this pleasing style will require 3 7-8 yards of 36-inch material for a 14-year size. The dress alone will require 2 1-2 yards. The bolero alone will require 1 1-2 yard. To finsh dress and bolero with bias binding as shown in the large view will require 6 5-8 yards of 1 1-2 inch wide. A tie as illustrated will require 1-4 yard 35 inches wide cut crosswise.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Send 12 cents in silver or stamps for our up-to-date Fall and Winter 1930 Book of Fashions.

Mrs. Louise McMullan was installed worthy matron of Atlanta chapter, O. E. S., last evening by Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney, past matron of the grand chapter, assisted by Mrs. Donna Lawhorn, associate grand conductress as grand marshal; Mrs. Mary Berry, junior past matron as grand chaplain, and Mrs. Lucile Suttles as grand organist. T. C. Burford gave a talk on "The History of the Order of the Eastern Star," and Mrs. Louvenia Chaney presented the installing officer, Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney.

Other officers installed were: Worthy patron, D. G. McMillan; associate matron, Mrs. Grace Bramblett; associate patron, J. M. Mauldin; secretary, Mrs. Edna Printup; treasurer, Miss Julia Land; conductress, Mrs. Cora Dyer; associate conductress, Mrs. Sallie Mae Ford; chaplain, Mrs. Lecy Benson; marshal, Miss Ruth Craig; organist, Miss Myrtie Stephenson; Adah, Mrs. Alice Jones; Ruth, Mrs. Annie Zimmerman; Esther, Mrs. May Ola Odum; Martha, Miss Angie Fenn; Electa, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson; warden, Mrs. Ann Bowden, and sentinel, J. M. Stallings.

Mrs. McMullan was presented red carnations from the chapter by her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson, while Mrs. Pearl Baker sang "We Love You Truly."

Mrs. Mary Berry is retiring worthy matron and Dr. C. W. Miller is retiring worthy patron. Mrs. Pearl Baker sang "The End of a Perfect Year," and silver life membership cards were presented to Mrs. Berry and Dr. Miller from Atlanta chapter. Mrs. Lecy Benson presented Mrs. Berry with a set of china from the officers of 1930 and members of the chapter, Mrs. Grace Bramblett presented her a purse from the chapter, while Mrs. Mattie Miller gave her a pot of ever-blooming flowers from a friend.

Miss Ruth Craig, assisted by the mascot, Milton Stallings, presented the newly installed star points with their emblems and flowers appropriate to their station and Miss Laurie Zimmerman gathered the flowers and in the name of the star points presented them to Mrs. Louise McMullan. Mrs. Miller gave Mrs. Dabney a present from the chapter. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Pearl Baker and a violin solo was given by Miss Cowan, both being accompanied by Miss Lucille Suttles. Mrs. Lloyd presented Mrs. McMullan with a gift from Mesdames Sallie Mae Ford and Gladys Trice and Mrs. Berry presented her with a memory book. Mrs. Essie Zimmerman presented Mrs. Lawhorn with a gift from the chapter; Mrs. Edna Printup presented Mrs. Lucile Suttles with a gift from the chapter; Mr. Lawhorn presented Mrs. Louise McMullan, the new worthy matron, with a gavel from her husband, and Mrs. Edna Printup presented her a framed list of the officers, made by Mrs. Essie Zimmerman. Miss Ruth Craig received a vase, a prize offered to the star point making the fewest mistakes during the year, presented by J. M. Stallings.

Mrs. Dorothy Van Clive entertains this afternoon at her home at 10 Sheridan drive, in Garden Hills, at a children's birthday party in compliment to her little son, Dudley Van Clive, who will celebrate his fifth birthday. Mrs. Van Clive will be assisted in entertaining the guests by Miss Ione Price, Mrs. George L. Reed and Miss Lucille McLaughlin.

The following children have been invited; William Hamilton, Frank Coggins, John Coggins, Mark Cooper Pope III, Jacquelin Pope, Jean Schults, Bee Phillips, Vivian Beville, Margaret Troy, Howard McCall Jr., Mary Shropshire, Frank Winecoff, Gene Levert, Steve McIlvaine III, Donald Levert and Gayle Van Clive, sister of the young host.

New Music Club.

Tentative plans for organizing the DeKalb Senior Music Club were formulated at the studio of Mrs. S. R. Christie, 121 Adams street, Decatur, Thursday morning. As many of the business and professional men and women are engaged during the day, the organization will not be completed until a representative group can be assembled. Another meeting will be held at Mrs. Christie's studio Thursday evening, January 22, at 8 o'clock when officers may be elected, constitution and by-laws adopted, and dues decided upon. Mrs. J. M. Lennard will act as temporary chairman of organization and Mrs. Christie and Mrs. Walter Herbert will arrange a program of instruction and entertainment.

This club is intended to radiate into every part of Decatur and vicinity, and supply a pressing need, furnishing encouragement and incentive to higher and more extensive musical development and knowledge, among adults of all ages and walks of life. The dues will be nominal, and every effort made to organize and conduct a thoroughly helpful music club.

Druggist Finds New Way To Stop Headaches

Realizing that no one drug can conquer all headaches, as they come from so many causes, a North Carolina druggist developed a combination of several ingredients which function together, giving immediate, complete and safe relief for any kind of a headache, neuralgic, sciatic or rheumatic pain, quiets the nerves and leaves you normally buoyant, without depression or bad after effects.

This combination of pain-relieving ingredients, so efficient for women also at special times, may be found at any drug store o. soda fount under the name "B-C" (10c and 25c), ready for use in easing pains and quieting nerves in three minutes. "B-C" is the most amazing preparation o. its kind ever discovered and is guaranteed harmless.—(adv.)

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

WHAT BLACKY THE CROW SAW

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Who learns to always use his eyes
Will often see things that surprise.
—Black the Crow.

Each time that Farmer Brown's Boy had gone out to attend his lines Blacky had moved a little nearer to that fish on the bank. He didn't fear Farmer Brown's Boy and he was curious about things. Truth to tell, he has for some time been wondering if he might not help himself to one of those minnows in the pail. Blacky likes fish now and then, particularly when other food is scarce and hard to find. So the last time Farmer Brown's Boy went out on the Big River to pull in a fish Blacky was quite near that bait pail.

He was just about to spread his wings and sail down to it when a movement back of an old log half hidden by bushes and covered with snow caught his attention. He didn't fly down; he fixed his bright eyes on the spot where he had seen that movement. There might be a Mouse there and Blacky would just as soon have a Mouse as a minnow. So he waited. There it was again! A slim, trim, dark form came into view. Blacky's eyes snapped. That slim, trim form moved quickly. Indeed, it moved so quickly that it was hard to follow. It dodged back of the log, and Blacky lost sight of it for a minute. Then it reappeared near the embers of the fire, where it paused. An instant later it was beside the bait pail, and almost before Blacky understood what was happening there was one less minnow in that pail, and the slim, trim brown form had disappeared with it.

Blacky didn't know what to do. He wanted one of those minnows, but he had no desire to get into trouble with this slim, trim brown visitor to the bait pail, and he had a feeling, just a feeling, that this visitor would return. He was right. He would have had no more than time to fly down there before that slim, trim brown visitor was back. Another minnow was taken. It wasn't eaten on the spot, but was carried away. A dozen were taken while Blacky watched. Then Farmer Brown's Boy returned.

Blacky watched him bury two fine pickerel in the snow, and then look in his bait pail. Black chuckled inside at the expression on the face of Farmer Brown's Boy when he discovered the disappearance of his minnows. Once he looked up at Blacky, and there was suspicion in that look. Blacky ached to tell him what had happened, but, of course, he couldn't. Once more Farmer Brown's Boy looked with suspicion at Blacky. Then the look of suspicion vanished.

"No, you black rascal, you couldn't possibly have taken all those minnows," said he. "If you had your flock with you it would be a different matter. Just the same, I'm sure you know who did take those minnows. Was it another Snowy Owl? It must have been. I can't think of any one else who could have done this thing. Yet if you saw him, how comes it that you are not tormenting him and calling all your relatives to join in the fun? I give it up."

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

INSTALLMENT XLVIII.

"It makes me sweat even now to think of it," he said. "The room got to seemin' awful still and empty of a sudden, and the tickin' of a clock on the mantel was so loud an' slow, it made me prickle all over, as if I was comin' out with poison oak. I was only a kid, y' understand. There was just me an' the dead man on the floor—and the clock, that seemed alive.

"I couldn't get my legs to goin' for a minute. Seemed like they'd turned to wood. Then the clock began to whirr, gettin' ready to strike. It seemed like I just could not bear it to hear that clock striwe, there in the room with the dead man, lookin' on, the way it musta looked on when the guy came in that killed him. If I heard it strike, I knew I'd yell—I'd go plumb crazy.

"I hit my forehead a nasty crack on the side of the window, gettin' out, because I didn't look where I was goin'. But I didn't even notice the bump till it swelled up next day. I just ran—faster than I ever ran when the cops was after me. Maybe you've heard I ain't no killer. That's why. Seems like I never got over it, bein' just a kid and all. An' I was never no good at second story work after that. I tried it once or twice, but every time I'd get into a house in the dark, I'd think I was goin' to stumble over a stiff, and the sound of a clock tickin' would send me plump loco."

Callahan sank back. His blue prison shirt rose and fell with his shallow, panting breaths as he lived once again the scene he had been describing.

Peter leaned over the railing, peering at Callahan's white and shaken face.

"But you've got a record reaching back 10 or 12 years. This can't have happened recently." In a story bristling with stark impossibilities, he seized on the one that came uppermost.

"No, it was more than 10 years ago," Callahan answered dully. "When I got back to Mike and told him what had happened, he bawled me out proper. He told me I'd swing for that stiff's murder. I wouldn't have a chance. I'd already been in reform school, and had a record, even then. I'd broken into the house—leastwise, they'd call it breaking. Not a jury on earth would believe that the guy was already dead when I found him, if they knew I'd been there and lifted his wad and his jewelry. The money was all right, and we burned the wallet. But I never dared cash in on the ring, for fear they'd trace it to me."

"But—" Peted began, and stopped. There reallly was no place to begin to question a story which in no particular fitted the known facts. The room could not have been Mortison's room. There were no French windows in the lodge, and no street that went by it. The dead man could not have been Mortison, for Mortison had been dead only a month. There wasn't even a mantel or a clock!

Yet Callahan had not invented that story. He had not invented it, because he couldn't invent it. He might have been willing to lie, but no one of Callahan's mental caliber could have created these touches of grisly realism—the whirring of the clock before it struck, the "funny feel" of the finger which gave Callahan his first realization that the man was not drunk but dead. He simply could not have made it up! Yet what he had told was physically impossible. The one recognizable fact was the ring. Callahan said the ring had been in his keeping for 10 years—yet it had been stolen from Mortison's lodge a month ago.

Peter suddenly gave up the struggle to make sense out of so wild and horrible a grotesquerie. He would yield himself to the impossible, letting it lead him where it would.

"And all this happened—where?" he asked.

"In Piedmont."

"About 10 years ago, you say?"

"Eleven years ago this very month."

"Would you know the man again if you saw him?"

"I'll say I would! It was months before I got over wakin' up twitchin' in the night, because I'd been dreamin' about him."

"Did you ever find out who he was?"

"Sure. It was all in the papers the next day. He was a high-up swell, belongin' to one o' them old Spanish families. I never noticed whether they got anybody for the job or not—I beat it down to Mexico along about then, and I never heard no more about it. But I remember his name all right. It was a mouthful. Jerome de la Montanya, it was."

A thin ray of light pierced Peter's confusion for an instant, and was done. De La Montanya—De La M. But the similarity of initials explained nothing—it was only one more thing to be explained, where all was inexplicable. He drew the photographic prints from their paper wrappings, and held them high above the railing.

A guard strolled over to Peter's side and touched him on the shoulder.

"I'm just getting him to identify some photographs for a story I'm on," Peter explained. "You can see them in a minute."

"That's all right, Peter. I didn't recognize you for a minute. We have to be very careful, you know."

Peter turned from the guard to see Callahan cowering back in his seat, shrinking as far away from the prints as his chair would allow.

"That's—him!" he breathed in a gasping whisper. "Lord, it brings it all back as if it was yesterday."

"What would you say if I told you that this could not be the man you found dead—that it is physically impossible?" Peter leaned forward tensely, watching every flicker of expression on Callahan's face.

"I'd say you was a damn liar," Callahan said with a calm earnestness which carried the depth of his conviction. "That's him, I tell you!"

"And I tell you it can't be. Those photographs were taken a month ago. I saw the man's body myself, and the pictures were taken by my camera man. That is the face of a man named Mortison, who was shot to death in a cabin on a ranch near Hangtown."

"No," Callahan declared flatly. "He wasn't shot. There wasn't a bullet hole in him anywhere. I frisked him, you know, before I found out he was dead."

"But I tell you it couldn't be! This man was murdered, all right, but the circumstances were nothing like those you have given me. I saw the bullet wounds myself. Why I covered the trial of a woman they've just acquitted of his murder! And this ring was stolen from the room where he was killed."

In the face of the man's grim, unassayable certainty, Peter found himself on the defensive. It was he who was trying to convince Callahan that what he was telling was the truth.

"I don't know whether you're crazy, or trying to kid me, or what," Callahan answered. "I don't care what you tell me. I know! I never forget a face. Ask any of the boys, and they'll tell you the same. That's why they call me Snap-Shot Callahan. I never forget a face, and it's a cinch I'd never forget that one. If he hadn't been dead when I found him, that's the way he'd look today. But dead or not, that's him. That's Jerome de la Montanya."

Bossy's engine was skipping a beat. But then, it was seldom that all of Bossy's six cylinders functioned simultaneously, and to Peter the recurrent chug of the defective valve was a companionable sound. Bossy was talking to Peter, and when Bossy talked, Peter listened.

The rhythmic knocking of the engine as he drove back from San Quentin repeated over and over the terms of a syllogism that defied logic. If a thing was really impossible, it couldn't have happened.

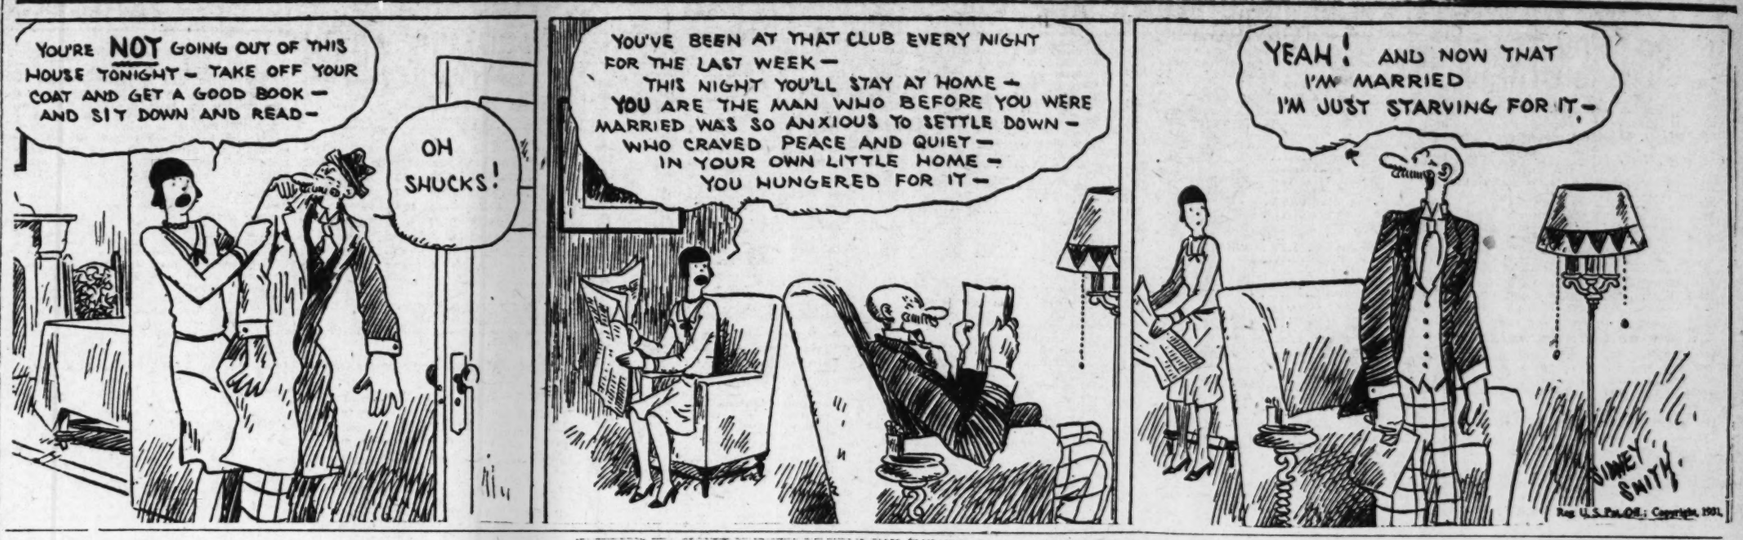

Yet Peter faced two mutually exclusive sets of facts, both of which he was forced to believe. He knew that Andrews' prints were photographs of Mortison. He know that Mortison had been shot a month ago.

Unless Aline Everett had fabricated an elaborate and motiveless lie about the ring—and in that case, how had she ever known of its existence?—the ring in his pocket had been stolen from the Chinese box in Mortison's room.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Back-tracking by professional bears who found themselves unable to dislodge any volume of selling orders gave stock prices a firmer tone today.

Net gains of 1 to 2 points in industrial and utility leaders were exceeded by a few thinly traded specialties, while the rails moved up slowly. Trading contracted to 1,321,240 shares, not much larger than Wednesday's turnover.

Coppers were strengthened by nominal increases in quotations on metal for March and April delivery.

British and French exchange rates moved in opposite directions, to the slight advantage of the former. Business in all currencies, however, was unusually dull. Bar silver's decline to the recent low unsettled the far easterns moderately.

BY DONALD C. BOLLES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(AP)—The price level in the bond market remained virtually unchanged today. The investment list displayed a strong undertone but advances in some issues were matched by declines in others. The slackening in new offerings at the end of the week proved a stabilizing influence but the prospect of further large issues next week put a damper on bidding. The volume of business declined.

Some wide movements occurred in industrial liens and stock privilege bonds while investment bonds held within fractional limits.

The general trend of prime railroad bonds was toward higher levels. Utilities were fairly steady. American Telephone bonds were under accumulation and the debenture 5s and sinking fund debentures both showed good advances.

United States government issues were again a strong feature.

German and Italian loans were active features of the foreign group.

Highlights OF Wall Street

By CHARLES W. STORM

Editor, the News Service of Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(NANA) Evidence that the general stock market was showing resistance to further selling prompted the professional shorts today to begin taking back at higher prices the stocks they had sold recently. Inasmuch as the bulk of business is being transacted for professional account, the purchases by shorts resulted in higher prices for those issues which have been under the most pressure last week. Even the professional shorts believe that there should be a further rally in the market based on technical conditions alone. The short interest is large and the borrowing demand for stocks is now larger than it has been for weeks.

Railroad shares were higher due to rumors that the interstate commerce commission would in the future make more liberal appraisals in their valuation of railroads. A number of constructive pools have been formed in several of the low-priced railroad stocks.

BETHLEHEM STEEL.

Pressure continued throughout the day on Bethlehem Steel. Rumors accompanied the selling to the effect that earnings for the fourth quarter of last year would run from 10 to 25 cents a share on the stock, thus lending color to reports that there would be a readjustment of the dividend on the common stock.

American Can also was subjected to selling pressure early in the session because of statements by sellers of the stock that there would be a reduction in the prices of cans in the near future.

WARNER MYSTERY.

Warner Brothers Pictures continues to be one of the stocks most heavily traded in notwithstanding the mystery which surrounds the nature of the important deal which is now declared to be under way. Public interest in the stock has become so great that big commission houses are steadily receiving inquiries from all parts of the country as to what the favorable development will be.

Increased activity in General Theatres Equipment marks the entrance of a new group in the market for the stock.

MORE POOLS FORMING.

The decline in the market last week has resulted in the attraction of more groups on the constructive side of the low-priced industrials and rails. New groups have appeared in the markets for Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Western Maryland, Chicago & Great Western preferred, Eureka Vacuum Cleaner, P. Lorillard and Gillette Safety Razor.

Inquiries being received by big brokerage houses continue to show that the general public are more interested in the stocks selling for a low number of dollars per share than in the so-called medium and high priced issues. It also develops that the bulk of the purchases of low-priced issues are being paid for with cash and the certificates taken out of the market.

RICHFIELD OIL SOUGHT.

Notwithstanding the announcement of a receivership on the previous day for Richfield oil, the stock showed strength. Accompanying the buying were reports that with the appointment of receivers for the company negotiations might be resumed with the Standard Oil of California or the Tidewater Oil, which made overtures for control some time ago at much higher prices.

Vanadium Corporation stock, which has been subjected to much pressure the last week, did better following reports that the directors planned next week to declare the regularly quarterly dividend on the stock.

BOROUGH LOSES SUIT FOR $2,000 DAMAGES

A case of unusual interest was decided in Fulton superior court, Judge J. H. Howard, this week when a verdict for $2,000 and costs was awarded Mrs. S. A. Blake, operating as the S. A. Clayton Beauty Parlor, for damages to her leasehold interest at 113 and 115 Hunter street, S. W.

The case was an outgrowth of the building of the viaducts, whereby Hunter street was blockaded from May to December, 1928, and the sidewalks reduced from ten feet in width to less than six feet and were further blocked by whiteway posts, water plugs and other features that render pedestrian traffic difficult.

The trial of th case consumed four days and a half and was hotly contested. The jury remained out for several hours before reaching a verdict. Mrs. Blake was represented by B. C. Broyles and Watkins, Asbill & Watkins, and the borough by City Attorney James L. Mayson, Winn and Savage.

SENATE AGAIN VOTES TO MODERNIZE SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—The senate today upheld its previous approval of the bill authorizing $30,000,000 for modernization of three battleships.

The three battleships to be modernized are the New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION No. 78

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Wedged in the crotch of a large tree, three white men greeted the coming dawn with weary eyes. "I'll let the lions have me," said one of them, "before I spend such another night." Footsore and hungry, in a vain search for game they blundered on. Unschooled in jungle craft, with the dull perceptive faculties of civilized man, there might have been fierce beasts or savage warriors on every hand for all they knew.

And so it was that shortly after noon, as they crossed a small clearing the tip of an arrow, barely missing Peebles' head, brought them to a sudden halt. Kraski threw his rifle to his shoulder and fired. "There," he cried, "behind those bushes!" and then an arrow from another direction pierced his forearm. "Down!" he yelled, "and let them have it!" Scarcely had they dropped when a score of pygmy hunters came into the open.

Now a volley of arrows whizzed above the prone men, while from a near-by tree two steel-gray eyes looked down upon the ambush. Fighting for their lives but unafraid, the three whites pumped lead into the band of yelling pigmies. Suddenly the foe withdrew into the concealing safety of the surrounding jungle. Utter silence reigned; and then a voice came from a near-by tree. "Do not fire until I tell you to," it said in English, "and I will save you!"

From the tree whence the voice had come there now sounded a single low, whistled note—and again silence. The pigmies, surprised, ceased their activities, but presently, hearing nothing more to arouse their fears, they emerged from cover and launched arrows toward the three whites. A white giant leaped from the branches of the jungle monarch, as a great black-maned lion sprang from the thicket below.

EIGHTH AUTO VICTIM TO BE BURIED TODAY

J. R. Martin, 73, Injured Last Friday, Will Rest at Greenwood.

Services for the eighth victim of automobile accidents to die in Atlanta since the advent of 1931, J. R. Martin, 73, of 847 Westmont road, who was fatally injured last Friday in an automobile collision near Fairburn, and died Thursday night, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of A. C. Hemperly & Sons. Interment will be in Greenwood.

Mr. Martin is survived by a daughter, Mrs. R. W. Kirk; five sons, J. R., Jr., M. M., B. W., Ollie and Claude Martin; a sister, Mrs. B. H. Bryan, and two brothers, Frank and Will Martin.

Funeral services for John E. Crawford, carpenter, of 19 Woodland avenue, who was almost instantly killed Thursday when he was struck down by a car driven by C. R. Durden, of 81 Highland avenue, on Peachtree road, near Peachtree Battle avenue, will be conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Calvary Baptist church by the Rev. W. M. Blackwell. Interment will be in Sardis cemetery, with deacons of the Calvary church serving as pallbearers. No charges were lodged against Durden, and the verdict of a coroner's inquest held at Blanchard Brothers Friday made no mention of an investigation, witnesses having stated that the driver was not at fault.

Other victims of automobile accidents who were killed or fatally injured since January 1, were H. C. Hamilton, Herbert Smith, Asbury Farr, Harry G. Bone, Jr., J. C. Ketchum and Coy Goodman. Three were hurt in the city limits, one in Fulton county, outside the city, and four in other counties.

RICHMOND COUNTY ROAD AUTHORIZED

Governor L. G. Hardman Friday authorized Richmond county to construct a road across property on the Gracewood home for feeble-minded at Augusta. The road, 100 feet wide and 4,835 feet long, will be a portion of the federal aid highway from Augusta to Waynesboro.

Action on the matter was hastened because Augusta is now engaged in constructing a large water main through the center of the proposed highway, the main being intended to supply the home, it was said.

NOTICE BY RECEIVERS TO ALL HOLDERS OF CLAIMS AND DEMANDS AGAINST SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Notice is hereby given that on the 23rd day of December, 1930, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia made an order in the cause in equity pending in said Court, No. E-215, entitled "Bethlehem Steel Company, Plaintiff, versus Seaboard Air Line Railway Company, Defendant," appointing L. R. Powell, Jr., and E. W. Smith Receivers of the property and assets of the defendant Company; that on the same day the same persons were appointed Ancillary Receivers of the property and assets of said defendant by the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida. Said order provides, among other things, that:

(1) All claims and demands against the said Seaboard Air Line Railway Company shall be presented to the undersigned Receivers on or before the 23rd day of March, 1931.

(2) All persons failing to present their claims or demands against the said defendant Railway Company to the Receivers on or before March 23, 1931, shall be barred from sharing in the benefits of the distribution of the moneys and proceeds of the properties of the Railway Company that now are or hereafter shall be in the hands of the Receivers, and from sharing or participating in the distribution of any of the proceeds arising from the sale of said properties, if such sale shall be hereafter adjudged and decreed in said cause. All claims and demands which are allowed by the Receivers, unless the Court shall hereafter otherwise determine, shall be deemed to have been proved, but all claims and demands not allowed by the Receivers shall be proved before a Special Master hereafter to be appointed, pursuant to such orders and directions in respect thereof as may be hereafter made by the Court.

(3) Nothing in said order prevents any claimant from prosecuting his claim by suit or action in any court of competent jurisdiction against said defendant Railway Company, whether such suit thereon has been heretofore or shall hereafter be instituted; provided, however, that no claim or demand shall be entitled to share in any distribution of any of the proceeds or moneys arising from the sale of any of the properties of the Railway Company unless presented to the Receivers as hereinbove provided. Nor will the present pendency, or filing hereafter, of any suit against the Railway Company be treated as alone sufficient filing of a claim.

(4) Nothing in said order requires holders of the bonds or other obligations, secured by mortgage or other lien on the property of said defendant Railway Company, or the trustees of any instruments under which said bonds or obligations are issued, to present to the Receivers their claims in respect of such bonds or obligations.

The forms for proofs of claims and demands required to be presented to the Receivers, as stated above, may be obtained from the Receivers at the office of L. L. Knight, General Auditor, Seaboard Air Line Railway, Portsmouth, Virginia, and claims and demands shall be presented to the Receivers at the office of the General Auditor. Forms for proofs of claims will be mailed to all claimants upon request.

Stimulation of trade between Georgia and Mexico will be the object of a talk by A. Horcasitas, commercial agent of the Mexican National railways, at 8 o'clock tonight over station WGST. Mr. Horcasitas, who comes here in the interest of the good-will tour to Mexico, sponsored by the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce, will speak on the possibility of creating fresh trade between the two countries, and of expanding that already in existence.

In a letter to F. H. Abbott, secretary of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Horcasitas stated, "I shall be glad to place myself at the disposal of all persons interested in the trip, or in trade with my country, and shall be glad to cooperate in any way that might be necessary for the success of this tour and for the increase of trade between Georgia and Mexico? The tour starts from Atlanta February 15 and will end here February 27.

LAST RITES SUNDAY FOR DR. C. H. HOUSE

Funeral services for Dr. C. H. House, 48, well-known Atlanta physician, who died Thursday night at his residence, 2041 House street, S. E., Kirkwood, after an illness of eight days, will be held at 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the Wesley Chapel church, in DeKalb county. The Rev. M. M. Maxwell, the Rev. J. L. Jackson and the Rev. W. T. Hamby will officiate and interment will be in the churchyard.

Dr. House was born in DeKalb county and had practised medicine in the Atlanta vicinity for the greater part of his professional career. House street, in Kirkwood, was named for his father, Judge W. P. House, a pioneer resident of that section. Dr. House was a graduate of the Atlanta Medical College, a member of the Fulton County Medical Society, a Mason and a Shriner, having been affiliated with Kirkwood Lodge No. 548, F. & A. M., and the Yaarab Temple. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Miss Mildred House; a son, C. H. House, Jr.; his father, Judge House; a sister, Mrs. M. C. Vaughn, and three brothers, Ben, John and Russell House.

MRS. K. K. KELLEY TO BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral rites for Mrs. Willie D. Kelley, 53, of 167 Elizabeth street, N. E., widow of the late Kendrick K. Kelley, former head of Kelley Brothers Company, who died Thursday night at a private hospital, where she had been confined for the last 10 days, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the residence. The Rev. Felton Williams and the Rev. J. E. Ellis will officiate and interment will be in West View, with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

A native of Atlanta, Mrs. Kelley was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Nealy. She was a graduate of Girls' High school and a member of St. Paul's Methodist church, taking an active part in missionary work at that institution. Surviving are her husband, Mrs. James Weems, of Houston, Texas, and Miss Katherine Louise Kelley; three sons, William D., Cobern F. and Kendrick K. Kelley, Jr., and her mother, Mrs. L. J. Nealy.

EIGHTH JUDGE QUITS N. Y. BENCH

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(UP)—George W. Simpson resigned his city magistrate's post today, making the third to surrender his position since the beginning of New York's vice investigation, and the eighth judicial officer to disappear from the bench within a year.

Simpson gave "ill health" as his reason for quitting the bench. Several cases in which he was the presiding magistrate have been under investigation.

FUNERAL SATURDAY FOR J. E. PINKARD

Rites for James Ellis Pinkard, 65, yard foreman for the Atlantic Steel Company, who died Thursday afternoon at his home, 11 White street, S. W., after a week's illness, will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Rock Spring Presbyterian church with Dr. William Huck and Dr. I. T. Hawk officiating. Interment will be in the Rock Spring cemetery.

A native of Dallas, Mr. Pinkard came to Atlanta in 1904 and had been connected with the Atlantic Steel Company for nearly 15 years. He was a member of the Baptist church. Surviving are his widow; two daughters, Mrs. H. J. Laudermilk and Mrs. H. V. Spurgeon, of Long Island, N. Y.; a son, Durell E. Pinkard, of Atlanta; fourth sisters, Mrs. C. F. Wade and Mrs. Will Robinson, of Rockmart; Miss Alice Pinkard and Mrs. Will Thomason, and a brother, John Pinkard, all of Rockmart.

Pitcairn's 300-horsepower autogiro, handled so capably by that very fine pilot, James G. Ray, probably has attracted more attention during its two-day visit here than any other craft ever seen at Candler field, with the possibly exception of Lindbergh's famed "Spirit." Seasoned pilots with thousands of hours in more conventional types, stood about with mouths agape while the curious machine, its rotor blades whirring, ascended at perilous angles—or what would be perilous angles to the orthodox airplane—and descended along a line not far removed from the vertical.

After a flight which carried him over the city several times, much to the wonder and delight of the earthworms below, Ray returned to the airport for more demonstration flights and found a huge crowd gathered to watch the strange craft's flying characteristics at close range. Pilots and visitors availed themselves of the opportunity to take hops around the field and toward the end of the afternoon, just before dusk, Johnny Kytle and Gene Brown, after a little verbal instruction, each took the ship up by himself. They had difficulty at first in overcoming their normal tendency to put the nose down after the gun had been cut, but after a few tries at it, were able to make respectable landings. Both were enthusiastic over the autogiro's performance and its possibilities from a commercial standpoint.

The present autogiro, which is the result of several years of experimental work at the Pitcairn factory at Willow Grove, Pa., in collaboration with Juan De La Cierca, its inventor, is the first of its type to be powered with a J-6 "nine" of 300 horsepower, and is a vastly improved machine over the earlier model which was exhibited at the Cleveland races in 1929. Ray, who stayed with Pitcairn after that company retired from the air mail field and devoted itself exclusively to manufacturing, has done most of the test flying on the craft, the Pitcairn company having the manufacturing rights in this country. Ray is scheduled to depart this morning for the east, with Greensboro as the next demonstration point.

Eddie Stinson, for many years one of the country's most famous airmen and a genuine "early bird," and said to possess more time in the air than any other flier in the country, was a visitor at Candler field for several hours Friday afternoon. He flew here from Miami, where he officiated at the races, and Friday night caught a train for Detroit, where he is one of the principal officials of the Stinson Aircraft Corporation. On his flight to Atlanta Stinson was a passenger in a Lycoming Stinson, piloted by E. S. Smith, who has been placed in charge of the southern territory of the Stinson selling organization. Smith is to stay here for several weeks and, together with Beeler Blevins, of the Blevins Aircraft Corporation, local Stinson dealer, will tour Georgia and neighboring states in quest of sales.

Only one other visitor checked in during the day, H. A. Kelly, pilot, and S. H. Kelly in a Warner Fleet, refueling at the Curtiss-Wright hanger on a flight from the Miami races to Baltimore.

Mr. Ruth Stewart, whose Moth has been put back into flying shape by Curtiss-Wright mechanics, is scheduled to resume her flight to St. Louis this morning, weather permitting. She will be accompanied by J. T. Wagner. Miss Stewart, attempting a night landing directly toward the field's floodlight a few weeks ago, went "blind" a few feet above the ground and washed out a landing gear strut.

Emmett Plunkett, parachute jumper of parts and the airport's champion harmonica player, is scheduled for a leap Sunday afternoon, it was announced Friday. The jump will be made in the neighborhood of 3:30 o'clock and from Pete Underwood's Pitcairn Orowing, it was stated. Sunday's customary rain seems to be in the offing, however, and the 'chute event may have to wait for more favorable weather conditions.

VIGOROUS PROTESTS GO TO CUBA ON CENSORS

World Press Congress Warns Secretary Stimson and Machado.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Suppression and censorship of Havana newspapers were protested today by the Press Congress of the World in communications to President Machado of Cuba and Secretary of State Stimson at Washington. The protests were made public by James Wright Brown, president of Editor and Publisher and executive committee member of the press congress.

The message to President Machado, signed by President Walter Williams of the University of Missouri, honorary president of the press congress, said: ". . . censorship of newspapers in any form disturbing or restraining dissemination of news or freedom of comment on news, to say nothing of suppression of all such publication, is inconceivable in this day of enlightened education.

"No matter what the objective may be, the continued suppression of newspapers of Havana is not merely undesirable but unwarranted and constitutes an archaic, ineffective method of righting a wrong. Indeed, the employment of such methods does extreme harm in aggravating any political or social condition.

"Leaders in the press of this country find it encumbent to protest vigorously the autocratic policies of dictatorship as exercised in the case of the suppression of these Cuban news papers."

The communication to Secretary Stimson, similarly worded, added:

"The first amendment to the United States constitution adopted December 15, 1791, guarantees our press freedom. Surely our interest in the welfare of the people of Cuba well justifies vigorous representations by our state department to the government of Cuba."

Borough Finance Sheet Facing Fight in Council

BUDGET BALANCED WITH $15,777,502 IN EXPENDITURES

Increased Cost of Water and Small School Allotment To Be Attacked by Dodd and White.

$1,000,000 DEFICIT OF 1930 ABSORBED

See Hope of Additional Money From New Legislation To Keep Schools Open Next Winter.

Supported by the administration and the pledges of the 13 members of the finance committee, the leanest finance sheet ever presented will go to council Monday for approval of that body, and is expected to occupy the spotlight in a fight of anti-administration forces to forestall its adoption. The total contemplated expenditure for all purposes is $15,777,502.

The reason for the meager appropriations is that approximately $1,000,000 in deficits are absorbed in the fiscal paper, but Mayor James L. Key Saturday issued a statement coincident with release of details of the sheet by City Comptroller B. Graham West, setting out that the sheet itself does not represent the borough's feelings regarding its employes, particularly the school department.

Key Issues Statement.

He stated that no salary cuts are contemplated, and added that over-anticipations are expected later to carry the full amount of the deficit, which his administration inherited, and in a formal statement declared that if any cut becomes necessary it will not be more than asking municipal employes to take two weeks' vacations without pay.

In addition he urged the board of education to co-operate in meeting the extraordinary demands on the treasury, declaring that there have been marked reductions in salaries of other departments and no increases. He also declared that if the board co-operates, it will go a long way toward curing the financial stress under which the school department has labored for many years, when that department ask citizens to empower it to levy and collect revenue for it independent of the mayor and council.

Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, chairman of the finance committee, in a formal statement Saturday morning declared that no salary cuts are expected and expressed the belief that additional legislation will provide funds to prevent closing of schools October 1, which W. W. Gaines, president of the Atlanta board of education, predicted Friday night.

Attack Is Planned.

Councilmen E. P. Dodd, of the fifth ward, and John A. White, of the fourth, will lead the fight against the sheet, they stated Saturday. Dodd will oppose adoption because insufficient funds are present to provide operation of schools for the entire year, and because of the threat that borough employes may be asked to contribute a part of their salaries or have them deferred.

White will direct his fire against the fiscal paper, because it contemplated abolition of water discounts for prompt payment of water bills, from which it is estimated that approximately $500,000 will be realized during the year.

Among proposals which have been made to relieve the financial embarrassment of the government through legislative action this summer, and through which the administration hopes to absorb the entire deficit without carrying any of it into 1932 are a hike of from 50 to 100 per cent in water rates and levy of an assessment, automobile and occupational tax.

Lack Money for Pay Rolls.

As the sheet is now prepared there is an overanticipation of $255,000 to provide for December salaries of employes of the general borough govern-

". . . And here's Bill." He says in the interview obtained by William O. Key, Jr., that jumping abruptly from a typewriter to a microphone as a means of conveying news to the public, is anything but what the Italians call dolce far niente—meaning "sweet idleness." Bill, who writes under his long name and broadcasts under his shorter cognomen, is on the air at 10:15 every night, over WGST. Staff photo by George Cornett.

BY WILLIAM O. KEY, JR.

I ran into Bill Key as he was coming out of the Blue Studio of WGST. He had a wild look in his eyes, somewhat like that of a man who has just made a parachute jump that is only partly successful. What hair he had was standing on end, and his breathing sounded like that of the horse that finishes last in the Kentucky Derby.

"You look scared," I remarked, as Bill slumped weakly into a chair.

"I am scared," he gasped, jerking nervously as a near-by telephone rang. "What are you scared about?"

After looking furtively around, Bill leaned over and whispered hoarsely: "They laughed when I sat down at the microphone."

"Nonsense," I told him. "You just imagine they did. Besides, what is there about a microphone to frighten a person?"

A hostile gleam flared up in Bill's eyes. "Listen," he rasped, "don't you start that, too! That's all they say around these radio studios—'Don't be afraid of a microphone!' It's not the microphone I'm afraid of. It's the thought of all those people in all those living rooms listening in. I've got a bad cold, William, old son, and if I break out in a sneeze it'll tear the loud speakers out of 5,000 radio sets. If I cough it's just too bad! I can't even afford one little sniffle. Whew!"

Bill Key wiped away the perspiration of nervousness. He looked bad, so I tried to brace him up by reminding him that he'd gone through a lot of things that were more trying than talking into a "mike." Remembering his own opinion, often expressed, that the most unnerving thing in human experience is the screams of women, I called his attention to that time up at La Plata, Md., in 1926, when he covered the story of the tornado that struck a schoolhouse, killing nearly 40 children. . . . The wild, unrestrained grief of mothers as they recognized little white forms in the debris; and, the next day, the rat-tat-tat of carpenters' hammers building little pine coffins, while the

$25,000,000 FUND FOR RED CROSS PASSED IN SENATE

Move for Reconsideration Made by Reed After Surprise Vote on Relief Measure; Veto Seen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The senate voted the $25,000,000 Red Cross appropriation today and then agreed to take it up again Monday to see if it should defer action.

The agreement came on a request of Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania. He urged that the senate delay action until February 9 to permit the Red Cross to complete its $10,000,000 campaign.

Democratic Leader Robinson agreed to reconsideration to permit a vote on the postponement. He was confident tonight, however, the senate would add its formal approval on Monday and that the postponement motion would be rejected.

Senate Is Determined.

The postponement was advocated by Reed after a call on President Hoover who received complaints yesterday from Red Cross officials that the senate's relief proposal was hindering their drive for funds.

Informed of the overwhelming majority in the senate in favor of the democratic relief appropriation, President Hoover today refused to approve it and rejected suggestions of a compromise.

The $25,000,000 fund is expected to be sent to the house early in the week. Although republican leaders there hoped to effect a compromise to reduce the amount and require private contributions to match funds appropriated by congress, there were indications that if the matter were put to a vote the full amount would be approved.

Mr. Hoover indicated he was prepared to make a statement to the public in his new controversy with the senate.

Senator Reed, who will ask post-

Price Reductions Announced by Ford

DETROIT, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, today announced reductions in prices of Ford cars and trucks of from $5 to $45 on 15 models.

"Reports we have received from our branches and dealers throughout the world lead us to believe that the automobile business will show a steady improvement," Mr. Ford said. "Since the automobile industry is a basic one, any betterment in it cannot help but have a beneficial influence on business generally.

In the case of the coupe and sedan, representing the models of greatest output, the price reduction is, respectively, $5 and $10, while the higher reductions are on the so-called de luxe models. The reductions are effective Monday.

In announcing a reduction at this time Edsel Ford followed a practice initiated by Henry Ford on several previous occasions when the automobile industry was suffering from business depressions. Reducing prices and speeding up production, the elder Ford invariably succeeded in his objective—hastening the general business recovery.

Clara Bow Resents Daisy's Implication That Her Hair Isn't Flaming Red

CLARA AND HER "BOY FRIEND," REX BELL, IN COURT.

BY JEAN BOSQUET.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 17.—(AP) Clara Bow, the "It" girl of the movies, propped herself up in bed at her Beverly Hills home today and talked freely about a blonde young woman, Daisy De Boe, and herself and her public.

Clara is in bed because she is sick—but not too sick to talk. There is just one thing Clara is talking and thinking about in these, the most hectic days of her impetuous career—Daisy De Boe, her ex-secretary, on trial for the alleged theft of $16,000 from the actress.

Speaking hoarsely because of a bad attack of bronchitis, Clara scored what "the peroxide blonde said on the witness stand about my hair." Her eyes flashing, she lifted her hand to her forehead and pushed back the tangled red curls.

"Look at the roots. Why that hair was red when I was born, been red ever since and is red now and always will be. Of course, I did have to have some henna on it. It was too dark and red and I had to brighten it up for the camera." That, Clara would have her public know, is proof she is a genuine redhead.

She fell back on the pillows and her eyes wandered about the luxurious bedroom of heavy silks, and deep, soft rugs and beautiful furniture. She thought a moment and told about the beginning of the end between Daisy and herself.

"The first rift was over Daisy going around with a Chinese photographer at the studio. I scolded her and she got mad. He was one of her boy friends.

"Then things got worse on my last trip to New York last year. One of my maids called my attention to the fact that Daisy's clothes cost more than mine and that her wardrobe was much classier."

One thing led to another, she recounted, and she found out about the money and "it was all over."

As Daisy is replete with denials of Clara's charges, so Clara is brimful of negatives.

The liquor Daisy claims she paid

BOARD TO SPEND FIFTEEN MILLION, PAVE 446 MILES

Far-Reaching Schedule for 1931 Will Include Virtual Completion of Bankhead Highway in State.

STATE TO AWARD CONTRACTS FEB. 3

Chairman J. W. Barnett Says Projects in View Will Lift State Out of Mud in Three Years.

BY R. E. POWELL.

Expenditure of approximately $15,000,000 which will call for the employment of between 5,000 and 6,000 men and practical completion of the Bankhead National highway through Georgia is on the highway program for 1931, officials of the state highway board said Saturday.

Specifications at present call for 446 miles of paving, 320 miles of grading and 200 miles of surface treatment, B. P. McWhorter, chief engineer of the department, explained.

In connection with the announcement of the scope of this year's program, McWhorter said the work is being rushed in accordance with the wishes of the federal government that all possible means of employment be utilized.

Out of Mud In 3 Years.

"If present and subsequent funds are left intact," Captain J. W. Barnett, chairman of the board, said Saturday, "we ought to be able to get Georgia out of the mud within three years time."

"We are working," he added, "toward a program of 750 miles yearly and are giving special attention to farm-to-market roads. We realize that the federal trunk routes must be rushed through but so far as the average Georgia is concerned the farm-to-market route is of equal importance.

"For this reason our engineers are considering the most strategic routes to the markets and we will rush their completion. At the same time we will attempt to link up the consolidated school districts, thus providing hard surface highways which should be of untold benefit to the educational interests."

Captain Barnett said that the plan is to build 250 miles of concrete or asphalt pavement, 250 miles of limerock or sand asphalt and 250 miles of surface treatment roads annually.

"With that program," he said, "we would have the state practically out of the mud in three years' time. At least it will mean that one should be able to go into any section of the state on pavement and encounter but little mud. Ten or 12-mile stretches would still exist but those would be closed up in subsequent years."

Stretches of the Bankhead highway, which is the main artery through Georgia from the north and east to the southwest, will be included in February 3 lettings, McWhorter said Saturday. Included in the approaching lettings for paving will be

MEXICAN 'QUAKE KILLS 71 IN CHURCH

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The death of 71 persons in a church at Guelatova during Wednesday night's earthquake was related today by Serge Eisenstein, Russian film producer, who returned here today with the first eyewitness account of the disaster.

Eisenstein, who has been in Mexico for some time making motion pictures, said that a great crowd was assembled in the church for a fiesta.

When the quake struck 50 worshipers and a priest were killed outright, and 20 have died since from injuries inflicted when the great, old spires, built years ago by the Spanish conquerors, toppled into their midst.

Guelatova is 30 miles west of Oaxaca, itself badly damaged by the quake.

The producer brought back a vivid account of the disaster in Oaxaca and environs, where he said block after block of houses lay in utter ruin. Many bodies exposed by collapsed walls in their cemetery crypts were burned, he said.

Eisenstein said he believed the death toll in the great Oaxaca valley was much higher than so far reported as he did not see even one village which appeared to have missed destruction or great damage.

He added that the bodies of the 71 who died at Guelatova had not all been recovered because of the great mass of debris inside the church. The four walls of the edifice were still standing but the roof and spires had caved in.

Eisenstein said that only a few buildings in Oaxaca, the largest and best-built in the city, had escaped de-

GRAPE JUICE MEN ARRESTED BY DRYS

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Twenty-three men were arrested here today by federal prohibition officers in a raid on a sales conference of representatives of the Ukiah Grape Products Company.

H. L. Duncan, special agent in charge of the bureau of prohibition of the department of justice, who directed the raid, released all but three of the prisoners upon their own recognizance to appear later before a United States commissioner. All were arrested on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

The men held for arraignment included A. E. Burnett, local manager of the Ukiah company, and two salesmen. Mr. Duncan said the salesmen possessed flasks of wine, made from the unfermented article they offered for sale. The wine, he said, had been used to demonstrate the product to customers.

Taking all responsibility for the raid, Mr. Duncan said he would charge violation of articles 18 and 29 of the prohibition statute. Selling grape juice "for the manufacture of wine" constituted conspiracy to violate the law, he declared.

Literature used by salesmen in offering nine kinds of juice to the public, also was seized. One folder quoted what was purported to be a statement issued August 6, by Commissioner of Prohibition Dr. J. M. Doran. The quotation said dry agents were "not to interfere with the manufacture and use of non-intoxicating cider

Georgia Bachelors Outnumber Maids by 53,845, Survey Shows

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Two additional reports on Georgia were issued by the bureau of the census today giving supplemental data on the population of the state by age, sex and color, together with statistics of the number of married, single, divorced and widowed persons, as found by the national enumeration of last April.

The first of the reports, dealing with marital conditions, listed the total number of males 15 years of age and over in the state on April 1, 1930 as 926,871.

Of this number, 304,704, or 32.9 per cent, were single; 569,512, or 61.4 per cent were married; 4.9 per cent were widowed; and 0.7 per cent were divorced. Of the 972,461 females 15 years of age and over, 250,859, or 25.8 per cent were single; 573,377, or 59 per cent were married; 13.9 per cent were widowed; and 1.3 per cent were divorced. Unlike the situation in most states, the percentage married among males is greater than the percentage married among females.

In general, very little change was noted in the percentage of persons single, married or widowed, between 1920 and 1930. However, the percentage of divorced is materially larger than it was ten years ago, but this class still forms less than 2 per cent of the total.

The percentage of single among the Alien Plane Fires On U. S. Air Patrol With Machine Gun

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—(UP)—A mysterious yellow and maroon monoplane believed to belong to an alien smuggling ring, engaged in a machine gun battle with a pursuing plane high above the ocean near Long Beach today and escaped in a thick blanket of fog.

The plane, flying without license numbers and with a machine gun mounted on its nose, was seen to land at the Vail airport early today and unload two or three persons. A few minutes later it roared away into the fog.

Employes at the field said the suspected aliens, believed to have been smuggled across the Mexican border, ran to a waiting automobile and were driven away.

The incident was reported to department of commerce officials stationed at the field. Under instructions from the department, Gene Hensley and Robert Forsetblade took off in a biplane and followed the mysterious craft in an effort to establish its identity.

As the two speeding planes passed over Alamitos bay, the pursuing craft closed in on its quarry. The mystery plane suddenly banked and dove at the biplane and the "dog fight" started. Each plane maneuvered to keep out of the banks and dives of the other.

Finally, the yellow-maroon monoplane unloosed a burst of machine gun bullets in an effort to disable its pursuer. Seeing they were at a disadvantage, Hensley and Forsetblade gave up the chase and returned to the Vail field airport.

Captain Charles Morgan, of the department of commerce, took charge of the investigation.

BUS TAX INCREASE IS MEETING FAVOR

Hope that an additional $500,000 in taxes will be raised by the passage of a bill regulating motor buses and trucks in Georgia, to be added to the $1,500,000 the special session of the legislature is seeking through a discount of W. & A. railroad rentals, developed Saturday while the lawmakers were recessing over a week-end. They resume sittings at 11 o'clock Tuesday.

Members remaining in the city, including some of the old timers in legislative experience, recalled that Governor Hardman was persuaded to amend his original proclamation calling the solons back chiefly because of the outbreak of war between railroads and bus lines and since the session started Speaker Richard B. Russell, Jr., also Georgia's governor-elect, is

POWER COMPANY PLANS BIG OUTLAY

A program for 1931 involving the expenditure of approximately $21,000,000 in Georgia during the year was announced Saturday by P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company. While expenditures for new construction will be considerably less than the record-breaking investment by the company for this purpose during 1930, the aggregate expenditure during 1931, including wages, other operating expenses and taxes in addition to new construction, will total the above figure. Each of the approximately 400 cities and towns in Georgia served by the company will share in the expenditure, it was stated.

In contrast with last year's construction program which emphasized the building of additional generating plants, 1931 plans will be centered on improvement of the transmission and distribution systems, in order that new high standards of dependability of service to all points on the system may be reached, the announcement said.

Although a comprehensive new construction program has been mapped out for 1931, his class of expenditure has been curtailed by comparison with 1930, Mr. Arkwright said, because of the decreased demand for electric power in the territory served due to general business conditions and because of the difficulty of raising additional capital for new construction in the face of decreases in the company's net earnings luring the past year.

To Improve Distribution.

The year's construction program is based on an extensive study of electric power conditions throughout the territory served and is designed to improve the entire transmission and distribution system. Major additions are planned for the Commerce, Dublin, Lindale and Newnan primary substations, all of which are strategic points in the transmission and distribution of high-tension electric energy.

Greenville Official Shot in Back; Fortune-Teller's Advice Blamed

L. C. Clark, 43, clerk of the superior court of Meriwether county, was brought to a hospital here Saturday night with a bullet wound in his back. Dr. R. B. Gilbert, of Greenville, who accompanied him, said it was inflicted following an argument with Clarence Mallory, 65, proprietor of the Greenville hotel, in Greenville.

Dr. Gilbert told a Constitution reporter that Mallory had come to him several days ago and said he had been told by a fortune-teller that "Clark was trying to injure me."

Saturday night, when Clark entered the lobby of the Greenville hotel to meet a group of friends who were to attend a dinner as guests of the warden of the Greene county convict camp, the physician stated, Mallory demanded an "apology."

"When Clark replied that he did not know what Mallory was talking about, an argument followed," Dr. Gilbert said.

"Mallory picked up a shotgun, and just as he fired, Clark grabbed it and

The Priceless Ingredient

In the city of Bagdad lived Hakeem, the Wise One, and many people went to him for counsel, which he gave freely to all, asking nothing in return.

There came to him a young man who had spent much but got little, and said, "Tell me, Wise One, what shall I do to receive the most for that which I spend?"

Hakeem answered, "A thing that is bought or sold has no value unless it contain that which cannot be bought or sold. Look for The Priceless Ingredient."

"But, what is this Priceless Ingredient?" asked the young man.

Spoke then the Wise One, "My son, the Priceless Ingredient of every product in the market-place is the Honor and Integrity of him who makes it. Consider his name before you buy." SQUIBB.

SCHOOL 'DIVORCE' MOVE IS PLANNED

Independent Financial Basis Will Be Sought, W. W. Gaines Declares.

Support of a strong body of Atlantans will be sought in preparation of proposed legislation placing the Atlanta board of education and the school system on an independent financial basis, it was announced Saturday by W. W. Gaines, president.

Mayor James L. Key will be asked to appoint such a body to assist the board in mapping legislation to carry out the recommendations of the finance committee of council and to "sell" the idea to Atlantans as "the salvation of the public school system."

The board of education, under the legislative committee, headed by Commissioner S. C. Nolan, of the ninth ward, will take the lead in the matter, but will seek the co-operation of the mayor and council "and every other responsible agency in seeing that the schools are prepared and equipped to meet the demands made upon them by Atlantans."

"Just as soon as it is feasible, I shall confer with Mayor Key, asking him to assist in selection of a strong group of outstanding Atlantans to help solve this problem," Mr. Gaines declared. "We have worked on the matter for many years, but never before has success been so promising. At the present time the mayor and council are required under the law to appropriate not less than 26 per cent of the gross revenue for educational purposes.

"Every year that is done, and many times the amount has even exceeded the 26 per cent. The whole trouble lies in the fact that the receipts of the borough vary greatly, and when a percentage amount is set up for schools, and the borough fails to get the amount it anticipated, the school allocation is slashed its pro rata share.

"Another oustanding objection to the present system is that one body raises the funds and another administers them. That is a fallacy and should not longer be permitted to exist."

The mayor has advocated complete divorcement of the school system from the mayor and council, and the finance committee has passed resolutions pledging the support of the mayor and council to any plan which will solve the problem, but called on the board to take the initiative in the matter.

JOHN LEFTWICH BARRY DIES IN NEW ORLEANS

John Leftwich Barry, 56, member of a pioneer Georgia family and formerly well known as an insurance man here, died Saturday night at his residence in New Orleans, where he had lived for the past 17 years. Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock Monday morning at the graveside in Oakland cemetery by Dr. S. R. Oglesby.

A native of Atlanta, Mr. Barry was a son of the late John A. Barry. During his residence here he represented the Securities Company and the Home Life Insurance Company of New York. On removing to New Orleans he became associated with his brother, Eugene T. Barry, in the marine insurance business and at the time of his death was loan representative of the Whitney Bank & Trust Company.

Mr. Barry formerly was a member of the Central Presbyterian church here. He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Conklin Carroll, of Raleigh, N. C.; a daughter, one grandchild, and another brother, Robert M. Barry, of Gillette, N. J.

Lost Raphael, Said Priceless, Found in U. S.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 17.—(UP)—A privately owned "lost Raphael" was found in New Orleans today, according to a statement to the United Press from Dr. Erik Burg Von Bergen, German baron and curator of the private collection of Prince Louis Ferdinand of Bavaria.

News of the picture, which Dr. Bergen described as the "outstanding picture in all America," thrilled the art colony.

Dr. Bergen refused to name the owner, saying the value of the picture made it unwise.

"I am convinced the picture is a Raphael, and as soon as my findings are corroborated in Munich, where the picture is to be sent, the details will be told," he said.

"Even as it is, the picture is priceless and the owner should not be endangered."

Baron Bergen said he came to New Orleans to view the picture upon suggestion of Prince Leopold of Prussia.

"Prince Leopold was here a year ago and, fascinated by the picture, he insisted I come to New Orleans and see it. At once, after viewing it," Bergen said, "I was convinced and made arrangements for it to be sent to Munich."

Art dealers here were of the opinion that if the picture was a Raphael, it was one of the many great art works brought here from the continent by the early settlers, who first made their homes here more than 200 years ago.

Bergen said he was spending two years in America, looking over pictures and lecturing on art.

Corporation Recognizes City as Ideal Center for Distribution to All of Southeast.

Recognizing Atlanta as the ideal distributing center of the southeast the Paramount-Publix Corporation Saturday announced the establishment of a divisional booking office here.

The Atlanta office will have jurisdiction over film buying and booking in all theaters operated by the corporation in Alabama, Florida and Georgia. Albon C. Cowles is to be the divisional manager.

In discussing the establishment of the new office, Mr. Cowles said: "I think it is now a recognized fact that Atlanta is the logical distribution point from which to most effectively cover the southeast. Atlanta has been telling the nation at large for years that on account of her geographical location and railway facilities that the southeast can be served from Atlanta far better than any other point.

"The concentration, for distribution of products throughout the southeast, at Atlanta by so many concerns operating on a national scope demonstrates the fact that Atlanta is now receiving recognition as the distribution center which she has always deserved," he concluded.

The newly established office will be under the supervision of Mr. Cowles, as divisional booker. He is a native Atlantan, and a graduate of the Georgia Tech civil engineering class of 1916. After four years in construction work in Alabama he accepted a position with Southern Enterprises, Inc., which at that time was the operating organization headed by S. A. Lynch. With them his rise was rapid. In 30 days he was manager of a theater at Asheville, N. C., and six months later was manager of four theaters in Spartanburg, S. C.

Two years later he was placed in the home office of the Lynch organization here and was made assistant director of public relations. Six months from that time he was made director of public relations and held that place until his organization was absorbed by the Hays organization in New York. He was then made district booker for Alabama and Georgia and when Southern Enterprises was absorbed by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation he was transferred to their home office in charge of booking all theaters in the southeast.

After some while spent in Jacksonville, Fla., later where a booking office was established, he returned to New York and made arrangements for the re-establishment of the Atlanta office with jurisdiction over Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee. His present appointment was the next step.

Several months ago the booking office at Jacksonville was closed and moved to Atlanta.

Some of the most important theaters to be controlled from a booking standpoint by the newly created booking office will be: Keith's Georgia and Paramount, Atlanta; Alabama and Strand, Birmingham; Modjeska and Imperial, Augusta; Capitol and Ritz, Macon; Paramount and Strand, Montgomery; Florida, Jacksonville; Tampa and Victory, Tampa; Olympia and Fairfax, Miami; Arcade, Kettler and Stanley, West Palm Beach; Polk, Lakeland; Florida and Vivian, Daytona; Paramount and Beaux Arts, Palm Beach; Community, Miami Beach, and a considerable number of smaller theaters in the states of Alabama, Florida and Georgia.

TAYLOR, WHITE PLEAS REFUSED

Bribery convictions of ex-City Clerk Walter C. Taylor and Jack White, broker, will be taken to the higher courts on appeal, it was announced Saturday after Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton superior court, denied new trials in cases of both men.

The cases passed on Saturday were Taylor's third conviction, involving an alleged bribe by Mike Ellman, auction jeweler, in a license transaction, and White's second conviction, involving alleged conspiracy in connection with bribery.

Taylor's first conviction, on a charge of receiving $500 from M. P. Roane in a sidewalk paving matter, was reversed last week by the court of appeals. His second conviction, on a charge of attempting to bribe former Councilman J. A. Beall, is now in the appellate court. White's first conviction also is in the higher court.

so that the work at these points will improve the quality of service in a wide area surrounding each of them. Voltage regulators will be installed at Dublin and Americus primary stations to stabilize voltage conditions in the southeast Georgia and south Georgia areas.

Improvements will be made at the north Georgia generating stations on the Tallulah and Tugalo rivers and to the large generating plants at Bartlett's Ferry and Goat Rock, on the Chattahoochee river, near Columbus. These improvements will be of benefit to electric power consumers generally in those sections. The improvements at Bartlett's Ferry will be of special benefit to Macon and Thomaston, as well as to Columbus and the surrounding territory.

Wherever necessary, high tension transmission lines will be equipped with new insulators and other equipment to increase their efficiency. Especially important in this work will be the modernization and strengthening of the 110,000-volt line from Columbus to Bartlett's Ferry. A large expenditure also will be made in order to provide natural gas service to Columbus.

Another large item in the construction program will be improvement of the 110,000-volt transmission line from Tallulah Falls to Augusta, which will insure better service to Augusta and the eastern Georgia territory. An appropriation also has been provided for modernization of the Augusta transportation system.

To facilitate speedy dispatching of power and handling of emergencies, the company's private telephone system will be improved extensively.

Push Rural Work.

Building of rural lines, bringing power to farms and communities hitherto without electric service, will be pushed.

In the Atlanta area, the comprehensive modernizing of both underground and overhead distribution systems, which was begun last year, will be carried forward. Among the major items planned for the year will be the installation of high tension underground cables from the new Grady primary station, now approaching completion, to the business section, which will give this section an entirely new source of power. Spring street, Boulevard, Stewart avenue and Moreland avenue sub-stations will be enlarged and will be equipped with voltage regulators to hold the voltage steady when current is delivered to customers. A new substation will be built at Hapeville, and Piedmont avenue and West Lake substations will be enlarged.

Outside of improvements to the electric operating equipment, the company will carry on a program of general betterment of its street railway trackwork and other facilities.

An analysis of past progress in the extension of electric service to communities previously without this advantage has recently been completed by the company and revealed that the company is now supplying modern electric service to 249 communities in the state with less than 1,000 population each, the aggregate population of these communities being 94,630. The survey also showed that 185 communities which have no water systems and 237 communities which have no sewerage systems are being supplied with electric service comparable to that in metropolitan centers.

the load of shot went into the hotel wall," the physician stated.

Averting injury, Clark is said to have drawn a knife and forced Mallory to put away the gun. Leaving the hotel, Clark is said to have been 45 feet away from the building when Mallory fired from the hotel porch.

"Clark fell on the street in front of my office," Dr. Gilbert said. The load entered his left shoulder and side. Hospital authorities said that an examination revealed that Clark's wounds were not dangerous.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 17.—(AP) Their faces painted black and wearing slouchy overalls in a police gambling raid in the negro section here tonight, two policemen, Teddie Williams and Lee Allen Williams, were shot down and killed by Lemon McDaniel, a negro lookout at a Hotchkiss street reputed gambling house. Both were young men.

TAMPA HARBOR GIVEN $395,940

Allocation for Development Work Made By War Department.

Allocation of $395,940 for work in Tampa harbor, which handles greater tonnage than any other port between Hampton Roads and the Mississippi river, has been announced by the war department. The Tampa allocation was the largest of a total of $845,440 to be expended during the coming fiscal year for improvement of Florida deep sea waterways.

Tampa authorities will use the fund for widening the chanel in Sparkman bay, deepening the channel at the bar, and for maintenance purposes. During the next three years a total of $748,000 will be spent for improvement of the Tampa port facilities.

Other allocations in Florida include St. John's river, Jacksonville, $111,000; Miami harbor, $200,000; Charlotte harbor, $45,000; Caloosahatchee river, Lake Okeechobee, $50,000; St. Mark's river, $11,000, and East Pass channel, Choctawhatchee bay, $10,000.

In announcing the allocation to Tampa and other ports, the war department stated that there is almost $5,000,000 remaining of the original $22,500,000 appropriation. This residue will be distributed among the various ports just as soon as detailed plans, rights of way and certain other questions have been settled.

Tampa is the headquarters terminal for 15 steamship companies and 46 steamship lines operate regular schedules from Tampa to all parts of the world. In addition, 14 lines make Tampa a base of operations for cargo-carrying "as offers," operating "tramp" service from that Florida port to the far east, Scandinavia, Cuba, Germany and other European ports. It is the principal port city for towing, lighterage and wrecking service, with eight large organizations devoted to those operations having headquarters in Tampa.

If you

Get Up Nights

You Can't Feel Right

Everybody knows that sleep is nature's way of rebuilding energy and tired, worn-out tissues—so if poorly functioning kidneys and bladder get you up and down several times a night, and cause terrible backaches, leg pains, nervousness, irritation, and burning acidity, you are bound to feel run-down, depressed and discouraged.

What you need to overcome such functional irritation is a double action treatment. One to soothe and tone the irritated bladder and urinary system, and another to act as a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys, helping them in their function of filtering and purifying the blood of impurities and poisons, such as uric acid.

Fortunately, it is now possible to get this kind of double treatment at any drug store under the name of Cystex (pronounced Sisstex) with the understanding that it will not cost a penny if it does not quickly soothe irritation, improve restful sleep and energy, and satisfy in every way.

Cystex is not a secret or patent medicine—the full list of ingredients is in every package, and any druggist can tell you it is a highly meritorious preparation, without dopes, narcotics or harmful drugs.

Take a tip. Get Cystex from your druggist today. You won't have to wait long, because it starts circulating through the system in a few minutes, and you can soon see for yourself the great things this remarkably successful treatment can do for you. You can't afford to delay because it's only 60c; furthermore, if it doesn't quickly do the work to your complete satisfaction, merely return the empty package and your money will be refunded.—(adv.)

FESS DENIES 'RELIGION' ATTACK UPON RASKOB

"Infamous Untruth" Brand Placed on Alleged Shouse Statement.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Chairman Fess, of the republican national committee, answered today the assertion he said Jouett Shouse, chairman of the democratic national executive committee, had made that the republican committee was attacking John J. Raskob because he was "the leading Catholic layman."

"This is an infamous untruth," Fess said in a written statement issued by the committee. "This attempt to inject the religious issue is made for the very apparent purpose of throwing a smoke screen around the vigorous attacks upon Mr. Raskob by democratic leaders such as Governor Dan Moody, of Texas, and Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina.

"The republican party paid no attention to Mr. Raskob until the public exposure of his sinister plan to impair or destroy the republican party by scurrilous and slanderous attacks upon President Hoover and his administration.

"This conspiracy, which has been without counterpart in the history of American politics, was disclosed by a democrat of unblemished party record, Mr. Frank R. Kent, of the Baltimore Sun, who asserted in the September issue of Scribners' Magazine, that Mr. Raskob had set up and was financing an organization in the nation's capital for the sole purpose of 'smearing' the president of the United States.

"The republican national committee called the attention of the country to this scheme as exposed by Mr. Kent. Beyond this we care nothing about Mr. Raskob. The democratic party is welcome to him and all of his millions."

Vacuum Cradle Song Barred by Radio Body

STURGIS, Mich., Jan. 17.—(AP) A Sturgis mother's vacuum cleaner lullaby for her baby has been silenced by the city radio commission.

The woman told investigators she kept the motor of her vacuum cleaner running during the evening hours because the noise had a soothing effect on her baby and was a more effective lullaby than any she could croon.

The commission, however, ruled she must confine her vacuum cleaner pacifying to daylight hours. Operation of the machine was interfering seriously with neighbors' reception of radio programs, she was told.

Grandson of Uncle Remus Writes About Lepidoptera

Having ascertained that in the last 134 years only one authentic volume had been compiled on Georgia's many species of butterfly and moth life, Lucien Harris, Jr., grandson of Joel Chandler Harris, creator of "Uncle Remus" and other plantation folklore, has written a booklet on lepidoptera, which was released by its publishers Saturday. Mr. Harris is one of the outstanding authorities on that phase of entomology, which he follows as an avocation. Staff photo by George Cornett.

BY WILLIAM O. KEY, JR.

Having chosen a field of literature akin to that in which his famous grandfather excelled as a raconteur of lore about Nature's lesser children, Lucien Harris, Jr., grandson of Joel Chandler Harris, Saturday released the first edition of his scientific brochure on lepidoptera—or, as Uncle Remus would probably have put it, Sis Butterfly and Brer Moth.

So little has been done in the southeast, and particularly in Georgia, toward recording the natural history of this state, that young Mr. Harris, wooing the divine afflatus of literature and finding the field of animal life pre-empted by his noted sire, decided to present the story of the lepidoptera. It is the only authoritative work of a scientific nature to be compiled in this region since 1797, and is replete with information gleaned after 15 years of study by the author.

Since boyhood, Mr. Harris has collected butterflies and rare moths. With the same avidity that a philatelist searches for unusual stamps he began by "chasing butterflies" in the fields and wooded sections near the old Harris home in West End. After amateur efforts had brought him a big collection of unclassified species, he decided to go in for specimens as an expert, and then began the study of that particular phase of entomology.

All Species Dealt With.

Under the simple title, "A List of the Butterflies of Georgia," Mr. Harris' brochure deals with every species ever to be found in this section, and in at least one instance he has discovered an entirely unknown specimen, which he has classified to the Smithsonian Institution. It is the melanic female caught in Atlanta in 1926 by F. T. Naumann, and it is now in the museum at Emory University. Mr. Harris gave this specimen the entomological classification of Eurema Jucunda ab. Fusca, and it will be known to science under that name.

Mr. Harris' booklet is the first volume of a uniform series to be published by the Georgia Naturalist Club dealing with the natural history of this state. The club was organized about two years ago and its membership is comprised of Mr. Harris as representative of the lepidoptera division; Professor H. Reid Hunter, dendrology, or study of trees; Dr. R. C. Rhodes, zoology; Dr. Wallace Rogers, ornithology; Dr. Ralph E. Wager, ornithology; Professor Perry W. Fattig, entomology; Dr. W. B. Baker, botany, and Earle R. Greene, ornithology.

Mr. Harris, during his study of the butterfly and moth, has discovered many curious facts concerning these lepidoptera. For instance, he reveals that a strange arctic species of butterfly exists on Mount Washington, in the White range, of New Hampshire, that quite possibly may have existed since the prehistoric ice, or glacial age. This species is found only on the summit of that particular mountain.

Puzzle of Nature.

Another queer fact is the existence on a lone mountain range in Africa of a species that is not found anywhere else on the whole dark continent. Yet that variety of lepidoptera abounds throughout most of the United States. How it migrated to Africa, and why it selected that mountain peak of all places is one of nature's puzzles.

Last summer Mr. Harris, who is connected with The MacMillan Company, publishers, was passing through Montezuma. He noticed a strange type of butterfly on a shrub known as Cassia. Investigating, he found that the butterfly had been laying eggs in the shrubbery and closer study revealed that the insect was none other than the Red Barred Sulphur, which is native to Mexico. To encounter one in this section was extremely unusual, Mr. Harris said.

The only authoritative book that had been compiled previously on Georgia insect life, inclusive of the lepidoptera, Mr. Harris said, was that published in 1797 by one mysterious John Abbott, who appears to have come suddenly to Georgia from England, studied insect life; complained in one brief phrase that "Georgia is a very wooded country and insects are scarce," and vanished. Some of his illustrations of the lepidoptera were published in England, and one book made its way back to Georgia as the first and only authentic work on the subject.

LIONS' CLUB WILL HEAR TAX GROUP'S COUNSEL

Judge Orville Park, special counsel of the Georgia Tax Revision Association, will address the weekly luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Lions Club at the Henry Grady hotel Tuesday, to which the members of the house ways and means and senate finance committees of the general assembly have been invited as guests of honor.

Special busses will go to the capitol at 12 o'clock to take the legislators to the hotel and return them in time for the committee session which is to hear institutional heads discuss the state's financial emergency.

The meeting has been arranged, Sam Levy, Lions president, said, in order that club members may get a clearer understanding of the state's financial and tax problems now being considered in a special session of the assembly.

TURKO-RUSSIAN ISSUE DELAYS BRIAND PARLEY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Representatives of 26 European nations debated all day a proposal to invite soviet Russia and Turkey to participate in their examination of Aristide Briand's project for a federation of European states, but at the end of the session they turned over this problem to a subcommittee with instructions to report on Monday.

This evening they turned again to the economic situation, seeking a basis for concerted action to remedy the ills of industry and commerce. They discussed tariffs, the possibility of preferential rates for agricultural countries and the application of the "most favored nation" principle.

Its work must go over now into next week and the commission will have to divide time with the League of Nations council which convenes on Monday, facing the grave questions of disarmament and minority interests.

Turkey and Russia are not members of the League of Nations and, since this commission is operating within the league structure, some of the delegates questioned its authority to invite non-leaguers.

Holland, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania took a definite position against the invitation. Belgium and Switzerland sided with them, pointing out that they have no diplomatic relations with Russia and do not wish to work with representatives of Moscow.

JAIL RIOT AVERTED AT NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A threatened riot at the city jail was averted today by a squad of policemen who drove belligerent prisoners back into their cells without bloodshed.

The prisoners were being exercised in the jail yard but when they were ordered to return to their cells a group of eight refused to obey and defied authority. A squad of policemen were rushed into the yard and drove them back with clubs.

Two killers and two robbers broke out of jail a few days ago after starting a disturbance in the jail.

F. O. FIELDS FOUND DEAD AT HOTEL

F. O. Fields, 60, was found dead in bed at the Northern hotel, 70 1-2 Hunter street, at noon Saturday, according to a report by Policemen C. Carroll and J. D. Wood. The death was discovered by J. J. Riker and J. C. McDonald when they opened Fields' room after the maid had received no response to her knocks, it was reported. The body was removed to the funeral parlor of J. Austin Dillon. An inquest developed that Fields died of apoplexy.

Why Can Pussy Wash Face When Dog Can't?

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Why is a museum? Dr. Arthur Sterry Coggeshall, new curator of the Illinois State museum, answered this question with another, namely, "Why can a cat wash its face while a dog can't?"

The curator's answer to the first question is that museums are useful because they are full of countless bits of practical information, such as: Cats can wash their own faces because they have collarbones like human beings, but dogs haven't.

GAS COMPANIES PLAN EXPANSION

Public Service Corporation To Spend $10,000,000 During 1931.

Plans for 1931 of the Southern Cities Public Service Corporation, owners of practically all the distributing gas companies in Georgia, call for operations and construction expenditures totaling around $10,000,000, officials of the corporation stated Saturday night.

Of this amount, approximately $2,000,000 will be spent in Atlanta, it was said.

The corporation owns the Atlanta Gas Light Company; the Consumers Gas and Coke Company, Waycross; the Georgia Public Utilities Company, operating in Augusta, Rome and Griffin; the Georgia Public Utilities Corporation, operating in Athens and Brunswick; the Macon Gas Company, and the Valdosta Gas Company, in Georgia, and gas properties in Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina and Texas. It also owns controlling interests in the following Georgia companies: Georgia Natural Gas Corporation, operating in Barnesville, Calhoun, Carrollton, Cedartown, Forsyth, Milledgeville, Newnan and Rockmart.

BACHELORS HOLD LEAD IN GEORGIA

foreign-born whites, both male and female, is relatively small, mainly because most of the foreign-born whites in this country are past the usual age of marriage it was said. The percentage of single and married among both negro males and females is lower than among the native whites, while the percentage of widowed and divorced is higher than that for native whites.

The number of widowed female (135,213), was almost three times the number of widowed males (45,205). This represents a rather higher proportion in the number of widows to widowers than is found in most of the state.

As for the second report, the total population of the state 2,908,506, was divided into the following age groups: There were 316,404 persons under 5 years of age; 353,910 from 5 to 9 years; 338,860 from 10 to 14 years; 334,836 from 15 to 19 years; 288,126 from 20 to 24 years; 222,930 from 25 to 29 years; 183,398 from 30 to 34 years; 338,114 from 35 to 44 years; 264,610 from 45 to 54 years; 152,196 from 55 to 64 years; 78,880 from 65 to 74 years; 34,398 and over and 1,844 for whom age was not reported. Of the total population of the state 34.8 per cent are under 15 years of age; 21.4 per cent are from 15 to 24 years of age; 25.6 per cent from 25 to 44 years of age; 14.3 per cent are from 45 to 64; and 3.9 per cent are 65 and over.

The number of persons under one year of age was 60,418 as compared with 72,970 in 1920. The entire group of children under five years of age, also shows a marked decrease from 363,229 in 1920 to 316,404 in 1930. All of the remaining age groups except those comprising persons up to 14 years of age and from 25 to 29 years of age, show an increase between 1920 and 1930.

On a percentage basis, persons in the age groups from 30 years upwards, represented a larger proportion of the total population in 1930 than in 1920, as did likewise persons in groups from 15 to 24 years. These increased percentages are balanced by the smaller proportions of persons under 15 years of age, and persons from 25 to 29 years.

Comparative data on whites and negroes as to age groupings were also given.

Of the total population for the state 1,823,057 were native whites and 1,071,125 negroes.

There were 200,332 native whites under five years of age to 116,016 negroes; under one year of age, 38,367 whites and 22,042 negroes; from five to nine years, 219,786 whites and 134,026 negroes; from 10 to 14 years of age, 207,318 whites to 131,393 negroes; from 15 to 19 years, 200,263 whites and 134,216 negroes; 20 to 24 years, 175,166 whites and 112,334 negroes; 25 to 29 years, 139,560 whites to 82,252 negroes; 30 to 34 years, 120,663 whites as against 61,393 negroes; from 35 to 44 years, 216,374 whites, 118,235 negroes; from 45 to 54, 116,377 whites, 95,117 negroes; 55 to 64, 100,016 whites, 50,024 negroes; 65 to 74, 53,660 whites to 23,939 negroes, and for the age of 75 and over there were 22,569 native whites to 11,300 blacks.

The discrepancies in the undivided totals are accounted for by foreign-born whites and colored population not listed as negroes, together with others whose ages were reported unknown.

ponement, said he was ready to support the $25,000,000 appropriation later. He is one of a group of republican regulars in the senate who are ready to split with the administration on this issue.

Hoover to Veto.

A veto was predicted by friends of the president if the house approves the measure.

Meanwhile, negotiations were going forward looking to a compromise. A suggestion that the $25,000,000 be voted as a loan to the Red Cross was understood to have been rejected by the president. As another week ended without legislative action, Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, charged there was a filibuster to force an extra session. He did this after Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, had made a long speech.

Senator Robinson and other democrats who have pledged to co-operate in avoiding an extra session reiterated their pledge today, but gave notice they considered the $25,000,000 appropriation necessary if the extra meeting was to be averted.

Senator Barkley, democrat, Kentucky, said he would work day and night to avoid the extra session, but he would go to any end to force it if the $25,000,000 fund were not approved.

HALF MILLION GIVEN TO RELIEF FUND

A half million people are being fed —a half million dollars have come into the Red Cross treasury.

This report, made tonight by the Red Cross, summarized the situation at the end of the first week of the campaign for a $10,000,000 drouth relief fund.

More counties were added to the area of aid. Less reserve was reported from chapters, who had hoped to "weather through."

From the midwestern office, St. Louis, came word Red Cross chapters were administering to half the population in a 650-square mile area. All but five of the 75 counties of Arkansas had received cash grants. Cash grants to midwest sufferers yesterday totaled $68,000.

or fruit juices in homes unless there is satisfactory evidence of the unlawful sale of such non-intoxicating cider or fruit juice in or near the home."

No warrants have been sworn against any of the 20 men who were released.

The raid was easily executed as the office of the Ukiah company is in the same building occupied by the special prohibition agent's headquarters.

Arriving at the office, the federal men arrested the few employes present. Then, as other salesmen arrived for the conference, they were taken into custody.

Literature seized made no direct mention of the fermentation qualities of the juices. Duncan asserted, however, that the salesmen had told prospective purchasers that the product would develop an alcoholic content of 17 per cent.

NO GENERAL CAMPAIGN WOODCOCK DECLARES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Prohibition Director Woodcock said tonight the arrest of the salesmen of the Ukiah Grape Products Company at Kansas City had been done entirely on the initiative of federal dry agents in the field and was not instigated by orders from Washington.

Woodcock said, "The arrests were news to me." He said he had not even been officially informed they had been made.

Asked if the action might presage some nation-wide action against grape concentrate concerns under orders from Washington, the prohibition director said, "no."

struction. The market place was shaken down and all the houses on three entire streets—both sides—were destroyed.

"The most horrifying sight; he said, was at a cemetery, where bodies buried in crypts along a length of wall were exposed and the walls split open. These were sprayed with a gasoline and burned to prevent disease.

The River Oaxaca, which cut through the suburbs, now is a dry channel, the quake having diverted the water from it.

Three new earthquakes shook the city last night, destroying 20 houses which had been weakened by the previous shocks, and the movie director added that the ground was shaking when his plane prepared to land yesterday afternoon. The pilot kept the ship in the air for a few minutes until the shocks subsided.

Eisenstein said many of the old Spanish churches were destroyed or damaged but the main cathedral was left intact.

Eisenstein estimated the list of dead throughout the valley would grow greatly as telephone and telegraph lines were repaired to carry the word.

Enthusiastic Audience Is Given Rare Treat by Ruth Posselt

BY JULIA COLLIER HARRIS.

On Saturday afternoon an appreciative and enthusiastic audience filled to its utmost capacity the beautiful ballroom at Broadlands, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, for the first recital this season of the Schubert Memorial Association. One of the two prize-winning contestants of 1929, Miss Ruth Posselt, violinist, was the artist of the afternoon, and her program was well contrived to indicate her versatility and the thoroughness of her training.

When the young artist took her stand for the first number, "Variations on a Theme," by Corelli, one could not help wondering if this fragile, flower-like, appealingly girlish figure had it in her to do justice to the difficult and brilliant Paganini Concerto which lay ahead. But Miss Posselt's poise of manner and her assured and deft handling of her instrument in the "Theme," as well as in the charming seventeenth century dances ("Siciliana and Rigaudon," by Francoeur) quickly dissipated skepticism. The "Variations," played in clear-cut, spirited style, offered a good contrast to the tender, playful graciousness of the Francoeur number with its evocations of dainty marquises and elegant courtiers of brocade and periwig periods.

The Paganini Concerto in D Major, with Cadenza by Ondricek, gave Miss Posselt an opportunity to display beauty of tone as well as sureness and energy of bowing. Her mature conception of the composer's intentions and her thorough understanding of what was required of her in this superb composition came as a piquant surprise, in view of her almost childlike appearance. The cadenza, which was arranged by Miss Posselt's master, was played with brilliancy and smoothness.

The group of descriptive pieces which followed the Concerto were altogether charming, especially the "Poeme" by Fibish-Kubelik. This the young artist gave with a delicate, imaginative grace that was captivating. The "Capriccioso" by Reis was in quite another mood—one of arch gaiety, its lilting rhythm suggesting the flight back and forth of a child in a swing. The "Ghost Dance" by the American composer, Levy, was one of the best interpretive bits on the program, especially suited to the light, deft hand of the violinist. Its effect was altogether elfin and conjured up a vision of will-o-the-wisps, goblins and wraiths, dancing in a mist.

The last group on Miss Posselt's program included Albeniz's seductive Tango; a delightful little arrangement which evoked a picture of twittering swallows in flight, by the negro composer, Burleigh; and a "Tarantelle" by Sarasarte, each played with distinctive grace and intelligence. As encores, Miss Posselt played a Spanish dance by Chaminade, the "Melody in A Major," by General Dawes, and Nevin's "Mighty Lak a Rose." It was a test of the player's fine taste and sound training that these three rather hackneyed numbers did not degenerate into sentimentality in her hands. Especially fresh and charming was her rendition of the Nevin song, whose pathos and innocence has so often been made nauseous by a too sentimental handling.

There is no doubt that Miss Posselt won the good will of her audience, and that its friendly wishes will follow her in a career which should be full of gracious achievement if the promise of her first appearance here ripens into fulfillment. We doubt not that there is plenty of staying power and determination back of the flower-like fragility of this gifted young artist. Otherwise she should not have attained to the workmanlike finish of yesterday's performance. That she may retain her delicate, poetic vision while maturing into strength and breadth of interpretation is surely the wish of her Atlanta friends.

As Miss Posselt's accompanist, Mrs. Ruby Chalmers added to her reputation as a resourceful and highly intelligent musician.

Atlanta To Join All of Southland In Tribute to General Lee Monday

Robert E. Lee, hallowed hero of the southland, will be honored Monday throughout that vast area once under the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy.

In Atlanta, as in most parts of Dixie, January 19 will be observed as Lee-Jackson day, since the anniversary of the birth of General T. J. "Stonewall" Jackson comes only two days later.

Schools here will hold special classroom exercises in memory of the great leader, and banks will be closed during the day. Memorial exercises have been planned by both the United Confederate Veterans and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

At the state capitol at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon joint ceremonies will be held by the two patriotic organizations, the Robert E. Lee Camp No. 159 of the U. C. V, being host to the Atlanta Chapter U. D. C., with Garland S. Pryor, commander of the senior organization, presiding jointly with Mrs. Warren D. White, president of the U. D. C. chapter. The program has been arranged by Mrs. W. E. Beckham, chairman of patriotic days committee, and Mrs. Alva D. Kiser, recorder of crosses. Tech High band will play "Dixie," and Miss Caroline Scott Perkins, pianist, will render several vocal selections. Mrs. J. J. Harris, president Georgia division U. D. C., will deliver the principal eulogy, following which she will deliver service crosses to several veterans of the World War. Walter McElreath, Atlanta attorney, will be the principal speaker.

Exercises also have been planned by the Alfred H. Colquitt Chapter U. D. C., with Mrs. Josephus Camp, president, in the chair. "How Firm a Foundation," favorite hymn of the great southern chieftain, will be sung at the opening of the services, and talks on the leadership of Lee will be made by Mrs. J. P. Simpson, Mrs. D. G. Williamson, Miss Willett Taylor and Mrs. R. L. Tribble. Music will feature the observance.

Monday is the 124th anniversary of Lee's birth. In other states throughout the south extensive programs have been planned and at Richmond, in old St. Paul's church, where the Confederate commander-in-chief worshiped during the Civil War, memorial services will be held under auspices of all Confederate organizations of that city. Only a stone's throw distant is the Virginia capitol in which Lee accepted command of the army of Virginia at the outbreak of the War Between the States.

Memorial services also will be held at Stratford-on-the-Potomac, ancestral home of the Lees, in Westmoreland county, Virginia, which is being restored to its condition of 100 years ago when it was one of the show places of America. Major Giles B. Cook, sole surviving member of General Lee's staff, will be present.

The Georgia legislature will be in adjournment in respect for the memory of the southern hero, and in cities and towns from the Potomac to the Rio Grande the anniversary will be observed.

the link between Atlanta and Douglasville and grading from Douglasville to Villa Rica. This entire road should be, McWhorter said, completed early in 1932.

Much In South Georgia.

Most of actual construction work, however, for the remainder of the winter season will be done in south Georgia with the forces being returned to activity in the northern section of the state next spring.

Estimates are now being received on paving materials and an effort will be made to hold the average cost per mile to about $15,000, the chairman said.

First contracts will be let in February, the highway board announced following a meeting on Thursday. Three dates have been set, February 3, 17 and 24, and the total cost is estimated at $4,000,000.

Mr. Barnett stressed the point that the entire amount involved in the February lettings will represent federal money. An emergency bill recently approved by congress awards to Georgia slightly more than $2,000,000 with the understanding that it could be used in matching unmatched funds now due the state. This would bring the total available at the present time to approximately $4,000,000.

Under terms of the act, however, the $2,000,000 in additional funds now available must in turn be matched beginning with 1933. The February lettings will not be confined to any particular section of the state, Mr. Barnett said.

Other Projects.

The other projects to be let February 3, in addition to 8 miles of paving on the Bankhead highway, between Austell and Douglasville, and 13 miles of grading on the same road between Douglasville and Villa Rica, are:

Paving of 18 miles between Thomson and Augusta on the Atlanta-Augusta highway.

Paving 18 miles between Hawkinsville and Eastman on the highway from Macon to Brunswick.

Paving 11 miles south of Dawson on the Florida Short Route.

Paving 15 miles between Lumber City and Baxley on the route from Macon to Brunswick.

Paving eight miles in Grady county south of Thomasville on Route 3 to Florida.

Paving nine miles between Swainsboro and Statesboro on the highway from Macon to Savannah.

Grading seven miles in Pike county south of Zebulon on Route 3 from Atlanta to Florida.

Jeff Davis Grading.

Grading five miles in Jeff Davis county on the highway from Macon to Savannah.

Grading 14 miles in Brooks county, between Moultrie and Quitman, on Route 33 to Florida.

Grading four miles in Madison county on the Athens-Elberton highway to South Carolina.

Bridge on Route 36 from Athens to South Carolina, in Madison county.

Bridge across the Chattahoochee river in Hall county on the highway from Gainesville to Cleveland.

Bridge in Banks county on the highway between Commerce and Carnesville.

Unprecedented rains in north Georgia, the department said Saturday, have impeded construction work on the Gainesville to Baldwin link of the Atlanta and Asheville highway.

BIG ORDER FOR STEEL PLACED BY SOUTHERN

35,100 Tons Will Be Used for New Rails, Program Announces.

Contracts for the purchase of 35,100 tons of new steel rail, enough to lay 231 miles of track, for delivery during February, March and April, have just been let by the Southern Railway System, according to announcement Saturday by R. B. Pegram, vice president.

"Practically all of this order was given to the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company and the rail will be rolled at the Ensley, Ala., plant of this company, near Birmingham. Of the 35,100 tons purchased, 30,655 tons will come from the Tennessee company. The remainder of the order, 4,445 tons, was placed with the Bethlehem Steel Company," Mr. Pegram said.

The purchase includes 400 tons of 130-pound section, 26,860 tons of 100-pound section and 7,840 tons of 85-pound section rail.

FORMER ATLANTAN DIES IN NEW YORK

Mrs. Pauline Auerbach, resident here for many years, died suddenly in New York city Saturday morning. Services are to be held here Monday morning at the chapel of Sam Greenberg & Co. with the Rabbi David Marx officiating. Interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

Mrs. Auerbach is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Bier and Miss Henrietta Auerbach; and two sons, Sam and Clarence Auerbach, all of New York. The time of the funeral is to be announced later.

BILBO OFFERS TRADE ON EXTRA ASSEMBLY

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 17.—(AP)—In letters sent out to state legislators today Governor Theodore G. Bilbo agreed to call an extra session of the legislature to consider tax, highway and employment measures if they would agree not to start any investigations, impeachments or "other monkey business."

Drafts of proposed bills were sent to the members along with a pledge, which he said he wished them "to study and consider in the peace and quiet of home." The program includes seven measures for the relief of taxpayers and a bond issue for highway construction ranging from $15,000,000 to $45,000,000.

INDIGESTION GONE FOR FIRST TIME IN SIXTEEN YEARS

Sargon has such a wonderful strengthening effect on the entire system that it seems to pick you up and put you back on your feet right from the first few doses.

MRS. J. E. HIGHT.

Take the case of Mrs. J. E. Hight, of Egan Park, who said:

"This is the first time in sixteen years that I've been able to eat anything I want without having indigestion afterwards and two bottles of this wonderful new Sargon medicine is responsible for it! It has given me new strength and energy for my housework; gotten me over headaches and dizzy spells; helped my nerves so I could sleep better and made me feel like a new woman in every way.

"I also used the Sargon Pills for constipation and they keep my bowels in perfect condition. Everyone in my neighborhood is talking about these two splendid medicines."

The merits of Sargon are being explained to the public by the Sargon Man, Jacobs' Main Store, Five Points. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' Stores.—(adv.)

State, Public Utilities To Spend Almost $50,000,000 in Georgia

An outlay of money totaling almost $50,000,000 to be spent in Georgia during 1931 was announced Saturday in budgets of the state highway department and public utilities corporations. This $50,000,000 will go into roads, construction projects, pay rolls, supplies and other operations needed.

The highway department will let contracts for roads totaling $15,000,000, and employing between 5,000 and and 6,000 men, highway officials stated.

The Georgia Power Company announced that its 1931 program calls for expenditures of $21,000,000.

The Southern Cities Public Service Corporation, gas company owners, plan expenditures around $10,000,000, officials stated.

The Southern Railway placed orders for rails totaling $1,500,000, sufficient to lay 231 miles of trackage.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company announced $300,000 in construction projects.

UNIFORM AUTO TAG LAW IS PROPOSED

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Enactment of a uniform automobile license law will be sought in the legislature of 11 southern and mid-western states as a result of a conference of traffic officials here yesterday and today.

The conference went on record as favoring license reciprocity among the states in recognition of auto tags, and this forms the nucleus of the uniform statute which will be proposed to the several legislatures. Under the proposed law, a license bought in any one of the states would be good for the entire year in which it was purchased in any other of the co-operating states in which the car owner might travel or take up a new residence.

McLean Must Pay Wife $7,500 Monthly

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, today was ordered by Justice Hitz, of the district supreme court, to pay his wife, Evalyn Walsh McLean, $7,500 monthly for separate maintenance of herself and their three children.

Justice Hitz ordered that a fund of $65,000 be set aside to take care of deficiencies that might arise in the payments.

Mrs. McLean's suit for maintenance was filed early in November. She asked $10,000 monthly.

McLean is part owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

TAX ON RADIO SETS STOPPED BY COURT

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 17.—(AP)—An interlocutory injunction restraining the South Carolina tax commission from attempting to collect the tax on radio sets was issued in United States court today in the case of radio Station WBT of Charlotte vs. the tax commission.

In issuing the injunction, a three-judge court ruled the tax "lays a direct burden on interstate commerce and is unconstitutional, null and void."

The judges sitting in the case were Circuit Judge John J. Parker, District Judge E. F. Cochran and District Judge J. Lyles Glenn.

Nervous Breakdown Faces Mayor Walker

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Mayor James J. Walker was described by his physician today as "riding along on his nervous energy" and on the verge of a collapse.

The physician, Dr. William S. Schroeder, Jr., urged a complete rest for at least a month.

Speaking of his arduous duties a few days ago, the mayor pointed to the portraits of the city's former mayors on the walls and remarked:

"The work killed them."

Power Company Will Finish Perry Rate Data This Week

Decision of Service Commission on Current Tariff Is Expected Within Short Time.

Information concerning wholesale industrial and wholesale central station and municipal rates, requested of the Georgia Power Company by the Georgia public service commission, is expected to be placed in the hands of the commission early this week. A decision on the rule nisi to the company to show cause why the specified rates should not be revised and made uiform throughout the state will probably be reached during the next few weeks.

James A. Perry, chairman of the public service commission, Saturday announced that copies of the company's data will be served on other parties in the case in order to give them an opportunity to comment further.

The case was heard by the commission Thursday. At that time P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, in answer to the commission's rule, stated that for several months past the federal trade commission had been making a most minute investigation of the affairs of the Georgia Power Company, particularly in regard to its values, securities, earnings, etc., and submitted a report prepared by the engineer of the federal trade commission in which the engineer stated that the properties of the Georgia Power Company were in first-class condition, being well maintained and of a high grade of construction. This report also showed that the power company was only earning 5.2 per cent on what the engineer considered as fair value of the company's property. Mr. Arkwright stated, however, that the company did not agree with the engineer's figures for the reason that the company felt that 3 per cent was necessary to take care of depreciation, replacements, etc., whereas the engineer had only allowed 2.5 per cent. Therefore, on basis of the company's 3 per cent depreciation the Georgia Power Company was really only earning approximately 4.5 per cent. President Arkwright stated to the commission that the Georgia Power Company had no objections to uniform rates; in fact, thought it might be desirable, but insisted that the company was not in position to stand any further reductions in its revenues in order to bring about this uniformity. Mr. Arkwright referred to the report of the engineer of the federal trade commission which shows that since 1927 the Georgia commission, by revising the rates of the Georgia Power Company, has reduced its revenues approximately $3,600,000.

Gin Rates Protested.

Representatives of a large number of gin operators protested any increase in the present gin rates but offered no objections to the rates being made uniform for all gins throughout the state. However, they felt that the lowest possible rate should be prescribed for this class of service, but on account of the low price of cotton it would be necessary for the gins to decrease their price for ginning and, therefore, could not absorb any additional cost for power. In answer to the ginners' request President Arkwright stated that he fully realized the gin operator could not afford to pay what might be considered the full cost of the service and operate their gins with electricity and the company was inclined to the belief that the commission should give full consideration to what the traffic would bear in fixing rates for cotton gins.

J. A. Davis, chairman of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, acting as chairman of a committee representing a large number of wholesale industrial customers in southwest Georgia, also the municipality of Albany, submitted to the commission a resolution adopted by the power consumers of south Georgia at a meeting held in Albany on January 5, favoring and petitioning the Georgia commission to make industrial power rates in the territory served by the Georgia Power Company uniform and on a basis that will be fair both to the power company and power consumers. Mr. Davis stated that it was not the purpose of his committee to attempt to submit any schedule of rates, as the committee felt that the commission itself was much more competent to arrive at a basis of rates and would be fair to all parties at interest.

Herman H. Swift, of Columbus; Hatton Lovejoy, of LaGrange, and C. Baxter Jones, of Macon, representing a large group of wholesale customers who pay to the power company approximately $1,000,000 annually for power, urged the commission to prescribe uniform rates on basis of a leveling process that would not have the effect of decreasing the power company's revenues. These representative stated that it would be disastrous to the customers of the power company should the commission attempt to fix rates at this time that would yield to the power company a reasonable return on the fair value of its property, for the reason that the present earnings of the power company reflect the depreciation in business which has affected all lines of business and, therefore, if rates were fixed to earn what may be considered a reasonable return on the fair value of the property it would be necessary to increase the power rates to all the wholesale customers and these customers are not in position to stand such necessary increases at this time. Mr. Swift stated that it is the position of the customers represented by him, and this statement was concurred in by Mr. Jones and Mr. Lovejoy, that the commission should at this time make such revision as is necessary to provide uniform rates so as to remove discriminations now existing among the wholesale customers, illustrating that some customers in Columbus and LaGrange were paying a higher rate than customers in Carrollton and other points in north Georgia territory.

Lester Issues Statement.

W. M. Lester, of Augusta, Ga., president of the Georgia Municipal Rate Association, stated that he represented approximately 40 municipalities, also two or three wholesale customers at Augusta, and included in the list of municipalities was the city of Albany. However, the mayor of Albany, who was present, advised the commission that Mr. Lester did not represent the city of Albany. Mr. Lester did not agree with the other representatives of wholesale power consumers, it being Mr. Lester's position that, notwithstanding the report of the engineer of the federal trade commission, the earnings of the power company would warrant material reductions to the extent of applying the lowest of the wholesale power rates throughout the entire territory served by the company and introduced John Bauer as a rate expert from New York to prove his contentions. Mr. Lester insisted that the present differential of 50 cents per KW being charged to municipalities purchasing power from the Georgia Power Company for resale should be eliminated and the KW demand charge to municipalities should be the same as that charged to wholesale industrial customers. The answer of President Arkwright showed that to eliminate this differential, which was fixed by the commission in 1918, would reduce the company's revenues approximately $75,000 per year and Messrs. Swift, Lovejoy and Jones insisted that power sold to the municipalities for resale should bear this differential and that the industries of the state should not be called upon to pay higher rates to absorb this difference. Mr. Bauer did not submit any evidence in support of his contentions but made a request of the commission to have the privilege of preparing a statement of such data as he would desire the Georgia Power Company to furnish and then be given an opportunity to appear before the commission and submit evidence or criticise the data furnished by the power company.

At the beginning of the afternoon session the commission announced that the hearing of its rule nisi would not be treated as a so-called revenue case but the investigation was for the purpose, if practicable to do so, of devising the wholesale rates and prescribing uniform rates to be applied to all customers of the same class throughout the territory served by the Power company. The commission stated that it was sufficiently informed as to the power company's earnings and was of the opinion that no material reduction should be made in the company's earnings at this time and, therefore, would permit Mr. Lester and Mr. Bauer to submit briefs criticising the data which would be furnished by the power company at Mr. Lester's request, and the commission would then decide whether or not a further hearing would be necessary.

Atlanta To Get Rain, Warmer Weather Today

Rain due to fall over the city more or less intermittently today is expected also to bring an upward revision of the thermometer situation, C. F. von Herrmann, United States weather bureau meteorologist, announced Saturday afternoon.

Today's high will probably reach 50, Mr. von Herrmann said, and the low will be about 38, contrasting with a minimum 34 and a maximum 44 reported Saturday.

Oil Well Worker Saved by Flame Of Cutting Torch

HOT SPRINGS, S. D., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Osage oil field lay silent two hours today while grimy workers challenged death to save a companion trapped by a half-ton weight that crushed and held his hand.

Under the spidery frame of a new drilling project, friends of Charles L. Crayne sprayed the hot flame of an acetylene torch upon the steel casing that pinioned him.

Only two things could be done: Chop off the arm or cut through a 6x10-inch ring that lay over the top of a well. A huge casing, suspended above the hole, had slipped and trapped him in a stooping position.

From all over the field, men raced with equipment, menaced by explosive gases, they applied the flame so close to his body that he was burned and singed several times.

Men, women and children from camps throughout the field crowded about. Hissing steam hoses were kept ready to shoot at any fire. One man stood with ax upraised to sever the arm and release the prisoner if gases exploded into flame.

Crayne collapsed as the ring was cut. He was hurried to a hospital. Doctors said his arm may be saved.

COTTON SEED REVENUE CHIEFLY FOR FARMER

85.5 Per Cent of Total Net Income for Three Years Went to Producer.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The southern cotton farmer received the bulk of the revenues from the sale of cottonseed products during the three seasons 1927 through 1930, said a preliminary report on an economic survey of the cottonseed products industry made public today by the board of directors of the National Cottonseed Products Association.

The report showed total revenues from the sale of cottonseed products for the season 1927-28, 1928-29, 1929-30 of $754,816,005, and listed $449,158,479 as the farmers' share of the total.

Of the balance, the report said, seed merchants received $76,271,085; transportation costs amounted to $29,253,296; manufacturing or operating costs totaled $143,537,043; and $6,526,129 was retained by the mills as their profits. After deduction of $172,860,312 in manufacturing and operating costs, transportation and taxes from the grand total of $754,816,005, the balance of $581,955,693 was distributed on a basis of 85.5 per cent to the farmer, 13.1 per cent to the seed merchant and 1.1 per cent to the mill operator.

The survey was ordered by the national association in Dallas last October in an effort to assemble "an adequate, comprehensive economic analysis of the industry." The figures were obtained from the United States census bureau, department of agriculture and statistics from more than 300 mills in Texas, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Tennessee.

FLORIDA EVERGLADES PARK PLAN APPROVED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Representative Ruth Bryan Owen's proposal to create a national park in the Florida Everglades was approved today by the house public lands committee.

The committee amended the bill to provide protection for the rights of Seminole Indians not in conflict with the creation of the park. The measure would authorize administration by the national park service of approximately 2,000 square miles of territory.

Mrs. Owen is a Florida democrat.

By unanimous vote the committee decided to report the measure favorably to the house. Representative Yon, democrat, Florida, will make the report.

Horace M. Albright, director of the park service, told the committee in hearings that roads which the government would build over a period of years would cost approximately $1,000,000.

The vast area would be preserved, under the measure, for visitors and scientific research.

Director Albright expressed gratification at the committee action, observing that the Everglades "represent a new type of landscape not now in the park system."

"This area will be preserved as a great wilderness park, as nearly as possible in its present condition, in order that visitors may see for all time the strange birds, as well as rare animals and reptiles. The park will preserve the Cape Sable beaches, with their coconut groves, the extensive and rare palms, mangroves and other tropical trees."

American art at its best compares favorably with the best art produced abroad, according to the consensus of many leading art critics who have come into contact with the creative arts in an international way, asserts Wilford S. Conrow, of New York city. Mr. Conrow is in Atlanta where he has an exhibition of portraits at the High Museum of Art.

Faculty members of Brenau College will give a concert at the museum at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and there will be a reception from 4 until 6 o'clock.

"Critics are optimistic of the status today and promise of the future for art in America," Mr. Conrow said Saturday. "For many decades most of the official portraits in Washington have been painted by foreign artists, so in Washington it is the fashion to believe European art must be better than that of America. The American Artists' Professional League, believing that official portraits, paid for by taxpayers' money, should be by the best American talent that can be discovered, has sent a resolution to the president to that effect, and has undertaken to influence the passage of legislation making it possible for official portraits to show to future generations the general level of excellence of American art in portraiture through successive years in which the portraits are painted."

Mr. Conrow, who is national secretary of the league, said there are a number of members in Atlanta. The league is trying to do practical things on behalf of artists of America and for art in America, and only last week the house of representatives passed the Vestal general copyright bill and the design copyright bill which will probably be passed by the senate during the session. These laws will protect the rights of artists and designers in their original work, he said.

Mr. Conrow will be in Atlanta until January 26, and on Sunday, January 25, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Great Chalice of Antioch."

There are 21 portraits by Mr. Conrow in the collection on exhibition here.

WHITE HOUSE DENIES MELLON RESIGNATION

Published Report Merely Repetition of Previous Unfounded Rumors.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—It was said at the White House today that there was no foundation for reports published today that Secretary Mellon had submitted his resignation.

Similarly, a denial was forthcoming to the published report that Ambassador Dawes would become republican national chairman, and that Secretary Adams would succeed him in London as ambassador.

The report as to Secretary Mellon was said at the White House to resemble similar reports that have been denied by the administration since March 4, 1929.

It was also denied that George Akerson, who has resigned as secretary to the president, would be succeeded by Ray Benjamin, California lawyer and financier.

The published reports were described as apparently a combination of all the rumors and gossip that could be gathered together in one sequence.

Alleged Loot Barred At Trial for Theft

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—It is usual in trials for theft to introduce in evidence the article taken, but in a criminal court trial here today both prosecution and defense joined with the judge in agreement to exclude "Exhibit B." Louis Flinn was accused of taking several hives of bees from H. B. Sigby, the records showed.

Prince of Wales To Play Salesman For Britain in South America

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR.
(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

The Prince of Wales is leaving England for South America in the interest of British trade in that section of the world. He will be the main attraction at the great British trade exposition in Buenos Aires.

Lord D'Abernon, shrewd diplomat and businessman that he is, negotiated a trade treaty with Argentina a little over a year ago which was destined to be of inestimable value to the British manufacturer. But when President Irigoyen was overthrown, it looked as though this treaty would go into the discard.

But Great Britain apparently thinks otherwise. Argentina is a rich prize. Its 11,000,000 people have the largest per capita foreign trade of any country in the world, not excepting Canada. The total is from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 a year.

How does this trade stand between Great Britain and the United States. The British-Argentinian trade has gone up beyond $500,000,000 annually. Great Britain does more than one-fourth of the business. Argentina, next to the United States and Canada, is Great Britain's best customer.

British businessmen have invested plenty of money in Argentina—almost $2,000,000,000 worth, as against $500,000,000 by Americans. The railroads are largely owned by the British.

No wonder the Prince of Wales is making for Argentina. It's a battleground, which the British believe they can win and hold.

Reports from there indicate that Great Britain is concentrating on Argentina as a test to see whether they can revamp their foreign trade and bring back the glories that were theirs in this field before the great war.

The struggle for trade in Argentina between Great Britain and the United States is going to be interesting.

Big Bill Says People, God, Court Favor Him

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(UP)—"Big Bill" Thompson went out after his fourth term as mayor today with a hilarious meeting in the gold ballroom of the hotel Sherman.

The husky, ponderous voice of the former cowboy boomed out into loop streets through special amplifiers and served notice that the spectacular aspects of previous Thompson campaigns are going to be outdone in the present race.

"With the people, the supreme court and God Almighty all for him, how the hell they goin' to beat him," the mayor asked.

BOROUGH'S LATEST FINANCE SHEET READY FOR COUNCIL

$1,000,000 DEFICIT OF 1930 ABSORBED

Increased Cost of Water and Small School Allotment To Be Attacked.

ment, exclusive of the school department.

Unless avenues of obtaining additional revenue are opened by the legislature and unless that over-anticipation is realized, employes of all departments will be called upon to take two weeks' vacation without pay, or the equivalent of that vacation period will be carried into 1932 and paid out of receipts next year.

If, however, the legislature takes steps to cure the borough's financial ills, then there will be no necessity of taking any of the drastic actions outlined, because it is estimated that proposals now pending would provide about $2,500,000 annually.

Every department of the borough government with the exception of Grady hospital felt the keen edge of the pruning knife which the finance committee wielded in its 10-day battle to keep expenditures within anticipated revenue. More than $200,000 was slashed from departmental requests.

Few improvements are contemplated in the sheet, and even these cannot be catalogued as improvements, but were declared by members of the finance committee to be absolute necessities.

A fund of $8,500 was set up to provide radio equipment for the police department, which departmental officials declared would be equivalent to employment of 50 additional policement in protection of the lives and property of Atlantans.

Another $6,500 was added to provide a new floodlight and boundary markers for Candler field when it was pointed out that failure to do so might result in a catastrophe due to an accident. A shed will be built at the municipal garage to house trucks and keep them from exposure to the elements.

In addition to consideration of the finance sheet, council also will be called upon to elect a successor to William P. Price, borough purchasing agent, whose resignation becomes effective January 31. There are half a score of candidates in the field, chief among whom are Lloyd Walker, Sam Freeman, Marvin P. Roane, W. E. Chambers, Frank Bell, Newt Landers and Walter Vance.

Alderman G. Everett Millican will bring again to council a proposal to establish a centralized system of bookkeeping "in the interest of efficiency and economy," and will offer another proposal to effect economies in the motor transport department by selling borough-owned cars to employes except in the police and fire departments where trucks are used. Under the plan the employe would get a salary hike and would be forced to purchase the machine, keep it repaired and buy his own fuel.

Text of Mayor Key's statement regarding the finance sheet follows:

"The finance sheet as prepared by the committee of council does not present the true situation, nor the true attitude of the city toward its employes, and particularly its school department. The finance sheet shows the true financial situation of the city and absorbs a deficit of somewhere between three quarters of a million and a million dollars that came over from last year. I do not hope to absorb any part of that deficit this year, but I do expect that the city shall be brought to live within its income this year. That is as much of a reform as can be accomplished in one year's time.

"I would expect the city at the proper time to over-anticipate so as to allow the same amount of deficit to continue, and the true attitude of the city is going to be detemined by the distribution of that over-anticipation when that time arrives. My own hope and expectation is that all departments of the city shall be treated alike, including the schools.

"In bringing the city within its income the city has had to adopt some very drastic measures, such, for instance, as removing the discount on water rates, and removing the discount on a large number of properties of a quasi charitable or religious nature. They have had to go to such extremes as to cut out every other white way light. They have reduced its pay roll considerably, and have cut the departments to an irreducible minimum.

Two Weeks' Vacation.

"My hope and expectation is that when this same deficit is spread at the latter part of the year, that the city will not be required to do more than ask every employe to take a two weeks' vacation without pay. There have been no raises of pay, but some marked reductions, but when the time comes to reduce pay to some extent, as it will, I expect the city to begin in the mayor's office and go on down, not affecting, however, those small wage-earners who could not stand any reduction.

"My hope and expectation is that the school department will deal with their department in the same way—that they will cut their appropriation as the city has cut theirs. That if the need fo it occurs, and I am sure it will, that all of the employes take a two weeks' vacation without pay, and that there should not be any increase of wages or salaries in the school department. I expect to go before this community at the proper time and put the schools on a right basis. When that time comes, if I can show that the attitude of the school department has been everything that it should be towards the taxpayers, the taxpayers' attitude toward the school department will be deeply affected by it."

In giving reassurance that salaries of employes will not be slashed, Alderman Murphy said there is little likelihood of such drastic action and also stated that schools probably will operate for the entire year.

"Department allocations throughout the general borough government," Alderman Murphy said, "are prepared, necessarily, on a very restricted basis as to operations, but they do not provide for any loss of pay for any employes.

"As for the schools, they will receive, as provided by law, 26 per cent of all th revenue we are anticipating in the January sheet. This will come to almost as much as the board of education received in 1930, exclusive of extraordinary appropriations. The schools were operated for the full term last year; I do not see why they should not be this year, particularly since the board of education will share with other departments any new revenues such as we hope to raise later in the year with the assistance of the Georgia legislature.

"There will be no call for any employé in the general municipal departments to give up any pay, unless the situation changed so that this should become necessary to prolong the school term."

Major receipts for the year will come from general taxes listed at $6,433,000 and from water receipts which the sheet carries at $2,360,000.

Summary of Sheet.

Summary of departmental allocations in the sheet follows:

Mayor's department $14,410; council $23,700; clerk $45,380; law $41,745; comptroller and paymaster $41,495; purchasing agent $11,775; motor transport $236,847; treasury $2,180; tax collector $16,900; planning commission $9,020; tax assessors $62,730; marshal $20,620; city hall $51,441; pensions $67,642; telephones $14,000; police $881,052; fire $820,800; auditorium-armory $19,384; building inspector $18,320; recorders' courts $12,000; insurance $9,000; health $122,000; sanitary $459,100; Grady hospital $508,189 (the only request in the entire list of departments which was not slashed); contagious disease hospital $37,700; Battle Hill sanitarium $146,412; construction, including bridges, streets, sewers, Candler field, etc., $729,186; street improvement $49,771; electrical $320,080; warden $60,200; 20 charitable institutions of Atlanta $55,620; board of education $3,413,692; Georgia Tech $40,000; library $124,257; contingent $45,517; parks $247,908; cemetery $18,227; water $763,329; trust funds $211,678; sinking funds for outstanding bonds $925,247; interest on bonds $880,000, and public debt $4,198,941.

Good Roads and Experiment Boom North Georgia Lands

Georgia Is Redeeming Lost Regions, Representative Bonnell H. Stone Declares.

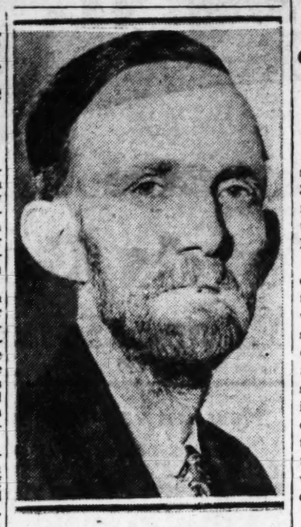

With the aid of good roads and experimental work in horticulture, a great region of mountain country which previously belonged commercially to North Carolina rather than to Georgia is being redeemed for Georgia, Bonnell H. Stone, of Blairsville, representative from Union county, said Saturday.

The mountain experiment station established a year ago by Director H. P. Stuckey of the Georgia experiment station is developing horticultural products to the end that the mountain country can supply the lower south with fruits and vegetables in the late summer and early fall when the latter region has no fresh vegetables and fruits of its own, Representative Stone said.

Mountain conditions not only provide later maturity, but there is a crispness and excellence of flavor of mountain-grown vegetables that add to their popularity, Stone declared. Chinese cabbage, Japanese greens, turnips and radishes have been tried in addition to standard varieties, and this revealed that some of the foreign varieties do well in the mountains although they do not grow successfully elsewhere in the state, he said.

"Irish potatoes do well in the mountains, and the station is trying many varieties to discover the best," he said. "Various varieties of dewberries and raspberries are being tried, and grapes have been introduced. Among the grapes is the Hunt, a cross perfected by Director Stuckey which is between a bunch grape and a muscadine. It is attracting wide attention.

"Plans are being made to develop some of the native fruits and vegetables, including huckleberries, blackberries, apples, peaches, pears, etc. The station has 250 acres under control. A considerable portion is in forest, and, in co-operation with the Southern Appalachian experiment station at Asheville, N. C., a series of plots have been established on the farm for research work in tree growth. The Georgia forest service is aiding in this work. One of the interesting pieces of forestry work is the planting of blight resistant Japanese chestnuts, as native chestnuts of the mountains are dying rapidly from an invasion of blight."

85 CONVENTIONS BOOKED FOR CITY

A total of 85 conventions to be held in Atlanta during 1931 already have been booked since the first of the year, it was noted Saturday in a report made by the Atlanta Convention and Tourist Bureau. These meetings will bring approximately 17,000 people to the city, it was estimated.

The report showed that during 1930 there were 350 conventions entertained in Atlanta, the gatherings being attended by 48,311 delegates who stayed an average of three days each.

The national conventions booked to date are: International Association of Cut Stone Contractors and Quarrymen; Religious Education Association, National Terrazzo and Mosaic Contractors' Association, National Editorial Association, purchases and stores division of the American Railway Association, Ecumenical Methodist Conference, Phi Rho Sigma medical fraternity, National Alumni Secretaries, National League of Nursing Education.

THRONGS WILL HEAR PADEREWSKI RECITAL

Great Crowd Expected at Auditorium on Night of February 3.

Ignace Paderewski will give his seventh Atlanta recital on February 3 at the auditorium. It is the renowned pianist's fourth appearance under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Club.

It is a foregone conclusion that one of the largest audiences ever seen in the auditorium for a musical event will greet the immortal Pole when he steps upon the stage that Tuesday evening. The coming of Paderewski is always the event of the musical season. No pianist can approach him in technique, brilliance or popularity of interpretation and there are less than half a dozen artists in the entire range of the concert platform who can compare with him as a box-office attraction.

The splendor of Paderewski's art is in no wise dimmed though he has been before the public for 39 years. His inspired playing and his marvelous ability to sway his audiences remains just as great as it was when he first burst into the firmament of music as the most brilliant of all her votaries.

Critics who heard him recently in recital at Constitution hall, Washington, said that seldom, if ever, has enthusiasm reached such a pitch in that temple of music. "Not satisfied with an exacting two-hour recital which seemed to grow in intensity, Mr. Paderewski swept into a series of encores that, thankfully, prolonged the recital another three-quarters of an hour," said one writer.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover occupied the presidential box on that occasion with a party of friends and it was noted that she stayed until after the piano had been moved into the wings and the great virtuoso was left bowing on the stage. She was, the Washington Star said, "apparently as unwilling to leave at that time as were other members of the audience."

The Atlanta recital is not one of the Civic Music Association series, being a special attraction by the Music Club and seats will be placed on sale some days before the date for the concert.

LABOR TO DISCUSS MOTOR BUS BILLS

Labor from all sections of Georgia will meet at 10 o'clock this morning at the Labor temple to discuss proposed new state legislation to regulate passenger and freight transportation by motor.

Local and state labor leaders, through the medium of a sub-committee headed by Emmett Quinn, president of the machinists, have had under consideration a bill aimed at regulating motor transportation on the highways with a view of obtaining legislation to put the motor bus lines on a parity with the railroads from the standpoint of regulation and inspection.

Several motor bus bills have been introduced in the general assembly. These are intended, it was said, to strengthen the law as passed in 1929, and put teeth into enforcement by the public service commission.

BIG LIQUOR CARGO SEIZED BY POLICE

Four persons were arrested, two automobiles seized and nearly 400 gallons of corn liquor confiscated in two liquor hauls here Saturday by city policemen. The seizures and arrests were made after officers had trailed a truck and an automobile suspected of running whisky.

W. S. Wilson and Gill Watkins, said by police to have been drivers of the truck, were placed in Fulton county jail without bond, while Osborne Jackson and Alma Sherman, negroes, were arrested at a negro house where the truck was said to have attempted to unload its contraband cargo. There were 328 gallons in the truck.

A passenger car and 54 gallons were seized after a chase that began at Ashby and Sells avenue and ended at Hunter street and Ashby. Two men abandoned the car at that junction and escaped.

Four negroes were arrested and 338 gallons of whisky seized early Saturday morning by Detectives Joe Allen and Eugene Head, who followed a suspected truck to a negro dwelling near Joyland park. Those arrested were W. S. Wilson and Bill Watkins, in charge of the truck, and Alma Sherman and Osborn Jackson, who occupied the house where the whisky was being unloaded. They are held in the Fulton county tower without bond awaiting preliminary hearing by a United States commissioner.

DR. J. T. HENDERSON WILL SPEAK HERE

Dr. J. T. Henderson, of Knoxville, Tenn., secretary of the Baptist Brotherhood of the Southern Baptist convention, will be the principal speaker at a series of conferences for the laymen of Jackson Hill Baptist church January 20 to 25, inclusive.

The program opens Tuesday night with a banquet at 7 o'clock for the men of the church, at which time Dr. Henderson will speak. The program for the remainder of the week includes a conference each evening at 7:30, at which Dr. Henderson will preside. Special music for each service will be in charge of Raymond Berry, of Jackson Hill church choir.

There will be no meeting Saturday. The pulpit will be occupied at both services Sunday, January 25, by Dr. Henderson, who is one of the outstanding laymen of America.

937 Out-of-State Cars Enter City in 18 Hours

Within a period of 18 hours—from 6 a. m. to 12 p. m.—Friday, a total of 937 motor cars from out of the state entered Atlanta, it was revealed Saturday by the Atlanta Motor Club which stationed representatives on the principal state highways leading into the city to make an accurate count.

These cars carried, including drivers, 2,604 passengers, the report shows. The most popular route was from Chattanooga and the midwest on Highway 41, as a total of 419 cars entered by that way. Number 29 from New York was the next in popularity with 311 machines entering. Cars from everywhere came here, including seven from Canada and one from Washington state. Indiana seemed to be migrating south with a total of 100 cars, while Missouri was next with 56.

SIBLEY ASSUMES APPELATE POST

Judge Joins His New Colleagues in Hearing at New Orleans.

Sitting by appointment of the senior circuit judge pending receipt of his commission, Judge Samuel H. Sibley was in New Orleans Saturday and on the court of appeals bench to which he was recently elevated by President Hoover.

Judge Sibley's appointment has been approved by the senate and there remains but the detail of forwarding the confirmation back to the White House for the signing of a commission and the transmittal of that document, through the department of justice, to Judge Sibley.

Unless an appointment and confirmation of a new judge for this district is made in the next day or so, Judge William H. Barrett, of Augusta, will come to Atlanta January 26 to preside over the federal court. Included in the important litigation during that week will be hearing on Atlanta's postoffice condemnation suits.

Judge Barrett's appointment to hold the courts of this district, made also by the senior circuit judge of the court of appeals, was made for a period of six months to take care of the exigency arising in the event a regular judge is not appointed and confirmed meantime.

Probably one of the last acts of Judge Sibley as judge of the northern district federal court occurred Friday afternoon when he denied freedom to R. C. Horne, Jr., Charleston, S. C., attorney, on a habeas corpus application. Horne has 45 days of a two-year sentence imposed for violating the federal farm loan act to serve at the Atlanta penitentiary.

Judge Sibley went on a three-judge court in New Orleans which Saturday heard arguments on a petition filed by Tennessee and Alabama motor freight lines seeking an injunction to prevent the Georgia public service commission from enforcing certain provisions of a Georgia legislative act with respect to their operations over a short section of a Georgia highway.

The suit was brought by Johnson line, of Tennessee, and the Alabama Georgia Freight Lines, of Alabama, who allege that they have been "harassed" by highway police because they use a 23-mile stretch of road in Georgia in traveling between Alabama and Tennessee. The companies are resisting the payment of a per mile tax and an insurance tax required under the Georgia statute on the grounds that they do no business in Georgia, but merely use the 23-mile stretch as a short cut between Birmingham and Chattanooga. They attacked the constitutionality of the Georgia statute so far as it might apply to their operations and asked restraining orders to prevent the public service commission from collecting a tax from them and to prevent Georgia highway police from arresting their truck drivers.

New Player in Bow Role After De Boe Revelations

Sylvia Sidney, recently of the New York stage, who will take Clara Bow's place opposite Gary Cooper in a forthcoming production. The announcement marks the first time since Clara has become a starring figure that she has been replaced in a picture. Officials refused to comment on the trial now in progress in Los Angeles, in which the star is charging her secretary, Daisy De Boe, with grand theft. Photo shows Miss Sidney. for out of my money—"Oh, she took lots of it home."

The actress referred to the Westwood home of a sister.

"She played poker, too, every time I did and she lost, too."

"I met her, you know, when she was working in a beauty shop at the studio and I became interested in her and thought I could develop her. So I trusted her and took lots of chances, but I guess that was wrong."

Clara was tired by this time but not too tired to have just one more fling.

"About that picture," she said suddenly, "I wasn't withdrawn from 'City Streets.' I withdrew myself because it was a heavy, dramatic role and anyway my doctor said I would have to.

"I don't think all this will hurt me. I've faith that the public will believe that Daisy is trying to make a reputation for herself and punish me for the dishonesty in which she was trapped. She's trying to retaliate.

"And don't forget this either—Daisy's hair is bleached."

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Daisy De Boe was busy studying tonight over what new Hollywood night life tales she has to tell about "it" in general and Clara Bow in particular.

She said she had a "great deal more to say" about "drinking parties and escapades" while she was in the employ of and living at the home of the red-headed girl of the movies.

She lugged home the transcript of testimony to date in her trial on charges of grand theft so she will be able to narrate interestingly at 10 a. m. Monday, when the trial resumes.

Names not hitherto revealed and other teasing references as to what her Monday testimony might be were the parting hints she left with newspapermen, who met her at the courthouse.

Meanwhile, the actress, who has been the target of her tongue, rested in just the kind of luxurious bed her fans can picture, in her Beverly Hills home.

Clara revealed she was ill, but not too sick to talk. As to her career in the movies, she said it was her wish she not be cast in the film, "City Streets." Announcement was made yesterday she had been withdrawn from the stellar role because of her illness.

The red curls shook negatively, as seh said no, no; that the real reason was it proved to be too dramatic a role.

As for Daisy, Clara said the girl had been trapped and was trying to retaliate.

B. P. Schulberg, Paramount studio executive, announced Miss Bow's next picture, which he yesterday said would be prepared at once, will be "Working Girl," based upon the stage play "Blind Mice." Production of the picture, he said, will start March 1.

"TUNE IN" BEFORE YOU "TURN IN"

town's two church bells pealed out a mournful requiem.

Bill didn't make any comment—just continued to look scared. I went on:

"You weren't unnerved then. Only a great deal touched. . . . Then there was the time you were riding with a federal officer in Washington and he spotted a big booze car; and two tough eggs in the back opened up with .45's right after the chase started, and a bullet knocked the right headlight off."

"That was nothing," interrupted Bill. "That is nothing compared to facing a microphone."

I also reminded him of that night in Washington, back in 1922, when he saw women in silk gowns and expensive furs hurl themselves frantically against stalwart, grim United States marines to get into the wreckage of the Knickerbock theater, where 98 persons were dead or dying.

"At least, you could try to help," put in Bill. "But in front of a microphone you are helpless."

"Why be afraid to talk to a microphone when a president didn't feaze you?" I asked Bill.

Then I reminded him when he was assigned to the White House for a Washington paper. It was a Friday afternoon. The president was receiving newspapermen for the regular biweekly interview. For three weeks Bill had written out his question: "What was the president going to do about appointing a people's counsel for the District of Columbia?" So far Mr. Coolidge hadn't answered it. On this particular day Bill wrote:

"Mr. President: If you don't answer my inquiry today about the people's counsel, I'm going to get fired and the White House is going to lose a good democratic newspaperman."

I was there and I saw Mr. Coolidge smile as he read the query and the comment. Then he delivered one of the longest replies I'd ever heard; and the worst part was, when he got through Bill didn't understand at all just what the president meant. It was then that Bill Key violated a rule that had been in effect for lo! these many years. He addressed the president orally. . . . In the presence of be-spatted and cane-toting "correspondents" who looked shocked, Bill asked the president of the United States to repeat what he'd just said. . . . And Mr. Coolidge did just that!

Those were some of the things I told Bill Key as he sat quavering in the studios at WGST. But Bill wasn't consoled. He shook his head. That was all different, he said. He knew his ground on a story, but this radio racket was something else again. . . . A fellow had to watch his vocal step. Writing is different. You can go back and cross out an error. If you do that too much in broadcasting somebody says "Phooey!" and writes a letter to the editor. . . . "Wise cracks?" Bill repeated when I suggested that some of his comments were right timely. "I don't go in for wise cracks. I sometimes hear myself making some remark about a story I've just told the people, but those are my own personal reactions to that particular story. That's the only entertaining way to broadcast news stories, I think. I mean being natural."

While I'd failed entirely to console Bill Key, I left him feeling not quite so scared. He'll get used to it, he thinks. . . . And, until tonight and every other night at 10:15, over WGST, he said, he bids you all good day and reminds you not to forget to:

THREE GIRLS INJURED WHEN AUTO HITS POLE

Three girls were injured and two others were badly shaken when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a telephone pole at Campbellton and Harvard roads Saturday afternoon in an effort to avert a collision with another machine.

Those injured were Christine Stephens, 17, of Campbellton road; Leon Love, 18, Utoy road, and Sarah Maroney, 15, of Pitts road. Ethel Stephens, sister of one of those injured, and Bertie Lou Love, sister of another occupant of the car, were severely shaken. None of the injured was seriously hurt.

The girls were driving on Campbellton road, according to police reports, and swerved their machine sharply to avoid crashing into one driven by B. W. Tidwell, of Route 1. The machine was badly damaged. No arrest was made.

OPTIMISTIC NOTE SOUNDED AT MEET

A note of optimism and of faith in the nation's business and industrial future was sounded by officials of the International Printing Ink Corporation at a meeting in the Piedmont hotel here Saturday. Present at the meeting were representatives from the corporation's branches in various cities throughout the southern territory.

Stating that his company was definitely committed to the policy of "business as usual" during 1931, Charles F. Clarkson, vice president and general sales manager, declared that the ensuing year would be a normal one and R. W. Smith submitted charts proving that the I. P. I. C. is "setting a quota that will assure profits without any spectacular sales efforts." J. B. Hawley, vice president, also spoke.

Among those attending were T. W. Wynn and W. M. Kill, of Nashville; E. C. Walton, of New Orleans, and O. L. Hildenbrand, of Houston. Acting as hosts were J. Raymond Curtis, local manager, and C. C. Sharp, local representative of the corporation.

SHOUSE NOT SEEKING ANY OFFICE, HE SAYS

Democratic Chairman's Denial Follows Use of Name as Prospective Nominee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the democratic national committee, said today he was a candidate for no office.

His statement was made after his name had been suggested by some democrats as the party's 1932 presidential nominee. The latest suggestion was from Springfield, Mo., where he spoke at a Jackson Day dinner and was introduced as one of the party's outstanding possibilities.

reported to have given his approval to a boost in bus line taxes.

Resumption of legislative work Tuesday will probably be featured by the hearing before the house ways and means committee, which the senate finance committee will attend, of the heads of the state sanitarium at Milledgeville, and the tubercular hospital at Alto with Governor Hardman presenting his own views about the duty of the legislature in connection with the state debt either through a message to the committee or his personal appearance.

Lean to Discount Plan.

At any event, adjournment Friday for the week-end found the legislature seriously inclined to the W. & A. rental discount plan as its chief means of raising funds for eleemosynary institutions, strongly opposed to the levy of any taxes on anybody except on bus lines and definitely turned against all forms of diverting funds now in the hands or expected to reach the state highway board for road building purposes.

Notwithstanding Governor Hardman's advocacy of diverting $4,500,000 of tag taxes to wipe out a $5,000,000 deficit—as figured by Representative Culpepper, chairman of the house ways and means committee—opposition to such a plan of providing for unpaid appropriations made by legislatures of 1927 and 1929 has grown since the legislature met January 6 and it has now been cemented by the declaration of George H. Carswell, secretary of state, who advocated such a plan in his campaign for governor, that he regarded the issue as definitely settled at the polls.

It is regarded probable now that, in addition to W. & A. railroad rentals, and an increase in taxes on bus lines, the legislature will adjust the income tax law so as to make it yield from $500,000 to $1,000,000 more this year and that, from these three sources the state will be able to get enough money to check any serious institutional crippling.

Reference, after some debate, of Senator Shelby Myrick's bill to create a budget bureau to the senate finance committee for alteration takes care of probably the second most important phase of Governor Hardman's call, inasmuch as the adoption of a real budget system has been recommended to the state as the means of preventing any recurrence of the financial ills the state is now wrestling, somewhat impatiently but confidently, with.

To Turn Back Convicts.

Legislation recommended by the governor includes that relating to the convicts, many of whom still will be turned back to the state prison commission by counties seeking to lower tax burdens, and the major concern of the special session looks to be over whether they can farm the convicts out to the state highway commission. There is vigorous opposition to this plan in both branches of the assembly.

Already the house has approved the Culpepper measure clarifying the Confederate pension act, a bill which appropriates from the treasury money enough to pay the veterans on a basis of $30 per month which was enacted in anticipation of getting, for the payment of the increase authorized, approximately $800,000 from the 1930 income tax collections.

Confirmation of the appointment of Captain J. W. Barnett, of the highway board, and of other officials named by the governor since the last regular session, having already been voted, another item in the executive call has been disposed of. The provision in the proclamation for paying the expenses of the special session will be met when this expense has been determined.

Apart from the latitude of taxation contained in the call, here is the suggestion that a state tax commission be created and the bill of Senator Goode, of the thirty-first, takes care of this recommendation. It provides for a commission of three members with the comptroller general as chairman and for the present tax commissioner and revenue commissioner to fill out their unexpired terms as members of the new commission. That of R. C. Norman, tax commissioner, expires in June, but R. E. Matheson, revenue commissioner, has approximately five years to serve.

Inquiry, already voted by both houses, into the financial condition of the common schools is expected to disclose information of especial interest to the legislators, in view of the declaration of Superintendent M. L. Duggan that the state owes the schools $3,500,000 now.

Much may be decided by this inquiry. It is generally believed by assembly leaders, however, that the condition of the schools is such that legislation affecting their finances may wait for the regular session next June.

Politically the special session has been maintaining the traditions of all its predecessors. There is the customary amount of log-rolling for office, with the governor-elect, working as one of the two presiding offices, encountering an uncommonly long list of importunities because of the dual role he has to play now. There is no little legislative kite flying but, at the same time a very solemn consideration of the state's financial situation.

Pile Sufferers

End Your Misery Without Salves or Cutting

External treatments cannot permanently end Piles. Nor does cutting remove the cause.

The cause is internal—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. The veins are flabby—the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles an internal medicine must be used to heal and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, a specialist, after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1,000 patients, with the marvelous record of success in 969 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist.

Don't waste time on external remedies or think of the pain and expense of an operation until you have tried HEM-ROID. Jacobs' Drug Stores will supply you and guarantee money back if it does not end all Pile misery.—(adv.)

PERSHING IN CONFIDENTIAL NOTE TO BAKER SEES POSSIBILITY OF FRENCH REVOLUTION

General Disturbed Over Indifference To Shipping Needs

BY GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING.

(Copyright, 1931, in all countries by The North American Newspaper Alliance. World rights reserved, including the Scandinavian. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

CHAPTER VII.

As the French authorities wished to honor our national holiday they requested that some of our troops parade in Paris July 4, 1917. We were not prepared to make much of a military impression, as our men were largely recruits. But to stimulate morale the French wanted to demonstrate that the Americans were actually coming, so a battalion of the 16th Infantry was brought up from Saint Nazaire.

The untrained, awkward appearance of this unit, which was accepted as the cream of our regular army by the French officials, no doubt tended to confirm their belief that it would be some time before we should be able to organize an effective combat army.

If they could have foreseen the triumph of this same battalion at the peak of the great counter-offensive on the field of Soissons just one year later we might have been spared many delays and difficulties in carrying out our plans.

Nevertheless, the first appearance of American combat troops in Paris brought joyful acclaim from the people. On the march the battalion was accompanied by a great crowd, many women forcing their way into the ranks and swinging along arm in arm with the men. With wreaths about their necks and flowers in their hats and on their rifles, the column had the appearance of a moving flower garden.

With only a semblance of military formation the animated throng pushed its way through avenues of people to the martial strains of the French band and the still more thrilling music of cheering voices. Many dropped on their knees in reverence as the column went by.

Gives Colonel Stanton Credit.

The battalion marched to the cemetery where the tomb of Lafayette is located. The ceremony there consisted of a few speeches, the principal speaker being Mr. Brand Whitlock, our ambassador to Belgium. I had been asked to deliver an address but had designated Colonel C. E. Stanton, of my staff, an old army friend and something of an orator, to speak in my place. However, I was prevailed upon to speak extemporaneously.

It was on this occasion that utterance was given to an expression that could be born only of inspiration, one that will live long in history: "Lafayette, we are here!"

Many have attributed this striking utterance to me, and I have often wished it could have been mine. But I have no recollection of saying anything so splendid. I am sure those words were spoken by Colonel Stanton, and to him must go the credit for so happy and felicitous a phrase.

The parade of our troops through Paris doubtless fortified the morale of the people to a certain extent, but we all know that eventually something very much more effective would have to be done. While it was important to consider the temporary state of mind of the Allies, yet after all the outcome of the war would depend upon the size of the force we could bring to their aid. To get at the real situation before advising the war department of what we should undertake to do, a thorough study was made of the actual and potential strength on both sides.

The real question was whether the Allies could hold out until we were ready. It was clear that no half-way measure on our part would answer and that Allied hopes lay in American military assistance on a vast scale at the earliest moment.

Cable for 4,000,000 Men.

The Allies thought an American force of 300,000 men the maximum that we could have in France in 1918, but in my opinion that would not be enough to meet the situation. If we could have had half a million fighting men in France in the early spring it would have been a different matter.

But looking ahead it was necessary to allow from 35 to 40 per cent for the services of supply, which would leave out of this number only approximately 300,000 fighting troops. Although this would aid, we could not be content merely to lend a helping hand but must prepare to strike a decisive blow.

While the appearance on the front of any American force was still months away, yet there was little doubt that if we could induce Allied co-operation we should be able to give much greater assistance than they believed possible. Our study having confirmed the correctness of my tentative estimate made on the Baltic, I therefore cabled Washington July 6 as follows:

Plans should contemplate sending over at least 1,000,000 men by next May . . . This estimate would give practically half million men for trenches. Inasmuch as question affects all Allies whose common interests demand that we exert maximum military power consistent with transport problem, suggest early agreement be reached among Allies which would provide requisite transportation. . . . and limit sea transportation to food and military supplies and the exclusion of every kind of luxury as well as other supplies in excess of immediate needs of countries dependent upon oversea supplies.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
Now governor of Porto Rico, as he appeared in France in the war days.

The question was, therefore, one of sea transportation, but so far all efforts to get the Allies, especially the British, to consider giving help to bring our men and supplies had been futile. They did not seem to realize that America would be practically negligible from a military standpoint unless they could provide some shipping. Nor did they seem to appreciate that time was a vital factor.

But the spirit of full co-operation among the Allies did not then exist. They seemed to regard the transportation of an American army over-seas as no concern of theirs. This apparent indifference also gave further color to the suspicion that perhaps after all an American army as such was not wanted. The situation from our standpoint was grave and embarrassing for it looked as though it might not be possible for us to save either the Allies or ourselves.

I recall an after-dinner discussion of this problem with Admiral Sims, during which I stated that according to our plans we should eventually need ships, port and rail facilities and personnel to handle 50,000 tons of freight per day from home for the 2,000,000 men we expected to have. It was somewhat of a surprise to find that Sims apparently regarded this as very much of an exaggeration or else just an army joke.

Although I insisted that it was a positive and serious statement based upon our preliminary study, I doubt whether he was convinced until the time came in 1918 when we had that number of men in France and were actually discharging daily and sending to the front over 45,000 tons of munitions and other supplies.

Reveals Situation to Baker.

Reviewing the situation in France I wrote Secretary of War Baker July 9:

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I feel it important that I should write you confidentially something of the general situation in France as it appears from certain facts that have come to me since my arrival in Paris. Sometime before our arrival, as you know, the French army had been badly hammered, so much that its morale dropped to a very low ebb. As a consequence also the people themselves became very much disheartened and gave voice to rather severe criticism of the army management in general.

The result of all this was that Nivelle was replaced by Petain as commander-in-chief.

Dissatisfaction in the army has rather continued to grow and has probably been encouraged by the French civil socialistic element, no doubt influenced by German socialists. It is generally known that several instances of mutiny have occurred among the troops, and that it became necessary recently to execute some of the ring leaders, variously reported to number from 30 to 120.

The socialistic element of the chamber of deputies itself has subjected the army to criticism that still further served to unsettle the minds of the people, and add to the discontent of the army.

The fact is that France is very tired of this war. The common people openly complain of the heavy taxes, and protest that they are being ground down to enrich government contractors, and possibly officials well up in government service. Prices of food are high, so that the general cost of living weighs heavily upon the civilian population. Coal costs from $80 to $90 per ton and the supply is very limited. Complaints from families have their effect on the men in the ranks, so that the fighting ability of the troops may be seriously impaired by their discontent. The army authorities seem to be gravely concerned, as is indicated by the fact that General Petain last week asked me to meet him at the home of a mutual friend for conference.

At this meeting, he told me frankly that affairs were not going well in France, and that unless the government and the people would stand by the army and assist at home, instead of undermining its morale by criticism and fault-finding, he felt something bordering on revolution might result. Such an outcome, he

BY MAINER LEE TOLER.

"I never pass an American girl over here without shaking her hand."

These words, uttered in a deep bass voice, caused me to turn around quickly and find myself standing face to face with General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces. This was my first introduction to this distinguished general. The incident—to me, it was an event—took place early in 1919 on a roadside "somewhere in France," where I was standing ankle deep in mud serving hot coffee from a rolling canteen to hundreds of American doughboys. It occurred in the late afternoon as General Pershing was returning to general headquarters at Chaumont after reviewing the troops of the twenty-ninth division, better known as the "Blue and Gray," of which General Morton was commanding officer.

The memory of that event thrills me even now after 12 years and the American girl to whom General Pershing spoke has become a grown-up woman. At that first meeting with America's highest ranking soldier I seemed to have struck a responsive chord in his great human heart when I acknowledged that to grasp his hand was indeed an honor long hoped for, and added: "But my canteen mate, Mary Jenkins, anticipates it with even more joy."

"Not Miss Mary B. Jenkins, of Wellesley College?" inquired the stalwart commander.

"Yes, it is she of whom I speak," I replied.

Without a moment's hesitation the general requested me—his request was a command—to accompany him to our canteen near-by to meet Miss Jenkins.

With my doughboy buddies gazing in awe-stricken manner at "Georgia," the nickname they had given me, I climbed into the tonneau of the big seven-passenger khaki-colored Cadillac flying the flag of four stars, with the commander of the American expeditionary forces seated by my side. In that brief ten minutes General Pershing and I talked of Miss Jenkins, who had been a classmate of the late Mrs. Pershing, who, as Miss Frances Warren, graduated with the class of 1903 at Wellesley College. I recall with pleasure the simplicity, the cordiality of the general's greeting to his wife's devoted friend—a wife whose memory he cherishes with love and reverence.

It was a gracious gesture of General Pershing to include me in his invitation to Miss Jenkins to dine with his staff the next day. There we met those officers who had stood bravely and loyally beside their chief in trials that perhaps no commander of armies had ever before experienced. I recall on that day meeting Colonel George Marshall, an ever-ready right hand aide to General Pershing, who is now detailed at Fort Benning, Ga.

My next personal contact with General Pershing was the following May in Paris. There I had the pleasure of serving him a real, honest-to-goodness American ice cream soda in a Y. M. C. A. canteen, where, with 24 other American women, I assisted in mixing and serving this typical American drink to several thousand soldiers daily. General Pershing whose headquarters had moved to Paris at that time, stopped by the canteen frequently with his young son, Warren, who came to Europe in the Spring of 1919 to join his father.

My last meeting with General Pershing took place in May, 1930, in Paris where I was attending a convention of the Women's Overseas Service League. He was a guest speaker at the banquet given at the Lutetia hotel. As he spoke to that large group of American women who served as welfare workers in Europe during and after the World War, my thoughts strayed to that eventful day in 1919 when I first met this soldier of soldiers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Colonel C. E. Stanton, U. S. A. retired, who now lives in this city, modestly accepts the credit given him by General Pershing in the chapter of the Pershing memoirs to be published in Sunday's issue of The Constitution, as author of that famous phrase, "Lafayette, we are here!"

General Pershing, of course, has said repeatedly that it was not he who uttered those ringing words, but despite his efforts to give Colonel Stanton the credit for them, the story has persisted that Pershing was their author.

"The address containing the phrase was made by me at Picpus cemetery, Paris, July 4, 1917," Colonel Stanton explained. "I have made no attempts at publicity, and at the time I didn't realize that any part of my address would command the widespread attention given it.

"June 28 General Pershing sent for me and said: 'There will be a celebration in Paris July 4, in which the American Expeditionary Forces are expected to take part. The Sons of the American Revolution have an annual custom of placing a wreath upon the tomb of Lafayette. Their orator will be Brand Whitlock, United States minister to Belgium. It is proper that an expression be had on behalf of the American Expeditionary Forces, and I depute you for this duty.'

"I asked the general what he desired me to say, and he remarked: 'You will be the best judge, and it will please me greatly if you acquit yourself with credit.'

"Realizing that the occasion was memorable, that it was America's natal day, that our troops were appearing for the first time in Paris and that much interest was centered in the American forces, I gave much thought in preparation for my address. I submitted the manuscript to General Pershing July 1. 'General,' I said, 'here is what I propose to say, if it meets your approval. It will take you about four minutes to read, and me about nine minutes to deliver, but I shall commit it to memory and will do the best that is within me to make the address acceptable.'

"General Pershing took the manuscript, read it carefully, and made no comment. I said to him: 'Do you approve?' and his answer was: 'I would not change a word, Stanton, under any circumstances. I think it is splendid.' And he added at the bottom of the last page of my manuscrip, 'O. K. J. J. P.'

"The expression 'Lafayette, we are here!' was the culmination of the peroration of my address, and the original manuscript verifies the statement that it was a part of the address prepared and uttered by me.

"The reception of my address was extremely enthusiastic and seemed so genuine that General Pershing was prevailed upon to take the rostrum and deliver a short address."

Pershing's "Rolling G. H. Q." Often Sprayed By Shrapnel

BY GENE MORGAN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(NANA)—It is after the dinner hour in General John J. Pershing's rolling G. H. Q., somewhere in France. The long table, with its 14 places for host and guests, has been cleared. Now a great map of northern France is spread on the table and the commanding officer of the American expeditionary forces, with several other high officers and French and American aids, bends over the map.

There is a pattering sound on the roof of the dining car, like gentle rainfall. Through the long, ten-car train rushes a slender, mustached officer, ordering window shades and vestibule curtains drawn and lights extinguished. The strategists of the high command, meeting in General Pershing's private dining car, may imagine it is rain they hear. But the younger officer knows that the pattering sound is caused by pieces of air bombs raining on the car.

The G. H. Q. train, carrying the brains of the A. E. F., is under fire in an airplane raid. But the train has been darkened; there are no marks to distinguish it from an ordinary civilian train. Soon it rides safely out of the bombardment. General Pershing, unperturbed, puffs a cigarette; then, with the staff officers, engrossed in their maps of the war front, "carries on!"

Skipper of Rolling G. H. Q.

The foregoing is a vignette from the war memories of a Chicagoan who knew Pershing through 20 months of intimate association. For nearly two years Earl L. Thornton—now a colonel in the United States army reserve, as well as on Governor Emmerson's staff—administers personally to General Pershing's comfort and physical welfare. He was skipper of the rolling G. H. Q., the special train over most of France and Belgium and into Italy and Germany, from Atlantic port to battle line—traveling altogether more than 75,000 miles.

Colonel Thornton, now an executive at the Palmer House, a hotel man for 32 years, was moved to recall his war-time "close-up" of Pershing, the man, as well as Pershing the soldier, by reading the first chapters of the autobiography of America's most distinguished living soldier, now appearing serially in The Constitution.

Fate's shuffle transformed Thornton, a captain of the quartermaster corps newly arrived in France, into major-domo of the traveling headquarters, from which messages daily sent great armies into action. He was ordered to Chaumont, General Pershing's stationary headquarters, in January, 1918. Here he was ordered to organize the train, henceforth officially designated as "the commander-in-chief's field headquarters train."

With his hotel experience and much native energy, Captain Thornton set about his job. Soon the train was ready. One of the cars contained a power plant for lighting the train, as well as telegraph and telephone apparatus.

Then there was the office car, a remodeled "wagon-restaurant," its walls lined with maps. It contained telephones, which could be connected with military lines of communication five minutes after stopping at any station.

In that car the all-important after-dinner conferences were held. The general's own car followed. It contained a bedroom, a dressing room and a library, and also four compartments, which at various times were occupied by Secretary of War Baker, General Dawes, General Petain, Premier Tardieu and other notables.

The rest of the train was made up of sleeping cars and a dining car for accompanying officers; cars for the enlisted personnel, and, finally, an

When Gen. Pershing Said Last Goodbye To Correspondents

BY JULIA COLLIER HARRIS.

General Pershing's story, now running in The Constitution, must necessarily appeal to thousands of readers who, for one reason or another, feel a deep interest in anything that relates to the World War. It carries an unusual interest for me because I was in Paris during the war at the time of the peace conference and when General Pershing departed for America with the last of our troops.

Just before the latter event, the American newspaper correspondents were invited by General Pershing to a reception at his home on the left side of the Seine, in the Rue de Varennes. My husband was at this time Paris correspondent for the New York Herald and I was doing work for the New York Herald Syndicate; so we were among those who gathered on the emerald-green lawn behind the high stone walls that enclosed the stately old residence which had been put at the disposal of the American commander-in-chief. First impressions of famous people, even though they may not always be the most reliable ones, are at least the most vivid, so I quote from my diary of those days my brief account of this gathering:

"Around July 29 (1919) we went with other correspondents to General Pershing's home, Rue de Varennes. The house and grounds are stately and beautiful. We sat for ten minutes or so on the terrace overlooking the garden, waiting for the general to appear. He came in, seated himself at a table facing us, and gave us an opportunity for a last interview.

"The main statement in this interview was that he hoped the bodies of American soldiers who fell in France would not be removed from that country. He then explained in detail how they would be cared for by France, if left.

"The general is a handsome man, very soldierly, but without much personal magnetism. He appears at first glance to be unusually self-contained, even cold—he does not 'go out' to people. However, this may not be his real nature. The great sorrow he had in losing his wife and children may account for his reserve. He is said to be, in reality, most kind and human. On the other hand, he is said to be not particularly popular among his men because of his rigid disciplinary measures. However, in war times, what else could one expect?

"Our photographs were taken in a group and I had the honor of standing next to General Pershing. After the reception we all went to the Vincennes parade grounds for the review. In the car with us were Mrs. Wilson, of the Baltimore News; Mr. Benham, of the World and a member of the Associated Press. General Pershing stood at salute while the American regiment passed in review. The French gave our men a great ovation. It was a very fine sight."

Looking at the photograph of General Pershing taken at that time I am struck with the close resemblance to current photographs of General Pershing. In the eleven years which have passed, the general has changed very little. He is still the handsome, soldierly figure that welcomed the American correspondents at his Paris home on a July afternoon in 1919.

Editor's Note: The group photograph referred to in the foregoing article is printed today in Page One of The Constitution's Gravure Pictorial section.

How Pershing Met Crisis in Offensive Of Meuse-Argonne

BY COL. GEORGE C. MARSHALL.
Assistant Commandant, Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga.

Editor's Note—The accompanying article on General John J. Pershing as commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Forces was written by Colonel George C. Marshall, assistant commandant at Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga. Colonel Marshall sailed for France in the first convoy of the First Division, remaining with that division until July 18, when he was transferred to general headquarters for one month to work on plans for the St. Mihiel offensive. After joining the First Army for that operation he became chief of operations for the First Army during the Meuse-Argonne campaign, later becoming chief of staff of an army corps. When the corps was about to be demobilized in the spring of 1919 Colonel Marshall became aide to General Pershing, a post which he retained until his departure for China in 1924. When the marriage of Colonel Marshall and Mrs. Katherine Tupper Browne took place in Baltimore last October, General Pershing acted as his former aide's best man.

General Pershing's memoirs should not only provide vividly interesting reading for America but prove an invaluable document for future reference in the development of our national defense. Inevitably there will be comparisons with the memoirs of General Grant and the recent biographies of conspicuous World War figures. In several respects the basis for General Pershing's story differs from all others: He was 3,000 miles from home, the commander-in-chief of our field armies for the entire period of their participation in the war; he not only fought his armies, he had first to organize and train them and he had to create at the ports and across central France a complete supply, transportation and hospital service, as well as an overseas war department. He was at one and the same time a diplomat, a statesman and a military commander. Fortunately for the world, the war ended so abruptly that few had opportunity to realize the wonder of his achievement.

COLONEL GEORGE MARSHALL.

In March, 1918, there was one American division, of 27,000 men, ready for battle. Four months later 300,000 of our soldiers were fighting in the Marne salient, and within seven months 29 combat divisions, six army corps, and two field armies, approximately a million men, were advancing against the enemy. In rear of this vast force another million of men and training, or operating a colossal supply service and preparing to serve three million in the spring and four million by the summer of 1919.

General Pershing's story will shed a direct light on our desperate struggle to develop America's military power and carry it to the battlefield, but he will probably gain little by its publication. His greatest moments will either not be mentioned or touched upon so modestly that few will appreciate the perfection of his leadership in the great crises of our participation in the war.

His first estimate of the situation in July, 1917, and his declaration of the magnitude of the effort America must make, in striking contrast with the narrow view of the war department, was a magnificent stride toward eventual success. His decision to train our troops for open warfare, rather than indoctrinate them with the paralysis of trench warfare methods, required rare courage. It opposed the views of every great allied leader then in command. He dared to differ radically with the unanimous view of men who had three years of war experience. That he was not early relieved, due to a deluge of criticisms and attacks on him, was a tribute to the never-failing support of President Wilson and Mr. Baker. The great German offensive of March, 1918, came in time, to prove him right, as it proved the others to be wrong.

General Pershing was engaged in a continuous struggle with our allies over the disposition of the American troops. All wanted our fresh, vigorous men to bolster up thinned and war-worn ranks. None felt that we could create the vast and complicated mechanism of a great field army in time to save the situation. With tact and tolerance and with occasional compromises, he met the prolonged efforts of war councils, the leading statesman of Europe and the allied commanders to bend him from his purpose. And this despite his embarrassment in having to depend on them for cannon, aeroplanes, artillery ammunition, tanks and large quantities of supplies. Yet when the shock of the German assault precipitated the crisis in March of 1918, General Pershing rose to the occasion and voluntarily, in a few sentences renounced all his slowly won concessions toward the formation of an American army, offering his troops to be scattered along the front from Belgium to Switzerland. Months elapsed before he was able to reconstruct the shattered program for the development of our army.

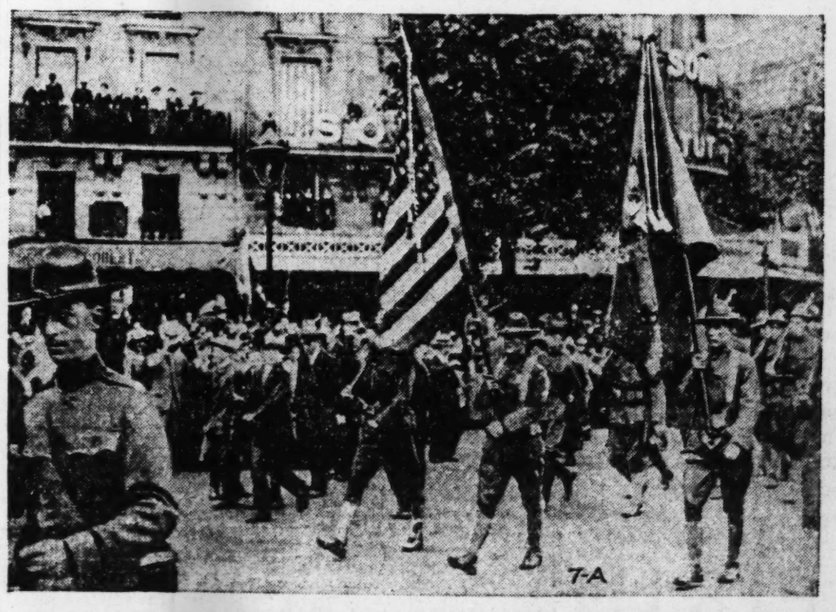

The preceding incidents concern matters not directly involving General Pershing with leadership in battle. But in October, 1918, came the critical moment for the American expeditionary forces. The battle of the Meuse-Argonne had raged for two weeks. Necessity had compelled the employment of partially trained divisions previously inexperienced in battle. Casualties were heavy, daily advances negligible, roads all but impassable, troops exhausted and the weather cold, wet and gloomy. Pessimism was widespread and few officers could see any light in the sky. Gratuitous criticisms from our allies, desirous of obtaining American troops, poured in. American officers of high rank implored their chief to break off the battle.

Out of this forest of gloom and obstacles General Pershing strode, the great leader. Determination written clear in his face, in the very tones of his voice and in his confident bearing, nothing daunting him, he drove, led and cheered the army on to attack after attack. The American soldier responded and finally, on November 1, the army lunged forward in a general assault which broke through the hostile positions and, with increasing momentum, plunged ahead until the heights overlooking Sedan were reached on the morning of November 7.

Few are familiar with this phase of the Meuse-Argonne operation. Public interest was centered on the final exchange of notes between President Wilson and the crumbling German government. Everyone promptly forgot the pessimism, the fears and the weak pleadings of those October days. All jubilated over the battle won, but few realized when and how it was won.

So far as an individual can be said to have decisively influenced the course of such a great operation, General Pershing won the Meuse-Argonne battle on its blackest day at its gloomiest moment. Washington at Trenton and Valley Forge, Grant and his great adversary, Lee, in the wilderness, displayed this rare quality of leadership which triumphs over adversity and difficulties in war.

War Department May Revive Order Washington Founded

BY REX COLLIER.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The "Order of the Purple Heart," a decoration for military gallantry founded by George Washington during the revolutionary war, may be revived by the war department as a special recognition of meritorious service not otherwise eligible for reward.

General Pershing's mention in his war story of the need for such a special decoration has brought to light a recommendation of the general staff that the revolutionary medal be restored to the list of government decorations for conspicuous service.

"A just regard for highly meritorious services requires recognition of signal accomplishments both in peace and in war," a statement from the office of the chief of staff points out.

"While various decorations have been provided for heroism and distinguished service in war, there is no adequate way of rewarding those who perform acts or service in peace and in war, which, while highly meritorious, are not included in the categories contemplated in the law for providing for the award of decorations.

"Washington first recognized this need and established the military medal to be awarded for conspicuous fidelity. He created as a decoration the Order of the Purple Heart as an award for military merit. His order has never been revoked, but it has not been observed since his own period as commander-in-chief. A recommendation has been made by the general staff for its restoration."

Washington's Order.

The general staff has a copy of Washington's general order establishing the decoration. It is dated August 7, 1782, and reads:

"The general, ever desirous to cherish a virtuous ambition in his soldiers, as well as to foster and encourage every species of military merit, directs that whenever any singularly meritorious action is performed, the author of it shall be permitted to wear on his facings over the left breast, the figure of a heart in purple cloth or silk, edged with narrow lace or binding. Not only instances of unusual gallantry, but also of extraordinary fidelity and essential service in any way shall meet with a due reward.

"Before this favor can be conferred on any man, the particular fact, or facts, on which it is to be grounded must be set forth to the commander-in-chief accompanied with certificates from the commanding officers of the regiment and brigade to which the candidate for reward belonged, or

Atlanta's passenger-hopping gentry, ordinarily a not ungenial group of individuals, is likely to be quite gloomy this afternoon, what with a nice parachute jump scheduled for the airport visitors and pouring rain as the alluring menu to be dished up by our weather person, Emmett Plunkett, whose skill as a 'chute performer is surpassed only by his artistry on the harmonica, commonly called the mouth-organ, is scheduled for the feature event this afternoon, and it will take place in the neighborhood of 3:30 o'clock if meteorological conditions are even half-way reasonable. Visitors are requested to stick around a while after the jump is concluded and taste some of the pleasures to be derived from a hop aloft.

After attracting a tremendous amount of interest during its two-day stay here, the Pitcairn Autogiro, in charge of James G. Ray, chief test pilot, departed at noon Saturday for Spartanburg, S. C., from which point the flight to Philadelphia will be resumed today. New bolts were required for the rotor blades and Ray decided to have the work done at Spartanburg Saturday night.

Fully 400 open-minded visitors were at Candler field yesterday morning to look at the strange craft, and though they were given ample opportunity to inspect the ship on the ground, they were shown only one demonstration flight, C. H. Dolan, operations manager for Eastern Air Transport, being the passenger on the single hop taken. There seemed to be a good deal of misconception and speculation surrounding the operation of the rotor system. Started by a power take-off from the autogiro's Whirlwind engine, the blades, from that point, operate independent and rotate under the pressure of the wind produced by the movement of the machine. The blades, which revolve at speeds varying from 120 to 150 r. p. m., furnish 80 per cent of the lift at high forward speed and 100 per cent in vertical descent, its manufacturers assert.

Happening along at Greensboro just after a would-be Eastern Air Transport passenger, bound for Atlanta, had been turned down because of lack of space in a Kingbird, James A. Perry, Jr., in a Curtiss-Wright Flying Service Robin, picked up the disappointed wayfarer and brought him into Atlanta. Perry was returning to Candler field after a charter trip to Washington Thursday. This is an indication of the co-operation given transport companies by all operators at the airport.

Miss Ruth Stewart, St. Louis aviatrix, whose Gipsy Moth was damaged during an attempted night landing a few weeks ago and then put back into shape by Curtiss-Wright mechanics, took off shortly before noon Saturday for Tampa, where she will watch the air meet to take place there Monday and then fly along to the few remaining points to be visited by the Florida Air Tour planes. She is carrying J. T. Wagner, also of St. Louis, as a passenger.

Possibility of a repetition of Miss Stewart's unfortunate accident—assuming that it was chargeable entirely to the field's shortcomings—now seems obviated with the action of the council finance committee in placing the sum of $6,500 in the January money sheet for electrical work at the airport. Joe Berman, new chairman of the borough aviation committee, is to be congratulated for his insistence that Atlanta find the money to revise a system which is a definite hazard to those pilots who are forced to land after nightfall. The money—if council sees fit Monday to accept the finance sheet as drawn—will provide the transfer of the airport floodlight to some point along the southern side of the field; the revision of the boundary light system, such as it is, and the placing of day markers and the installation of a flashing code beacon in accordance with department of commerce requirements.

A real flying family, consisting of Captain George R. Hutchinson, his wife, Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson; their two daughters, Janet Lee and Blanche Kathryn, age 4 and 7, respectively, accompanied by their two-month-old pet African lioness, will arrive in Atlanta Monday, January 26, on a record 22-day trip during which they will call on the governors of every state in the Union. Candler field is one of the final stops to be made, the tour to end on January 28 at New York city.

Flying in a new Stinson Junior, the Hutchinsons started their long journey at Washington on January 3, armed with President Hoover's signature on a scroll upon which is inscribed a message to America—"The Spirit of '31." Captain Hutchinson plans to have the governor of every state in the union affix his signature below that of the president and become the proud possessor of probably the only document of its type in existence.

Georgia is 'way down in the list of licensed pilots as of January 1, 1931, according to statistics just issued by the department of commerce, aeronautics branch. With 15,280 pilots holding department licenses, this state has only 71, according to the figures. Georgia has 40 licensed airplanes, 7,354 being the total for the entire country. The totals show substantial increases since January 1, 1930, according to Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce, on which date there were 10,215 licensed pilots and 6,685 licensed aircraft. The number of unlicensed aircraft decreased during the same period from 3,155 to 2,404.

Among the 15,280 persons who held pilots' licenses at the beginning of the new year were 385 women, of whom 35 were transport, 50 limited commercial and 297 private pilots. The list of licensed mechanics includes five women. The state of New York, the study shows, had the greatest number of licensed planes, with 1,022; California was second with 1,013, and Illinois third with 485. California led the pilot list, with 2,852; New York was second with 1,641, and Illinois third with 931. In all there were 5,792 transport, 1,957 limited commercial, 98 industrial and 7,433 private pilots on January 1, 1931.

THERE IS NO PANIC, THORPE DECLARES

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A caustic indictment of "depression talkers" was delivered here today by Merle Thorpe, editor of The Nation's Business, who said "America has been depressed, dejected and gloomy just because everybody keeps saying that there is a depression and every one has come to believe it even if the facts belie the thoughts."

"This business depression is just a state of mind and the sooner the individuals realize that the future of the nation is in their hands and that depression is an individual ailment which has become nationwide, the depression will end," he declared.

In support of his statements he asserted that "more automobiles were sold last year than ever before in history;" that "46,800,000 freight cars were unloaded in 1930, the largest figure in history;" that "the shoe companies maintained their average sales of two and a half shoes per person," and that "the total increase in bank deposits was something like $52,000,000 and life insurance, another form of saving, showed $18,500,000,000 worth of business—also a new record.

Mr. Thorpe averred that he had recently gone to his tailor to buy his customary two suits for the year, but that "the tailor so impressed me with his talk of hard times that I became alarmed myself and bought only one suit."

He said that "recovery from this state of mind depends on the individual."

In talking with newspapermen, Mr. Thorpe also directed criticism at "the government entering into business competition," politics in general, and said that he had noted a "positive trend towards socialism," in the country at large.

BANKING CHIEF SEES BETTER TIMES

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Pointing to "hopeful signs of renewed industrial and commercial activities throughout the country today," Rome C. Stephenson, of South Bend, Ind., president of the American Bankers' Association, here tonight for a local bankers' banquet, predicted that "it will not be many months before business is back to normal."

"There is no doubt whatever that the low point in our economic depression was passed in December and business now is gradually improving throughout the country," declared Mr. Stephenson in discussing the situation.

"Banks throughout the country are in an excellent and strong financial position and there is no doubt that they will emerge from this depression stronger and better qualified to serve their patrons than ever before."

Townsfolk Watch Fire While Bank Is Robbed

ROCKTON, Ill., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Most of the folks here are fire fans. It was not surprising, therefore, when most of the townspeople went to see the Rockton grade school burn, that it was convenient for two men to walk into the state bank, take $2,000, and leave while the fire was still burning.

Hog Yields Millions Of Dime Sandwiches

CARLISLE, Pa., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Picture a ham weighing 105 pounds and a slab of bacon tipping the scales at 42 pounds. These were the weights of only two of a number of pieces of pork which "Huntsdale Rainbow," a pure-bred Poland China hog, yielded when butchered of Newville, near here.

NEW SCHOOL BUDGET HIT BY MRS. NELSON

Sutton Also Attacked in Statement Made by Board Member.

Declaring that the school budget calling for expenditures of $3,722,000 for 1931 should not have been presented to the finance committee for consideration because it had not been approved by the board of education in regular session, Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, commissioner from the sixth ward, issued a statement Saturday flaying the automatic increases for the instructional staff.

She also criticized Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, for alleged failure to provide a detailed allocation of the budget, which she held was necessary in order that members of the board of education might know where the money is to go.

The board received the budget formally at its reorganization meeting, January 2, but deferred consideration pending allocation of school funds by council, which is slated for Monday.

Text of Mrs. Nelson's statement follows:

"The school budget presented to the finance committee of city council last week had no right to be submitted to them, because it had not been examined by the board of education in session nor approved by them. At the December meeting of the board Mr. Sutton stated in substance that he would not go into details as he had heretofore. Mr. Noland at once said that he must have details. I said the same. But Mr. Sutton ignored these just requests.

"In 1930, the wildest budget was presented to us that I had ever seen in all my public life. I pointed out many extravagant features. Some of the most important principals and P.-T. A. officials agreed with me. Since a board member had the audacity to object to certain items in his budget, Mr. Sutton determined that this year the budget should be so vague that we could not understand it clearly, hence could not point out defects. His argument was that it might cost $500 to give details to the board of education.

"I am at a loss to know why it should cost so much. But Mr. Sutton had the principals make their requests in detail and he proposed salary raises, yet thought it unreasonable to give details to the board, so we could know just what we are voting for. Even if it cost $500, that would be a trifle compared to what we might save from that budget. Last year Mr. Ritchie sent tentative budgets for each ward to its commissioner, informing us that there was no prospect for hardly any of the items enumerated.

"I therefore asked my principals to list the necessities, so we might at least work for them. Three of my schools then voluntarily agreed to cut out something over $12,000. Every one of these items thus eliminated had been restored to the budget, when it was presented to council!

"In the 1931 budget Mr. Sutton states, 'The morale of our teachers and principals is of a very high order. This has been brought about by the board of education having put into operation a salary schedule, etc.' This implies that the teachers' morale is not caused by fine character, but by a certain salary. This is very uncomplimentary to principals and teachers, and is absolutely untrue. The morale of our principals and teachers was just as high before the salary raise, as it now is. We cannot depend upon any of the Sutton statements regarding the low cost per pupil in our schools, because we cannot depend upon anything he says.

"Mr. Gaines states that the average pay for teachers in the elementary schools is $143.05—for principals from $212.50 to $290 a month. Junior and senior high teachers is from $131 to $231. The average high school salary is $192.69. The salary for junior and senior high principals is from $230.83 to $352.67 per month. No income tax on these salaries, teaching five hours a day, five days a week, three-month vacation on full pay. In addition, there is the automatic increases. Which means that a teacher or principal can live at home with his family and attend a college a few miles from Atlanta for a few weeks and then receive a degree. Then his salary jumps.

"One year Mr. Sutton stated at a board meeting that the automatic increase would be $166. I made a memorandum of the amount. Mr. Ritchie informs me, in answer to a request, that the automatic increase for September through December, 1930, was $29,997.88 and that this may be the estimate for 1931—which makes the sum total for 1931 $119,991.52.

"Atlanta's financial situation does not seem to be nearly as bad as that of various other cities. Yet we know what it is here. The salary of educated men of family cut to $100 a month. Many thousands out of any job, not only workmen, but in some cases men who have spent thousands on their education, dropped through no fault of theirs. Young couples straining to pay their instalments on homes, many going under the hammer. Yet it is proposed to increase a necessity like water rates! That increase would in too many cases cut off the nickels and dimes children take to Sunday school, lessen their amount of milk at home, etc. Why should we pay teachers $120,000 per year to receive a degree? Why shouldn't they possess sufficient knowledge to do their work when they are appointed? Our average is 1,000 applicants on the waiting list. Plenty to choose from. Then with superintendents, three assistant superintendents and supervisors galore, it would seem that the steps of these teachers might be guided in right paths without bleeding taxpayers a second time. We have not the slightest evidence that these expensive automatic increases make teachers a particle better. To have satisfactory teachers they must possess a thorough education in the fundamentals, common sense, patience, knowledge of human nature, a sensible curriculum, and time enough to do justice to that curriculum. Many teachers and P.-T. A. members declare that they do not possess these things now. There is a widespread belief among those close to our schools that the fundamentals of education are not as well taught in our schools now as they were 40 years ago, the trouble being that there are too many fads, too many interruptions, teachers cannot do their best.

"Cut off every dollar of automatic increase. Give us money for necessary repairs on schools. This would help children and give idle men jobs. Investigate our schools. You can give a better education on less money."

NO PAIN!
There is one form of relief from pain that is always permissable. "Don't let the patient suffer," says the doctor, "for pain retards recovery." The nurse gives Bayer Aspirin knowing it can do no harm, only good. The patient takes it gladly, because it means immediate relief. Men and women use these tablets freely to spare themselves needless pain.
Do you let Bayer Aspirin help you in all the ways it might? To end a headache. Break-up a cold, soothe a sore throat. Ease the misery from neuralgia or neuritis. Relieve the worst case of rheumatism; sciatica; lumbago. Quiet a grumbling tooth, or any other nagging pain. And Bayer Aspirin is the standby of many women at times when they would suffer severely without its aid!
Get genuine aspirin. The box should say Bayer. The tablet stamped Bayer does not depress the heart. When you take Bayer Aspirin you know what you are taking. What do you know about an imitation, except that it costs a few cents less?

Mayor's Committee To Launch Big Drive to Assist Jobless

Better Business Group Seeks To Create Work. Campaign in Newspapers, Radio and Pulpit.

Appeal to the public to help create work for Atlanta's unemployed—the thousands of breadwinners who are seeking the means to support their families—will be made in a broad campaign by the Atlanta Better Business committee beginning Monday.

Through newspapers, by radio, posters of every size, pulpit and forum messages and window displays, the appeal will ask Atlantans to help provide work. The posters as prepared Saturday bear this request:

"Clean Up, Paint Up—Repair, Rebuild—Now!"

"The Need is Great—the Cost is Low!"

The appeal is accompanied by a statement by Mayor Key, who urges a response not only as a means of providing work for the unemployed but also of developing new aspects of cleanliness and beauty here.

Most Important Item.

The better business committee has planned to make this campaign to create work one of the most important items of its activity. The committee, which has been in operation since December 8 for relief of the unemployment situation, presented Saturday a review of its work in the existing emergency, showing service to 4,294 cases of need caused by unemployment in the period of December 8 to January 10.

The number of cases involved 6,999 persons, and were served at cost of $6,282.28.

Increasing need of service in the existing emergency was revealed in the item of the report that relief was necessary for 1,346 persons in the single week ending January 10, and that the cost has mounted to $2,500 a week. Funds for the work have been raised from private sources and the report asserted that Atlantans of large and moderate means alike have given "with generosity and spirit in keeping with the finest traditions of the city."

The report explained that the Atlanta Better Business committee, organized of representative citizens in line with President Hoover's national program of unemployment relief, perceiving that the task was one of social service and human problems, decided to utilize the city's established social welfare agencies, which are those maintained through the Community Chest, rather than set up a new machinery.

To Avoid Duplication.

The policy in this respect, it was explained, was to avoid duplication of effort and money and to make use of an organization of proved effectiveness in dealing with human need. However, emergency headquarters were established at 85 Poplar street, opposite the postoffice building, as a means of speeding up the special relief needed in unemployment cases and of being in direct touch with the Community Employment Service in the same building.

Objects of the emergency work were outlined as to relieve the established social service agencies of the unusual burden which conditions placed upon them, to register all cases of need growing out of unemployment, to ascertain the financial situation and necessities in each case, and to provide a machinery for immediate relief.

The review of the work explained that although the Community Chest campaign of last fall was successful, the funds subscribed then were adequate only for the regular program of human helpfulness by the 38 Chest agencies, and that the unemployment situation was an emergency not anticipated nor provided for in the routine of necessary social service.

As indicating the necessity and extent of the employment relief program, the report asserted that of 145,305 workers in Atlanta, a total of 14,000, or approximately 1 in 10, is jobless. Of this number, according to the report, 6,000 to 8,000 are breadwinners with dependents looking to them for food, shelter and the necessities of existence.

The normal number of unemployed in Atlanta was estimated in the report at 3,000. It was said 7,342 applications for work have been filed at the Community Employment Service, the bureau maintained through the Chest.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

said, would permit the Germans to dictate the terms of peace instead of the Allies. He, of course, feels that our entering the war has brought courage to the nation, but realizing as he does that we shall not be in a position to render any material assistance before next spring, he thinks that, in addition to that, some outside pressure might be brought that would check political intrigue among government officials and prevent a further loss of confidence among the people at large.

As you know, of course, politics ordinarily plays a very important part in every act of the average French public official and they are inclined to over-play the game. Of course anything like a revolution in France at this time might not be easy to stop, and the final burden of the war might thus fall upon our shoulders. Realizing the low spirits of the people, I have taken advantage of an occasional opportunity, without appearing to meddle and without talking too much, to speak encouragingly of the splendid stamina of the French people and of the army, and have endeavored to inspire confidence among them in their military organization and its commander.

With this same idea of bolstering up French morale, General Petain has issued a public statement setting forth the reasons why the French are fighting. Before giving it out, he asked me if I would do something to back it up after it was published. I am enclosing a translation of General Petain's article, and my brief comment published the following day.

General Petain believes that perhaps there may come a time when President Wilson, for whom the whole French nation have a sublime admiration, might take some action through the French ambassador at Washington, or otherwise, that would stiffen or maybe frighten the French government into a full realization of the seriousness of these matters and of their responsibility in the premises. By this I mean the civil end of the government in whose hands rests so much obligation to support their army commanders.

Disagreed With Ambassador.

On the other side of this general view of the subject, our ambassador here, (Mr. Sharp) holds the opinion, which I have gained from general conversation with him, that all factions of France are working together harmoniously. I should add also that many others hold this same view. Of course they all know of the general complaints and all that, but they do not regard them as indicating anything serious. I have the very highest regard for Mr. Sharp and for what he says, and what I say is in no way a criticism of him. He is in every sense a high-minded and, I believe, efficient and conscientious official. But I am writing in order that you may also have the viewpoint of the French commander-in-chief, whose views I could not safely mention to anyone else.

It must be stated that our Fourth of July celebration with troops participating has stirred all France; also that yesterday the government and the chamber of deputies seem to have had a very satisfactory understanding, and the French people are in much better spirits than when General Petain made the above comments on the situation. General Petain, himself, now says that the morale of the army has improved lately. So for the present things look better.

My own opinion is that the army, as it stands today, can hold on until spring against any probable effort of the enemy, but that poverty and discontent, magnified by the socialistic press, especially should the government fail to continue to back up the army, may so dishearten the people and the army that the latter will lose its morale and disaster will follow.

I shall do everything consistent with my position to encourage and hearten both people and soldiery. With the Red Cross now under an organization that is working practically under my very general control, much can be done to cheer up the soldier in the trenches and to help his family at home during the coming winter. The Y. M. C. A. is also working with us in its own field toward the same end.

I should very much prefer that all this be held as entirely confidential in so far as my conference with General Petain and my remarks about the ambassador are concerned. For General Petain's sake, as well as my own, no suggestion or recommendation should be made connecting him or me in any way with whatever course that may be considered advisable, should future events seem to suggest action along the lines indicated.

I trust, Mr. Secretary, that you will understand that I am writing you only because I feel that in no other way could I place before you a view of the situation and its possibilities. In conclusion, I would add that I have the utmost confidence in General Petain, and believe that he is a loyal patriot, whose sole aim is to serve and save France.

With high personal esteem and respect, I remain

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) JOHN J. PERSHING.

Whitehead Ordered To Defend New Suit

HAVANA, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Conkey P. Whitehead, wealthy American resident of Havana, was directed by the municipal court of Marianao today to defend a legal action brought against him by Dr. Bautisas Perez Cabo. The nature of the action was not disclosed.

automobile car which carried the two big autos which enabled Pershing to get as close to the front as the army's head could be permitted to go.

Breakfast at 7:30.

Aboard his rattling headquarters General Pershing's business day began promptly at 7:30 a. m. He lived in what doughboys would have considered luxury. Let Colonel Thornton tell about it.

"The general's breakfast mostly consisted of fruit, wheat cakes, boiled eggs, toast and tea. Breakfast aboard the train was informal—that is, the guests might come in singly, eat and depart at will. The general was tolerably fond of wheat cakes—probably an old Missouri custom. After some difficulty, we succeeded in teaching the French chef how to put the chief in good humor for the tremendous work of the day.

"Luncheon and dinner were formal affairs. There were place cards, and each man was seated according to rank. Room for fourteen at that long table and no more. The overflow, if there happened to be any, ate with the aids in their mess car. Talk about 'high ranking' stuff! More than once a brigadier general, a guest aboard the special, found that there were so many excellencies ahead of him at the chief's table that he had to be content with a place with mere colonels, majors and captains!

"But the general's breakfast was a thing of great importance, in spite of its informality. We never had to confess a shortage of boiled eggs. More than once we sent out a foraging expedition through the countryside, to get one 'oof' here, two more there.

"The doughboy out in the rain probably didn't dream that General Pershing faced the rain, too. During the Meuse-Argonne drive, our special was parked in the shelter of a grove near the village of Souilly. All about us the terrain was shelled day and night, but for some reason the enemy artillery and aircraft never spotted our train.

"There, no matter how hard it was raining, General Pershing would step out of his car and walk up and down the train's length for an hour or more, selecting one of his aids as a walking companion. Although I was many years his junior it taxed my endurance to keep up with him on these vigorous hikes. The walk finished, he would return to his office car, tackling reports, messages and orders with renewed vigor. Physically and mentally he seemed almost tireless."

Several times, while making inspections of various parts of the front, or while on the way to pay official calls to allied chieftains, the general's train came under fire of long-range artillery or airplanes.

Many Narrow Escapes.

"During the Big German push in 1918 Secretary Baker was a guest aboard the train," Colonel Thornton recalled. "At Amiens a great crowd stood in the railroad yards watching the railroad station. 'Find out,' said Mr. Baker to Count De Chambrun, of the general's staff, 'what all the excitement is about.' 'Mr. Secretary,' the count replied, 'the enemy is shelling the railroad station.' In another moment we were rolling past the station, with its shattered roof and broken windows.

"Whenever the general visited England the special train would wait for him in Boulogne. There we had narrow escapes from several air bombardments. Another time, when the general was bound on an official visit to the king and queen of Belgium, the train ran into a heavy shower of metal near Dunkerque. Pershing was forced to transfer secretly to a motor car and proceed by an indirect route, while the train backed out of the danger zone.

"The lighter side of General Pershing's character, in contrast with his austere dignity during trying days, scarcely made itself manifest until after the armistice. Then his young son, Warren, came to join us and the atmosphere brightened. Once, at Le Mans, the general ran a foot race with his boy the length of the train. I've forgotten who was victor, but the general came in joyous and panting. When we crossed over into Germany young Warren, in his little suit of khaki, and with a toy gun, mounted guard over his father's car, as did demure little Rene, daughter of Captain the Count De Marenches. One day a civilian managed to get on the train but was quickly ejected via an officer's boot. After that Warren kept a bayonet on his toy rifle.

"Throughout 20 months of service with General Pershing I did not receive a cross word from him or anything approaching a reprimand. He was kind and considerate, but quickly moved to wrath by failure to carry out his orders precisely."

Colonel Thornton war decorations include those of officer of the Order of the Crown of Belgium, Defenders of Verdun, France; Officer de l'Instruction Publique, France, and Knight of the Order of Saints Maurice and Lazarus, Italy. The "souvenir" he would have prized most highly was left behind. That was General Pershing's old "wagon-restaurant," sprayed by rain, hail and shrapnel, where the war was won over maps—and where little Warren mounted guard with his toy rifle.

STOCK LAND BANKS BILL IS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The senate banking committee today approved the house bill to liberalize the law regarding mergers of joint stock land banks.

No action was taken on the Harrison bill to extend the time for mortgage payments to federal land banks.

Testimony in favor of both bills was presented to the committee yesterday, but members of the farm loan board opposed the Harrison bill.

The bill which was reported would allow one joint stock land bank to purchase another which had gone into receivership and to operate in the state in which the second was located.

N. Y. MAGISTRATE DENIES HE'LL QUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud, one of whose decisions is under scrutiny in an inquiry into magistrates' courts, telegraphed the New York Sun today from Del Ray Beach, Fla., denying he intended to resign.

At a recent hearing a young businesswoman whose real name was concealed charged she was "framed" by vice squad men and found guilty by Magistrate Renaud on the testimony of a single policeman, although her husband and four character witnesses testified for her.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHING FOR DROUTH REGIONS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Eighteen crates of children's new clothing were shipped today from the district of Columbia Red Cross chapter into various drouth stricken regions.

Clothing materials which normally go to foreign and island chapters were turned over by the District of Columbia chapter to the National Red Cross to be made into garments for drouth sufferers.

WASHINGTON ORDER MAY BE REINVESTED

other incontestable proofs, and upon granting it, the name and regiment of the person with the action so certified are to be enrolled in the book of merit which will be kept at the orderly office. Men who have merited this last distinction to be suffered to pass all guards and sentinels which officers are permitted to do.

"The road to glory in a patriot army and a free country is thus open to all—this order is also to have retrospect to the earliest stages of the war, and to be considered as a permanent one."

Apparently this badge was bestowed but rarely during the revolution. So far as existing records show, only three American soldiers ever received it. They were Sergeant Daniel Bissel, of the second Connecticut regiment, Continental army; Sergeant Daniel Brown, of the fifth Connecticut regiment, Continental army, and Sergeant Elijah Churchill, of the second Continental dragoons, also a Connecticut organization.

From papers now in the library of congress and elsewhere the story of the exploits of these early heroes has been reconstructed by John C. Fitzpatrick, an authority on Washingtoniana, now with the George Washington bicentennial commission but formerly assistant chief of the manuscript division of the library of congress.

Sergeants Churchill and Brown were decorated for heroism in action, while Sergeant Bissel won his award for daring and efficiency as a spy.

Sergeant Churchill's citation, dated May 1, 1783, and signed by Lieutenant Colonel Jonathan Trumbull, Jr., is among the Washington papers in the library of congress. It states that "Whereas it hath ever been an established maxim in the American service that the road to glory was open to all, that honorary rewards and distinctions were the greatest stimuli to virtuous actions and that distinguished merit should not pass unnoticed or unrewarded; and, whereas a board of officers . . . have reported in the words following: 'That Sergeant Churchill, of the second regiment of light dragoons, in the several enterprises against Fort St. George and Fort Slongo on Long Island, in their opinion acted a very conspicuous and singularly meritorious part; that at the head of each body of attack he not only acquitted himself with great gallantry, firmness and address, but that the surprise in one instance and the success of the attack in the other, proceeded in a considerable degree from his conduct and management' now therefore, know ye that the aforesaid Sergeant Elijah Churchill hath fully and truly deserved and hath been properly invested with the honorary badge of military merit, and is hereby authorized and entitled to pass and repass all guards and military posts as fully and amply as any commissioned officer whatsoever; and is hereby further recommended to that favorable notice that a brave and faithful soldier deserves from his countrymen."

Forlorn Hope.

The certificate in Sergeant Brown's case recited that "in the assault of the enemy's left redoubt at Yorktown, in Virginia, on the evening of October 14, 1781, he conducted a forlorn hope with great bravery, propriety and deliberate firmness, and that his general character appears unexceptional."

Mr. Fitzpatrick explains that a "forlorn hope" was the nickname for a dangerous movement of an advance party, the hazards of which were "so great that the attackers can have but a forlorn hope of coming through alive." Sergeant Brown's party was the first to dash forward in the face of withering fire, and the audacity of the attackers so confused the British that the redoubt was captured in less than 15 minutes of fighting.

Sergeant Bissel was honored by General Washington for a daring adventure inside the British lines, in quest of information for the American forces. An entry in Washington's general orders, dated June 8, 1783, at Newburgh, says:

"Sergeant Bissel, of the Second Connecticut regiment, having performed some important services within the immediate knowledge of the commander-in-chief, in which the fidelity, perseverance and good sense of the said Sergeant Bissel were conspicuously manifested; it is therefore ordered that he be honored with the badge of merit. He will call at headquarters on Tuesday next for the insignia and certificate to which he is hereby entitled."

The first board to consider candidates for the Purple Heart was appointed by General Washington in 1782. A general order directed that: "The inspector general (or in his absence the inspector of the northern army), the adjutant general, Brigadier General Huntington, Colonel Greaton and Lieutenant Colonel Barber or any three of them are appointed a board to examine the pretentions of the noncommissioned officers and soldiers who are candidates for the badge of merit; the board will report their opinion to the commander-in-chief. All certificates and recommendations will be lodged with the adjutant general, who will occasionally summon the board to assemble."

General Washington's order establishing the order of the Purple Heart was a "permanent" one. Since it has never been revoked, it is necessary only to revive it for modern application, the general staff holds. The order has lain dormant so long, however, it is probable a new general order will be issued to restore it. Since the original order was formulated by the "commander-in-chief," it is likely the new proclamation will come from the present commander-in-chief, President Hoover.

Military Medals.

The only military medals awarded by the government now are the congressional medal of honor, the distinguished service cross, the distinguished service medal, the soldier's medal, the distinguished flying cross and so-called campaign or service medals, such as the victory medal, not for special individual deeds.

The time limit for award of the congressional medal of honor, distinguished service cross and distinguished service medal for World War service expired seven years ago, but a special act of congress in 1928 authorized the war department to consider for further awards all applications which were pending when the time limit expired. Under this extended authority a number of decorations have been conferred during the past few years.

So far 93 awards of the congressional medal of honor "for individual acts of gallantry in the World War" have been made, in addition to six medals bestowed on unknown, unidentified soldiers and one conferred on Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh by special act of congress. Before the World War a total of 1,723 congressional medals had been issued.

The distinguished service cross, "for acts of heroism performed during the World War," has been awarded to 6,310 persons. The distinguished service medal has gone to 2,157 men. The soldier's medal, authorized in 1926, has been given to 29 men. The distinguished flying cross has been conferred on 47 aviators, and 1,267,736 victory medals have been issued.

Military decorations are granted by a special board of awards at the war department, headed by Brigadier General George M. Simonds, assistant chief of staff, war plans division.

$100,000,000 IS ASKED FOR PUBLIC BUILDING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—An administration proposal for an additional $100,000,000 public building program was introduced today in the house by Chairman Elliott, of the public buildings committee.

The measure was introduced at the request of the treasury. In addition, it would increase the annual outlay for public buildings from $50,000,000 to $65,000,000 and would abolish the restriction providing that not in excess of $10,000,000 could be expended for federal buildings in any one state.

Elliot explained that all of the new fund would be expended outside the District of Columbia. At present, public building construction amounting to $363,000,000 had been authorized outside the District of Columbia but $48,000,000 of the construction is being held up pending disposal of existing structures.

CLUB TO OBSERVE 16TH ANNIVERSARY

The birthday of Kiwanis International will be celebrated by the Atlanta Kiwanis Club on Tuesday when Kiwanians here will join with the 1,869 other clubs in the United States and Canada to commemorate the 16th anniversary of the organization, Dr. Gordon G. Singleton, president of the Atlanta club, announced Saturday.

The first club was organized in Detroit in 1915. On January 21 of that year the first meeting was held. The service organization has grown rapidly and today there is a membership of approximately 100,000. Raymond M. Crossman, of Omaha, is the International president. Kiwanis International will hold its next annual convention in Miami May 3-7, 1931.

"The Atlanta club is now 14 years old," said Dr. Singleton, "and we have enjoyed the growth and development that has come to the international organization of which we are a chartered and active unit."

A splendid program of entertainment and information has been prepared by Will J. Hammond, first vice president of the club.

KEY HOSPITAL PLEA DISCUSSION MONDAY

County Finance Committee Will Take Up Request for $350,000.

Fulton county contributions for 1931 to local hospitals, military units and other causes will be considered by the finance committee of the county commission at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mayor James L. Key has asked for $350,000 from the county for Grady hospital, Battle Hill sanitarium and the contagious disease hospital, but has received no encouragement from the commission on the county's prospects of being able to give this sum.

The 1930 appropriations were: Georgia Tech, Battle Hill, Grady and the chamber of commerce, $10,000 each; Scottish Rite hospital, Atlanta freight bureau, $5,000 each; Atlanta convention bureau, $3,600; 122d infantry, national guard, $2,500; U. S. naval reserve, $1,500; Troop C, 108th cavalry, $1,200, and Uncle Remus Home, $500.

MANAGERS' SECURITIES IS DISSOLVED BY G.M.C.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—How 80 executives of the General Motors Corporation became millionaires through purchase of its stock was recalled today with the dissolution of the Managers' Securities Company.

It was this company through which the executives were enabled to purchase 4,509,000 shares of General Motors stock in 1923, for about $44,000,000, or an average individual investment of $550,000. Today the stock is valued at $164,000,000, which, divided equally, would give each executive $2,050,000. In addition, there have been several stock dividends and split-ups.

The men who achieved financial independence under the plan will now be able, if they desire, to obtain actual possession of the stock for the first time. The assets of the Managers' Securities Company have been taken over by the General Motors Securities Company, formed 10 years ago by the E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Co. to hold the latter's investment in General Motors.

Previously the stockholders of the Managers' Securities merely owned shares in a company that indirectly owned 4,509,000 shares of General Motors stock. Now they will receive stock in the General Motors Securities Company, which they may exchange for the underlying General Motors stock. Although this privilege has been available since December 31, 1930, it is understood that few, if any, of the executives, all of whom are understood to be holders of General Motors stock acquired independently, have taken advantage of the offer.

A new seven-year plan now is in effect through which General Motors has agreed to sell 1,385,000 shares of its stock to more than 200 executives. The new plan went into effect last year.

1,500 To Attend Annual Farm And Marketing Conference

Every County in State Likely To Be Represented at Meeting in Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Fifteen hundred persons are expected here January 26-31 for the annual farmers' week and marketing conference at the State College of Agriculture.

Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the college, today estimated that the attendance would include representatives from practically every county and agricultural, commercial business and industrial enterprise in the state.

The conference, Dr. Soule said, has for an objective this year of the restabilization of rural life.

"No more important or essential subject has ever engaged the attention of the delegates who will be present," Dr. Soule said, "that being true, the very best program which it has been possible for us to organize and develop has been prepared.

"A thoroughly practical and concrete procedure has been worked out and will be placed in the hands of those in attendance, as a basis for solving the problems now confronting them.

"They will be asked to take these conclusions back to the communities from which they come and help put them into effect.

"The possibilities for rendering a fundamental and essential service to Georgia through the agency of this conference are therefore of a most important and fundamental nature.

"We have diversified our crops to a remarkable degree and have gone a long way toward making our 'live at home' program a practical entity rather than a mere theory. As a result of this, Georgia is even now in a better position than any other southern state.

"The task which confronts us is a tremendous one and while we have not been able to accomplish all that seems desirable, our progress along many lines has been remarkable."

The questions to be discussed include those of improving farm practices, the enlargement of marketing and research facilities and the dissemination of new and valuable information for the benefit of Georgia farmers and homemakers.

Governor-elect Richard B. Russell, Jr., and prominent farmers and educators are on the program for addresses and as leaders in important subjects to be discussed at the conference.

Canning Course to Be Given.

The first commercial canning course offered at the Georgia State College of Agriculture will be given from January 27-30, inclusive.

The entire program will be handled by state college authorities and will cover almost every angle necessary for the success of the canning industry in Georgia.

In commenting on the necessity for such a school and a larger industry, Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the college, sponsoring the school, said:

"The fact that we are importing vast quantities of canned goods that we should now be producing at home and sending to other less favored sections, constitutes a matter upon which we should center our energy and zeal at this time.

"Canning enterprises can fortunately be organized and handled on a community basis. The capital needed for plants of this character can often be raised locally and, therefore, set up on a thoroughly sound co-operative basis."

There will be sessions both morning and afternoon in the horticultural building of the state college, closing with a general discussion of the course and a question box.

TWO STUDENTS NAMED TO SIGMA DELTA CHI

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Valco Lyle, Athens, and H. H. Martin, Commerce, have been selected for membership in Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity by the University of Georgia chapter.

Both of the pledges are juniors in the Henry W. Grady school of journalism. Mr. Lyle is sports editor of the Athens Banner-Herald and has had several years of reportorial experience.

Mr. Martin, also a reporter on the Banner-Herald, is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The date for the initiation of these two new pledges and Frank Drake, news editor of the The Red and Black, who was pledged during the fall term, will be fixed at the next meeting of the fraternity.

NAVAL STORES LEADERS WILL MEET TUESDAY

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Representatives of the different branches of the naval stores trade will meet here at noon Tuesday to consider the proposed cancellation of existing freight rates on naval stores to, from and between points in southern territory.

It has been proposed to substitute for present carload rates 19 per cent of the existing first-class rate on turpentine. Further, it has been proposed to cancel all existing less than carload commodity rates and apply in their stead the class rates based on classification ratings.

Ocean Pushed Back 100 Feet at Tybee

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP) The Atlantic ocean has been pushed back 100 feet from the Fort Screven reservation at the north end of Tybee island by a steel anti-erosion structure erected under supervision of United States engineers. The effect of the structure has been to turn the force of destructive northeasters and straighten out waves.

Missing Youths Found By Police in Macon

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Lure of the ocean and its nymphs and pleasure boats prompted two Knoxville (Tenn.) boys to run away from home, they told Macon police Friday.

The boys, Franklin Burr, 16, and Ray Evans, 13, left their homes last Tuesday and started for Florida.

They arrived here. The police, in the meantime, had received requests from Knoxville to be on the lookout for them. Both were picked up as they were about to continue their journey southward.

"I've never seen the ocean," said one of the boys. "We learned in school that there is a lot of coast in Florida, and we've seen a lot of tourists going that way, so we followed."

The boys were penniless when they reached here, police said.

MELON ACREAGE CUT IS URGED BY FIROR

Agriculture College Professor Warns Against Unsatisfactory Market.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Professor G. H. Firor, extension horticulturist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, issued a warning Saturday that unless 1931 watermelon acreage is reduced below that of 1930 last year's unsatisfactory market situation may be repeated.

Total watermelon acreage of the country showed an increase of about 9 per cent last year over 1929, the horticulturist said, with marked increases in Georgia, North and South Carolina, Missouri and Arkansas.

Carlot shipments in 1930, Professor Firor said, amounted to about 50,000 cars, an increase of about 6,500 cars over 1929. The previous peak was about 55,000 cars in 1926.

Unusually rapid marketing of the Georgia crop also contributed to the "discouraging results," he said. Carlot shipments from Georgia during the week ended June 21 were reported at 133 cars, and increased to more than 4,500 cars the following week. During the same week Florida shipped more than 3,500 cars and the total figure for the country was reported to be more than 10,000 cars, believed to be the highest weekly movement on record.

Especially lower prices prevailed last year in Georgia and South Carolina, Professor Firor said. In these two states increases in production were largest.

In Alabama, Arizona, Mississippi and Texas the 1930 acreage showed little change from 1929. Prices in those states, the horticulturist said, averaged about the same as in 1929.

LYONS-TO-BLITCHTON ROAD PAVING SOUGHT

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Reports here Saturday from Washington said Congressman Edwards, of Georgia, had taken up with Georgia and federal representatives, as well as with officials of several Georgia counties, the proposal to get route No. 30 on the program for this or next year.

The highway proposed by him to be paved runs from Lyons through Reidsville, Claxton, Pembroke and connects with Route No. 80 at Blichton. The congressman was reported to have discussed the matter not only with the state highway board and the chief of the United States bureau of roads, but with county commissioners and representatives in the state legislature of Chatham, Bryan, Evans, Tattnal and Toombs counties.

NEGRO WOMAN HELD IN THEFT OF $690

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Police report the arrest of Ethel Mitchell, negro woman, for the theft of $690 from the Elm Inn.

The woman, officers said, aroused the suspicions of a Mulberry street merchant when she attempted to pay for a $10 dress with a $100 bill, thinking the currency was of only $10 denomination.

She was arrested shortly afterward and authorities said $656 was found on her person, identified by Proprietor Walker of the inn as being of the denominations missing.

COLONEL A. G. HARRIS.

Tift County Woman Heads Board of Trade

TIFTON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A woman will guide the destinities of Tift's county-wide civic organization, the Tifton County Board of Trade.

Mrs. P. D. Fulwood, a native of Tifton, and prominent in church, civic and social life of the city, was named president for 1931 at the organization's annual meeting.

Joseph Kent was named first vice president; J. S. Taylor, second vice president, and W. J. Davis, treasurer.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE IS HELD IN WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 17.—The annual missionary institute of the Waycross Methodist district was held at the First Methodist church, here, with delegates present from Alma, Blackshear, Broxton, Brunswick, Darien, Douglas, Folkston, Hebardville, Hinesville, Homerville, Jesup, Ludowici, Nahunta, Odum, Pearson, Screven, St. Marys, Waresboro, Waycross, White Oak and Willacoochee.

Of the 24 churches in the district only one was not represented, West Green, and the delegates from that church was kept away by illness.

The Rev. James R. Webb, presiding elder, was in charge. The devotional was led by the Rev. J. D. McCord, of Hinesville, and the opening prayers were by the Rev. C. W. Curry, of Jesup, and the Rev. Norman Lovein, of Macon.

Addresses Made.

The addresses of the morning session were by the Rev. George E. Clary, of Macon, conference Sunday school secretary; the Rev. John M. Outler, of Waycross, chairman of the conference missionary board; the Rev. A. W. Rees, of Brunswick, speaking on "Church Extension;" Walter A. Seaman, of Waycross, district lay leader, and Ralph Smith, of Brunswick, and S. M. Moore, of Douglas, associate district lay leaders, and Dr. George L. Morelock, of Nashville, general secretary of the layman's movement of the Southern Methodist church.

The speakers stressed that all the work of the church is to be considered as a unified program; that no activity is to be emphasized above others; that there is to be no competition between or jealousy among parts of the program and the agents in charge of these parts.

It was also pointed out that the work of the church will go forward and that kingdom extension will become a reality only to the degree that the members of the church give liberally of themselves and of their substances; that so long as a church is willing to be behind with its obligations no revival of spiritual value may be expected within the church; that payment of obligations and a just regard of obligations necessarily precedes spiritual revivals; that if the pastors really want revivals in their churches they must work first of all to the end that the churches pay all obligations in full, and promptly.

Resolution Passed.

A unanimous resolution was passed that all the churches in the district have half of all financial obligations in hand by the district conference in May.

It was agreed also that a young person from each of the four groups in the district—Brunswick, Douglas, Waycross and Jesup—speak at the district conference on "The Program of the Methodist Church," the winner to be awarded a trip to the Epworth League assembly in Macon.

The presiding elder announced that no quarterly conferences would be held during the time of the pastors' school in Macon so all pastors might attend the school.

It was decided to recommend to the bishop that an award of $25 be made to the church making the greatest advance in carrying out the full program, the award to be applied to the superannuate endowment of the winning church.

At 1 o'clock all of the delegates were guests at a luncheon served by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church.

JURY MAY PROBE FATAL GUN DUEL

Details of Cochran Bank Director's Death Still Unknown.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Bleckley county grand jury which assembles Monday probably will investigate a gun battle in the Bleckley cotton warehouse at Cochran last Wednesday in which a bank director was killed and a warehouseman wounded.

Funeral services for L. S. Phillips, who was shot dead in the battle, were held at Cochran Thursday. J. F. Abney, manager of the warehouse, is improving at the Macon hospital from wounds in the abdomen and the chest. Physicians said his recovery is assured.

Sheriff W. H. Jones, of Bleckley county, has not been able to ascertain who fired the first shot, he said. The shooting occurred as the climax to an argument about banks in general, and the Luther Williams Bank and Trust Company, in Macon, in particular, according to the sheriff.

Mr. Phillips was a director of the state bank, and his son, Leo Phillips, is assistant cashier. Mr. Abney is the father of G. G. Abney, who was assistant cashier of the Luther Williams Bank and Trust Company, and Marion Abney, who was an employe of the same institution.

INDICTMENTS DROPPED AGAINST FLOYD BOARD

ROME, Ga., Jan. 17.—All indictments against members of the Floyd county board of roads and revenue, growing out of a recent probe of the board's administration by a Floyd grand jury, were nolle prossed Friday by Judge James Maddox, of the superior court, following a recommendation made by Solicitor-General Neil Andrews, of the Floyd circuit.

In asking that all charges be dropped Mr. Andrews stated: "While I do not say that evidence in these cases is not enough for conviction by a jury, I do not think it worth while to use the time and expense necessary to push charges, in view of the result of other cases tried this week."

Two cases against O. N. Richardson, former chairman of the board, were tried during the week and he was acquitted, as was C. A. Todd Sr., present vice chairman of the board. Lon Hall, warden of the county chain gang camp, was also acquitted by a jury on a charge of embezzlement.

The following is the list of cases that were nolle prossed in court: O. N. Richardson, three cases of forgery, accepting a bribe, malpractice; James Morris, Homer Davis and John F. Sproull, malpractice; C. A. Todd Sr. and O. N. Richardson, conspiracy, and O. N. Richardson and E. E. Lindsey, conspiracy. All these men listed above are members of the county commissioners, with the exception of Mr. Richardson, who recently resigned as chairman, and E. E. Lindsey, local broker. Two cases against Lon Hall, county warden, for embezzlement, were also dropped.

The nolle prossing of the cases brings to a dramatic close a long fight carried on by Mr. Andrews, solicitor, and his assistant, Dean Owens, for the conviction of members of the county board. The cases were begun six months ago, but no acquittals could be obtained in the courts and the cases were dropped.

Public Works Burglar Sentenced in Macon

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Three times a burglar of public works, J. W. Waters, 23, Saturday afternoon stood before Judge H. A. Mathews, of Bibb superior court, and heard imposed upon him a penalty of 20 years in the penitentiary—the limit of the Georgia law. Waters was pleading guilty this time to the burglary last November 20 of the Fort Hawkins school. It was his third offense, records show.

Beginning in 1929, the young man has burglarized the Mulberry Street Methodist church, and the tool house of the Bibb county engineering force, it was said.

The law requires the maximum penalty in repeated cases.

Great-Grandfather of Confederate Veteran Lived To Be Almost 120 Years of Age.

BY MRS. HUGH J. TURNER.

McDONOUGH, Ga., Jan. 17.—A. G. Harris, himself an octogenarian, today mentions the fact that his great-grandfather, Samuel Harris, lived to be almost 120 years of age and died within a few hours of his wife after a wedded life of 87 years.

Judge Harris, the "first citizen" of Henry county, has been ordinary consecutively since 1908.

He was born in Meriwether county March 15, 1847. He received his early education in this and Monroe counties and lacked only one term of obtaining his medical degree from the old Atlanta Medical College, while Dr. Westmoreland and Dr. Willis were instructors at that institution.

Mr. Harris was instrumental in creating the Flippen militia district in this county and has been a successful farmer and merchant.

In reviewing his experiences as ordinary, Judge Harris compares the operation of county government now with the system which was used in 1909. At that time he had charge of all the finances, the chain gang, etc. In addition he, starting with no funds, completely equipped the chain gang. In 1913 the commissioners were elected.

Judge Harris has the rank of colonel, as assistant to the adjutant general, in the state organization of Confederate veterans. He is acting commander of the Henry county group. During the War Between the States he served in the Georgia Reserves and took part in the campaign around Chattanooga. He was with the troops that captured General Stoneman near Macon.

Among his distinguished ancestors are the eight sons of Samuel Harris who served in the American Revolution. One of these sons, Thomas Harris, was the first sheriff of Mecklenburg county, N. C., before the war. Robert and James, two other sons, were members of the Mecklenburg convention which defied Great Britain a year before the Declaration of Independence.

Judge Harris is looked upon now as one of the "boys" and whenever any of the officers at the courthouse have a trip to make or some enterprise of an exciting nature on foot, he is the first to be ready to go.

Judge Reprimands 12 Students After 'Graveyard' Party in Athens

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A "graveyard" party in which a group of freshmen were the center of attention, and their higher ranking classmen in the University of Georgia were hosts, brought 12 students to the police court on charges of disorderly conduct.

Judge Vincent Matthews reprimanded the students and on their pledge not to disturb property in the burial ground again, dismissed the cases.

The keeper of the cemetery said he heard a noise in the graveyard Monday night and blew a wistle. Some of the students fled and others were greeted by police a short time later. The keeper said a few monuments were knocked over and some lots damaged.

"Fun is all right," said the judge, "but you boys must realize that the cemetery is a sacred place. We do not have much trouble with you, so I wish to ask your co-operation in this matter. With your promise not to damage any more property, I am going to dismiss this case. You may take me to be soft-hearted. I can be hard boiled. Next case!"

Pair Convicted, Hanged Same Day In Hancock's First Capital Cases

BY G. B. MOORE.

SPARTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—According to the records of Hancock superior court the first two capital felony cases tried in this county after it was created from Washington and Greene counties in 1793 was one for horse stealing—a capital felony in Georgia at that time—and the other homicide. Convictions were returned without recommendations to mercy, and the prisoners were hanged on the same day they were convicted.

In the homicide case the trial jury returned a verdict into court that is probably without parallel, so far as verbiage goes. The verdict read: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty and recommend him to the mercy of God only." No mention was made of mercy in the case of the convicted horse thief. The prisoners were convicted on different days of the court term.

On the same days on which they were convicted and sentenced the sheriff, according to the court minutes, made his return. After stating the case the return in each instance was, "I have this day executed the sentence of the court," the return being officially signed by the sheriff of the county.

When Hancock county was created by the general assembly the town of Sparta, now the county seat, was the center from which future growth was to radiate. The courthouse and jail, crude affairs of logs, were located near the present Sparta and Sandersville road, four miles south of Sparta, in a neighborhood known as Jessamine Bower. That community has been wiped out by time and no signs of the old log courthouse and jail remain, though older residents of the county recall them distinctly.

At that time there was no court of final review in the state, the supreme court being established years later, the judgments and decisions of the superior courts being final.

Hard Times Talk Silenced By Revival in Nashville

U. S. Aid for Family Of Slain Negro Sought

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Harry E. Nottingham, Bibb county legislator, Saturday started his task of obtaining affidavits to submit to Washington authorities substantiating a claim for aid for the family of Sam Knight, negro, who was slain in a liquor raid on the Cochran road, the night of August 1, 1930.

Mr. Nottingham and W. T. Anderson several days ago requested Representative Sam Rutherford to present the matter to the claims committee in Washington, and late Friday were informed that the request had been tentatively submitted to the chairman of the committee.

In the raid in which Knight was killed a prohibition agent, Herman Warr, was also fatally shot.

South Georgians, Stirred by Nationally Known Evangelists, Travel Miles To Attend Services.

NASHVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—In this little town, where people go to bed early, get up early and refuse ordinarily to be hurried or worried by passing events, something has happened that has set the community on edge. It is nothing more or less than a religious revival, but it has produced an upheaval, the like of which both church-goers and unprofessed Christians have not seen before since houses of worship were built here, to quote leading churchmen.

The spectacle is presented not only of an entire community, of several thousand souls, men, women and children, going to church daily for a period of three weeks, but a whole county and section, many miles distant, thrusting aside the routine duties of everyday life and facing churchward.

From Enigma, Alapaha and Willacoochie, southward to the Lowndes county line, and over into neighboring counties, people have flocked here, crowding the highways with their family flivvers and other means of conveyance. Nashville is a tobacco mart when the bright leaf is swapped for the golden sheckles of the $16,000,000 south Georgia tobacco crop—crowds then are not an unusual sight—but this is a different scene—an army of church-goers, earnest, devout, God-fearing, with an objective other than money making.

Nationally-Known Evangelists.

The revival, conducted by two nationally known evangelists, the Rev. George Bell and Fred Clark, one a Scotchman and the other a Welshman, with many successful religious campaigns to their credit both in America and Europe, is being held in the Baptist church. It is not, however, a denominational affair. On the contrary it is conspicuously interdenominational with people of every creed and race participating, except of course, the negroes, a respected element of the population, who worship in their own churches.

The big religious event, now drawing to a close, will go down in the religious and church history of the town and section, according to Joe Lawrence, editor of the Nashville Herald, who Saturday described the scenes and results on the religious awakening of his section of state.

"Nothing like it has ever been seen here before," said Editor Lawrence. "It has swept the community like a cyclone. Understand it is not religious frenzy. There is a fervor and sincerity about it all that cannot fail to impress even the most hardened skeptic. Talk of hard times—and it has been heard here, as elsewhere, has given way to a brighter and better outlook on life. After all, those of us who believe in the Bible and its teachings, may point to it as a torch that will lead us out of the wilderness, speaking both spiritually and in a material way. Why shouldn't it be a cure for business ills?

"People who have flocked to the church for three weeks, night and morning, have listened with abated breath, sparkling eyes and craned necks. Frankly, they have been astounded. At times, during the services, the silence, beyond the voice of the speakers, is so intense that one is reminded of hearing the proverbial pin drop.

"There is nothing stale or stereotyped about the preaching of the two evangelists, who are men of unusual magnetism and power. It is in a word, full of virtue, gripping the intellect and pricking the heart. They have left and are leaving, after they are gone, a lasting impression of 'men who walked with God.' People here and throughout the section are lifted to a higher plane by reason of their visit."

UNIVERSITY OPERA PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Series of Presentations To Be Offered During Summer School in July.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Operas which will be presented at the 1931 session of the University of Georgia summer school have been announced by Director Joseph S. Stewart. They are: "Romeo and Juliet," Gounod's immortal opera based on Shakespeare's greatest of all love dramas, July 22; "The Bohemian Girl," Balfe's "ballad operetta," perhaps the most beloved light opera ever composed, July 23; "Phoebus and Pan," Bach's classic presentation of a fabled singing contest, and "Don Pasquale," Donizetti's most brilliant and tuneful comedy, July 24.

All the operas will be sung in English. No charge will be made to regular registered summer school students. The casts will be announced soon.

"The plans for the opera season for 1931 assure a most brilliant program of grand opera, and the first light opera, ever undertaken by the University of Georgia summer school," Dr. Stewart said.

During the past five years the following operas in full have been given: "Carmen," "Madame Butterfly," "Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," "Martha," "Cavalleria Rusticana" (twice), "Hansel and Gretel," "La Serva Padrona," "Il Trovatore," Sampson and Delilah," "Rigoletto," "Traviata," "Orpheus" (Gluck), "Secret of Suzanne," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Mignon," "Bianca" (Hardley), "The Barber of Seville," and parts of Werther," "The Tales of Hoffman," and "Madame Pompadour" have been performed.

AGED NEGRO COUPLE SAVED FROM FLAMES

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—While flames were about to engulf them early Saturday morning as they remained helplessly frantic in their little home just off the Jeffersonville road, Tilman and Jessie Malcolm, aged negro couple, near invalids, were rescued by Will Patterson, their son-in-law, just a minute before the roof fell in, sheriff's deputies reported.

Patterson left his own home in flames in order to rescue his parents-in-law, while Charlie Patterson, his 25-year-old nephew, charged with having set fire to the buildings, is alleged by officers to have stood guard with a gun in his hand daring any one to escape the burning flames, the officers said.

The younger Patterson was arrested at noon charged with arson. He is in the Bibb county jail. The Malcolm home was totally destroyed, while only the front porch was burned from the Patterson residence.

Patterson denied the charge placed against him, but witnesses said he had remarked earlier in the night that he would "burn you all up," and later ignited the two kerosene soaked shanties, standing side by side, the officers charge.

They said Patterson made no effort to use the gun after he had dared occupants of the house to flee. Officers said the offense is punishable by death.

Lanier County Farms Produce Big Turnips

LAKELAND, Ga., Jan. 17—With two turnips of unusual size produced on Lanier farms this season, the county is challenging others to produce bigger and better turnips.

During the past week James Gaskins, a Lanier county farmer, placed on exhibition in Lakeland the two turnips, one measuring 16 1-4 inches around, and then fearing that this might not hold the state championship, the other was put up, measuring 17 3-4 inches around its girth.

Lanier county enthusiasts declare that all other products of the county are in the same proportion.

State Civic Clubs Plan Contest In Use of Georgia-Grown Products

MACON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A state-wide contest among the civic clubs of Georgia in the use of Georgia products in their meals during 1931 was announced Saturday in a letter from the district goverors of Rotary, Civitans, Lions, Exchange and Kiwanis to the presidents of the local clubs.

The contest will begin the first meeting in February and will end with the last meeting in November. Between the present and the first of February each district governor will acquaint his clubs with the rules of the contest and the individual clubs will be entered. Each club will have a Georgia products committee whose duty shall be to confer with the person in charge of purchasing supplies for luncheons and to see that as many items as possible are Georgia-raised. The committee shall also make an oral report at each meeting, counting every item, even salt and pepper, on the percentage of Georgia products. Monthly reports sent to the district governor will determine the winner.

In selecting the winner, the percentage of Georgia products used will be the chief factor, but in case of a tie that club which had the greater number of meals will be winner.

The contest was suggested by W. T

GOVERNMENT COST UP 59 MILLIONS

Expenditures Drop Sharply But Operating Costs Shoot Skyward.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Expenditures of the government for the first six months of the current or 1931 fiscal year dropped below those for the similar period of the previous fiscal year by $184,811,945 but the cost of operating the government exceeded that of a year ago by $59,078,144.

The treasury's statement of financial operations for the first six months of the current fiscal year as compared with the 1930 fiscal year today showed that total expenditures, including public debt retirements amounted to $1,801,082,916 as compared with $1,601,089,458 in the previous year. The public debt retirements for the current year totaled $94,294,000 in the six months as compared with $384,805,403 in the first half of the previous year.

Expenditures by departments showed that those of the legislative branch had increased approximately $2,090,000, while those of the executive branch increased $9,000; the treasury $45,000; war department $7,000,000; justice $6,000,000; postoffice $22,000; agriculture $28,000,000; commerce $11,000,000; labor $850,000; veterans' administration $116,000,000, and of the District of Columbia $300,000.

The state department expenditures decreased, as compared with the same period of the previous year, $250,000; navy $5,000,000; interior $91,000,000, and independent establishments and commissions $16,000,000.

The federal farm board was credited with expenditures of $80,556,770 in the six months, $31,468,153 of which was spent in December.

The statement showed that on January 15 there was a deficit of $194,964,902 in the treasury. Expenditures since last July 1 had amounted to $2,106,211,790, while receipts totaled $1,911,246,888.

Lea Asks $1,000,000 Damages in Libel Suit

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(UP)—Suits aggregating $1,000,000 and charging malicious libel of character, were filed in Franklin county circuit court today against the Times Publishing Company, of Chattanooga, by Luke Lea, Sr.

The defendant company publishes the Chattanooga Times. Lea is publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, and held large interest in the Knoxville Journal and Memphis Commercial Appeal, both of which are in hands of receivers.

Ten suits, each for $100,000, were brought against the Chattanooga publishers through their agent at Winchester, where the actions were filed.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Natural gas will be available to Columbus consumers within about three months, says an announcement from R. M. Harding, manager of the Columbus division of the Georgia Power Company.

Atlanta Dictaphone Branch Office Wins Company's Trophy for Sales

Merrill B. Sands (left), vice president of the Dictaphone Sales Corporation, presents the national branch trophy to Everett N. Brown, manager for the company in this territory. Directly behind the trophy is C. J. Smith and on the extreme right is F. O. Norwood, both connected with the Atlanta branch.

Achieving the highest percentage of monthly sales quotas, the Atlanta branch of the Dictaphone Sales Corporation won for 1930 the national branch trophy offered by the company in competition with the other branches throughout the United States and Canada.

Merrill B. Sands, vice president of the company, came to Atlanta to present the trophy to Everett N. Brown, manager of the Atlanta branch, which shows the highest percentage of monthly sales quotas achieved during the past year.

Mr. Sands says that the race for the trophy was very close, two branches having tied for second place, close on the heels of Atlanta. Los Angeles and Philadelphia came second in the race. Mr. Sands points out that the geographical distribution of the three leading contestants makes the winning of the trophy by Atlanta all the more significant.

The trophy will remain in Atlanta in the custody of Mr. Brown during the year 1931. It becomes the permanent property of the dictaphone branch that first wins it three times, and Mr. Brown has adopted as the motto for his southern division this year, "Come and Get It."

The Dictaphone Sales Corporation maintains offices in all parts of the United States and Canada. Atlanta being the headquarters for the southeast. The Atlanta branch territory includes Tampa, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Miami, Jackson, Miss.; Birmingham, Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga, Charlotte, Greensboro, Knoxville, Savannah and Macon.

In reference to the presentation of the trophy to Mr. Brown, Mr. Sands said that it should be a source of great interest to everybody in the southeastern United States that in the year 1930 this trophy was won by the Atlanta branch, as it is an indication of prosperity here in comparison with the other sections of the country.

Hollywood Residents Make Choicest Haul

HOLLYWOOD, Fla., Jan. 17.—(UP)—The five thousand residents of Hollywood were still having a glorious week-end today, at the conclusion of a glorious week of "fishing."

At Golden Beach, four miles south of here, residents of the community were still frantically fishing with surf tackle, hoping to pull in another sack or two of a rum cargo which lay seven feet under the waters. When a liquor boat laden with 500 sacks of fine Scotch whisky went aground Monday it did not take long for word to spread.

One winter resident put a bathing suit on his Scotch gardener, it was said, sent the hired man into the ocean waters, and told him to spend the day hunting. He was said to have been rewarded to the extent of 125 sacks. About 350 of the vessel's load of 500 sacks have already been recovered by the water and shore searchers, and throughout the week neighbors have been dropping by to see each other, sampling the contents of the various sacks, and giving thanks to Father Neptune.

W. S. Richardson, Fulton county tax collector, Saturday warned the public that a 50 per cent penalty attaches to the special state occupation tax after January 31. Payments on this tax and also on ad valorem taxes are very slow, he said. The extension of time for payment of ad valorem taxes without fi. fa. costs expired Saturday.

N. M. Ivins, filling station operator, will be called for trial Thursday in Judge E. D. Thomas' division of superior court on a charge of slaying Ton. Denaris, cafe proprietor. Ivins was convicted and given 9 to 10 years for voluntary manslaughter, but was granted a new trial by Judge Virlyn B. Moore.

Alfred Acee, 819 Juniper street, was charged with drunkenness and reckless driving Saturday following a crash of his machine into a safety zone platform at Peachtree and Cain streets. Acee was injured severely about the face and head and was taken to Grady hospital for treatment.

Five automobiles were damaged early Saturday morning when fire broke out in a garage on Foster street owned by the Murray Company. Three trucks and two passenger cars were in the structure at the time. Origin of the fire has not been determined.

The Model Laundry, at Jackson and Houston streets, was entered early Saturday morning by safe blowers, who were frightened away when an automatic burglar alarm was set off. Nothing of value was taken, police reported.

The Rev. Horace S. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist church, of Decatur, will begin a series of seven Sunday night sermons tonight. The series is to be known as "Seven of Life's Doors" and the first subject will be "The Door of Opportunity."

Dr. S. P. Wiggins, presiding elder of the North Atlanta district, will fill the pulpit at the Epworth Methodist church at 10:50 o'clock this morning. Dr. William E. Craig, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Methodist church, will preach at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

The East End Woman's Missionary Society will meet at the following places during the week: No. 1, with Mrs. J. H. Keen, 2357 Boulevard drive, S. E., at 2:30 o'clock Thursday; No. 2, with Mrs. Phil Haushalter, 1016 Oakview road, at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday; No. 3, with Mrs. B. S. Powell, at the home of Mrs. L. Franklin, 710 Third avenue, Wednesday at 2:30.

Five-year-old Hubert Lewis, 330 Brooks avenue, lay on his cot at Grady hospital Saturday night and tried in vain to tell newspaper reporters how his jaw happened to be broken. Attaches said the persons who brought him in Saturday morning stated that a mule had kicked the child.

Aaron Hargett, 2, 625 Oliver street, was taken to Grady hospital Saturday afternoon by his parents, who stated that he had swallowed two brass tacks. Physicians could find no evidence of the tacks and after giving advice concerning his diet, allowed the child to be taken home.

Applicants for commissions in the foreign service of the United States will be given written examinations in Atlanta on July 27, the department of state announced in Washington Saturday. Oral examinations, completing the tests, will be given in Washington October 26, 1931.

Dealers in electrical refrigerators in Georiga are subject to the state occupational tax on ice machines, the supreme court ruled in sustaining the decision of Fulton superior denying an injunction against collecting the tax sought by Hoffman & Crowell, Inc., Atlanta dealers.

Warehouse receipts given by Crisp county and New York cotton concerns to the Cordele Exchange bank for cotton the concerns wanted to ship when the bank was placed in the hands of the state banking department are assets of the closed institution and the cotton in its control, the supreme court decided Saturday in upholding the Crisp county superior court.

Atlanta's population, as listed by the census bureau in its official list Saturday of cities with more than 100,000, is placed at 270,366. A footnote explains that by act of the Georgia legislature creating the "municipality of Atlanta" the population is 360,691.

Mrs. C. B. Barnett, of Macon, soprano, will appear as the guest soloist of the B. Y. P. U. of the Central Baptist church at 6:30 o'clock tonight. She also will sing at the evening service at 8 o'clock.

The Atlanta Writers' Club has passed resolutions extending congratulations to Oglethorpe University on the anthology recently published by the university press and entitled "The Oglethorpe Book of Georgia Verse."

J. Ira Harrelson, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the Atlanta board of education, will await action of council Monday on the January finance sheet before calling a meeting of his committee to begin work of revising the school budget. Administration officials already have requested a total of $3,722,314 net while the department will receive gross revenue estimated at $3,413,692.

Council for the first time in many years Monday will be under the direction of a left-handed administrator. Mayor Pro Tem. G. Everett Millican is left-handed and will wield the gavel formally for the first time when council convenes at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Grady hospital, under direction of the new board of trustees, was the only division of the borough government which escaped a slash in the budgetary request filed with the 1931 finance committee of council.

Half a score of candidates for purchasing agent to succeed William P. Price, will enter a battle royal Monday in the election, which will be presided over by Mayor James L. Key.

Many routine matters will face council at its session Monday, but the most important measure, and the one which it is expected will command the center of attention, is adoption of the January finance sheet calling for $15,777,000.

Bishop H. J. Mikell will confirm a class and preach the morning sermon at the Church of the Epiphany at 11 o'clock this morning. There will be no evening service at the church.

Those who assumed duties of office were: Turner Collins, president; Ralph Turner, first vice president; W. R. Jordan, second vice president; E. R. Steinhauer, secretary and treasurer, and Jason A. Tuggle, chairman of the board of directors.

A tentative program for the entertainment of General and Mrs. Edward J. Higgins, of London, international leaders of the Salvation Army, who will conduct special councils in Atlanta May 9, 10 and 11, was arranged last week. The councils here will be attended by 1,000 Salvationists from 15 southern states.

The Atlanta recruiting district led all others in the nation during 1930 when it comes to enlisting marines, according to Captain F. S. Kieren, in charge of the local office at 79 1-2 Forsyth street. More than 300 men enlisted.

SOLONS SEEK LAW CURBING 'REDS'

Fish Committee Reports on Investigation of Communists' Activities.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Fish committee today termed communism a grave threat to democratic government, reported the communist party extremely active in America, and outlined legislative means of combating the radical cause.

After eight months of study, the committee submitted a voluminous report, recommending that aliens who advocate overthrowing the government by force be refused admission to the United States, and more stringent deportation laws.

It was signed by Chairman Fish, Representative Bachmann, republican, West Virginia, and Representatives Eslick, Tennessee, and Hall, Mississippi, democrats.

The fifth member of the committee, Representative Nelson, republican, Maine, filed an individual report.

Bachmann immediately introduced a bill to prohibit the entry of avowed communists into the United States. Fish said he and other committee members would place in legislative form other recommendations for which law is required. They include:

Deportation of alien communists; denial of naturalization and the cancellation of citizenship of communists; empowering the justice department to investigate communist activities; a prohibition against sending propaganda for revolutionary communism in the mails or in interstate commerce; a law to prosecute communists or others spreading false rumors to cause runs on banks; immediate consideration of an embargo on Russian manganese.

In addition, the committee recommended that the treasury seek permission to investigate through agents the alleged production of lumber and pulpwood by convict labor and the use of forced labor in soviet Russia.

The Fish report also recommended that the communist party of the United States be declared illegal and that states be requested to take appropriate action to have the party excluded from recognition.

Nelson's recommendations included more stringest administration of the visa laws, the deporation of undesirable and criminal aliens, the encouragement of organized labor and more careful postal supervision of radical publications. He also indorsed giving the justice department power to follow up radical activities.

New economic and social conditions, Nelson said in his report, require "a new attitude of thought and a more liberal approach to some of our problems.

"The crisis that American industry and American labor is facing today, speaks, in no uncertain terms of something wrong in our social and industrial system, which calls for further and deeper study of causes, effects and cures." He added.

Bolshevism, he said, "was born out of a social and political chaos that can never obtain here in America."

There will be no weakening in our ideals of democracy—simply an extension of those ideals into other fields."

"In proportion as we work out economic justice here in America and so order our social system that labor shall share in the economic life of the nation as fully and fairly as it now shares in its social and political life, in just that proportion will radicalism fall of its own inanition and the threat of communism cease to disturb us."

"The United States has more to lose from the economic system in Russia if the five-year plan succeeds than any other nation," the Fish report said. "We find there is not sufficient competent legal evidence in the record to prove the connection of the Amtorg Trading Corporation with subversive activities."

The committee outlined the communist youth movement here and said publicity and support of organized labor is the "best means of combatting communism."

Atlantan Badly Hurt In Plunge From Tree

H. W. Donegan, chief clerk for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company here, sustained a fractured skull, a compound fracture of both wrists, a broken jaw and a fractured right knee late Saturday afternoon when he fell from a tree to the front lawn of his home at 15 Glenwood drive.

Mr. Donegan was pruning the tree, when in some manner he lost his footing and fell 30 feet to the ground. His two small children, Robert, 7, and Stanford, 4, witnessed the accident and summoned aid. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, where it was stated that though his condition was serious, he probably will recover.

THERE'S been a lot of sound progress made in the treatment of colds during the past few years. And the "Pineoleum" oil spray method, recommended by thousands of doctors, has radically changed the public's ideas about the treatment of colds.

"Pineoleum" is modern . . . speedy . . . effective. It does three things, and does them well: (1) It bathes the inflamed membranes in a spreading, penetrating film of oil that protects the tissues and inhibits the growth of germs. (2) It acts at the seat of the trouble—the passages of nose and throat. (3) Its bland and healing oils clear the air passages, soothe the angry membranes and rid you instantly of that stuffed-up feeling.

Use it for the children before they start for school. They like it . . . it's not like "taking medicine" . . . and there's nothing to upset the stomach! At your drug store.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—There was an improvement in the volume of steel mill output during the week, following replacements made necessary by inventory-takings, but no general buying movement has taken place. Railroad buying and contracting for public works probably stood out as the principal activity. Prices were steady throughout the greater part of the list. Pig iron was without change as regards prices, but there was a better trade noted with sales made mainly for February-March shipments.

Demand for copper was confined almost entirely to foreign consumers, with domestic fabricators practically out of the market. Late in the week Copper Exporters, Inc., announced a 5 and 10-point premium, respectively, on March and April shipment copper over the 10.30 c. i. f. quotation for January-February positions. Foreign buying has been moderate and it was said that the premium on future deliveries was largely to stimulate demand to enable custom smelters to dispose of their output. Producers are not offering metal and the undertone is steady at 10 cents for electrolytic in the Connecticut valley.

No further price changes occurred in lead. The market was quiet. Recent buying was said to have fairly well covered current requirements.

The market for zinc was steady at the end of the week, following a little depression early in the period. The demand for January shipment has been disappointing.

Antimony was in smaller demand here, with the market quoted irregularly owing to considerable uncertainty as regards the Far East selling basis.

BY DONALD C. BOLLES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Pronounced strength in investment obligations was the feature of the short session of the bond market today. Prices were generally higher with the single exception of the United States government group.

Treasury 3 3-4s reached a new high price for the past two years at 107 but other issues in the group reacted.

Trading was fairly active for a week-end session. Railroad bonds, both prime and second-grade, moved forward at a good pace and some high-grade utility and industrial bonds were under accumulation.

Stock privilege issues gave a good account of themselves. Richfield Oil 6s advanced 3 3-4 points, closing at 55, against a low earlier in the week of 41. General Theatres 6s continued their recovery, advancing 1 3-4. International Telephone 4 1-2s gained a point.

The demand for German bonds of all descriptions was the best of the week. German 5 1-2s were the most active, and advanced 1 1-2. The 7s were firm. Bank issues were 1 to 2 points higher and several municipal and industrial issues were strong. Latin Americans were dull.

HERALD-POST VALUE PLACED AT $1,300,000

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A board of appraisers has fixed the approximate value of the Herald-Post Company at $1,300,000 Nat C. Cureton, referee in bankruptcy, informed a meeting of creditors today.

Cureton said the report makes the following itemized valuations: Real estate, $350,000; Associated Press membership, $250,000; circulation lists $300,000; mechanical assets, $300,000, and rotogravure plant $50,000.

In its schedule of assets and liabilities the Herald-Post Company listed total assets of $1,833,807.

BONDS LEAD WAY IN WEEK'S TRADING

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A somewhat belated January return flow of funds to the banks found security underwriters well primed with new bond offerings this week.

New bonds were rushed upon the market to take advantage of the abundance of funds, and trading in listed securities was all but forgotten. The stock market eased in the dullest trading since the first week of December, and the listed bond market was cast into the shadow.

Bond emissions totaling $253,000,000 were the largest since the like week a year ago, when the $150,000,000 telephone issue swelled the week's offerings to $505,000,000. The flotation of these issues was aided by extreme easiness of the money market, in which six-month time loans were quoted at the lowest in half a century.

Investment bankers found a huge pent-up demand for investments, particularly from institutions, with the passing of the year-end settlement period, and returned stability after the unsettling developments of December. While it was felt that the pace of new emissions must be moderated, the reception accorded the new securities was regarded as highly encouraging.

Wall Street was keenly interested in the annual reports of the heads of three leading Wall Street banking institutions, all appearing within a few days of each other, and was encouraged by the fact that each, in a guarded way, had a good word for the securities markets. They agreed that the bottom of the business depression seemed to have been about reached. One felt that the securities markets would improve somewhat in advance of general business; another said some securities were selling at levels that would seem ridiculously low a few years hence, and another said many securities, both stocks and bonds, were selling at less than their true worth. None, however, ventured to say whether the bottom of the security market decline had been touched, and none looked for rapid business recovery.

The stock market was once more completely becalmed. Only about two dozen earnings statements for 1930 have appeared, and they will continue to appear until well into the spring. The few already at hand, however, have clearly indicated that there will be many surprises both ways, and that many important dividend revisions are still to be made. Stock traders, therefore, found the near-term outlook altogether uncertain.

The price index of 90 shares showed a net loss for the week of nearly five points, but the market was highly professional. Urgent liquidation was nowhere evident, but short selling was obviously in fair volume.

U. S.-FRENCH TRADE LOWEST IN YEARS

PARIS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The world economic depression has forced the American woman to forego diamonds, furs and silks, Consul General Leo J. Keena told the American Chamber of Commerce in France tonight in a speech in which he described 1930 as the worst trade year between France and the United States since 1924.

The export of French luxury articles to the United States fell off by millions of dollars during the year, he said, and the total decline in all exports to America amounted to $54,288,000.

American exports to France decreased $35,000,000 during the first 11 months of 1930, Keena said.

COTTON CONSUMPTION DROPS 700,000 BALES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(UP)—Domestic consumption of cotton for the first five months of the season fell about 700,000 bales below that for the same period a year ago, according to a report issued today by the department of agriculture.

The cotton market during the period from January 10 to 16 was described as steady with price fluctuations narrow. Demand for spot cotton appeared to have improved, it was said.

Exports for the week ended January 16 totaled 95,868 bales compared with 170,921 for the corresponding week last season.

New January future contracts for the week at New York advanced 4 points to 10.07 cents. At New Orleans there was a decline of 4 points to 10 cents, and at Chicago a decline of 7 points to 10.05 cents.

Von Elm and Golden Tie for First Place in $25,000 Tourney

MORAN STARS AS GEORGIA BEATS TECH, 39-30

VON ELM TIES JOHN GOLDEN IN RICH MEET

Two Leaders Will Play Today for Caliente Title.

By Brian Bell.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 17.—(AP)—George Von Elm, former amateur golf champion of the United States, and John Golden, professional, tied today for the $10,000 first prize in the $25,000 Agua Caliente open, with 72 holes of 293.

Von Elm finished with a brilliant 71, a stroke under par, while Golden wound up the tournament proper with an 18-hole score of 74

The two leaders will play 18 holes tomorrow to decide who shall be the Agua Caliente champion for a year and wear a dazzling diamond studded medal if occasion offers. It also was announced the play-off tomorrow would decide the division of the money, $10,000 to the winner and $5,500 to the runner-up. The two players will divide 50 per cent of the "gate" tomorrow. Under ordinary circumstances when a money tournament results in a tie, the leaders divide first and second money.

Despite the announced plan Golden and Von Elm, if they choose, may make a gentleman's agreement to divide $13,500 into $6,750, and as Dashing George is a self-styled businessman golfer, and Golden has been playing for pay a long time, something of the kind may be worked out.

A BUSINESS.

George today proved golf is a business by finishing with three pars to tie the bulky John.

Win, lose or draw, in the play-off tomorrow the competition has resulted in the richest monetary reward either player has realized. Von Elm has been paid approximately $1,200 for his golf play since he made it a business and the biggest single check Golden has received at a golf pay-off window was at the southern open in Atlanta in 1927 when he tied with Johnny Farrell for second place and first money.

Horton Smith, the tall New York pro, who tied for second place last year, finished third today and drew $2,000. Smith's 72-hole count was 295.

DUDLEY CARDS 296.

Tied at 296 were the Dutra brothers, Olin and Mortie, Ed Dudley, winner of the Los Angeles open, and Clarence Clark, of Tulsa, Okla. Each received $1,012.50.

The Dutra brothers, California pros, tied last year for fourth place with scores of 298 and cashed checks for the same amounts they received today. The Espinosa brothers, Al and Abe, also tied at 304. Al last year was in a deadlock for second.

Von Elm was the low amateur in 1930 with a score of 298 which tied for fourth, but Golden last year was well down the list, in a tie for 21st place with a score of 307. He received a scant $100.

COX SLOWS DOWN.

Wiffy Cox who had a great 69 yesterday, was 10 strokes slower today, and his full count of 297 placed him in a tie with Leo Diegel, who turned in a par 72.

Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen and Craig Wood were paid $500 each for finishing in a tie for tenth with scores of 298 and MacDonald Smith, veteran Scot, and Ralph Guldahl, Dallas, Texas, youngster who turned pro recently, with scores of 299, tied for the 13th place.

Old Man Opportunity knocked at the door for both Golden and Von Elm today. Golden led the Los Angeles player by three strokes at the start of the last round but with a brilliant out-going journey in 33 strokes while the Connecticut pro was taking 37 for the same distance, George forged into the lead.

Golden lost two strokes to Senor Par at the fourth, where he was down in six and he had taken four at the par three third. Two birdies in a row, made possible by great approaches, recovered two of the strokes for him, but Von Elm never was over par over the same distance, getting three birdies, including a smashing birdie three at the ninth.

Golden got the stroke back on the second nine, coming home in 37 against 38 for Von Elm. The former amateur king took three putts from 18 feet at the 13th where he took five on the par four hole and sheer tragedy stalked him at the 14th. Here he had a magnificent drive and a par four seemed in the bag when suddenly a misdirected spade mashie shot changed the complexion of things in a jiffy.

SUAREZ MEETS LOAYZA.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 17.—(UP) Estanislau Loayza and Justo Suarez, lightweights, will meet in a boxing bout at Buenos Aires in February, Louis Bouey, the Chilean's manager, announced today. Suarez is an Argentinean.

Ty Cobb To Play 'Aeroplane Golf'

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Ty Cobb plans to make his first airplane flight here next week in an aerial golf game with Carl Percy, president of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Men of New York, that meets in twenty-sixth annual session here.

Cobb will play from a plane piloted by a local aviator, as will Percy. Dave Ogilvie, Jr., will be one of the putters to play the ball when it is dropped from the air to the green.

MAWNIN'

By Ed Danforth

Gene Sarazen looked at Ed Dudley's golf ball and decided it was smaller than the new standard ball he (Gene) was using, one reads in the papers. The boys were playing for important money—$25,000—in the Agua Caliente open and you can lay to it that little Gene was overlooking nothing.

If Ed was using a bootleg ball of the smaller vintage of 1930, Gene wanted to file a firm objection, as he was having a wee bit of trouble steering his own larger, lighter ball.

Calipers were obtained at length and the balls found to be the same size. The other pros submitted balls to the test and none was found that did not comply with the 1.68 minimum decreed by the U. S. G. A.

YOURS LOOKS SMALLER.

This episode bares a quaint turn in psychology. To the average duffer the ball he is playing looks much smaller than that of his opponent. I have seen the time when the ball below me on the tee looked about the size of one of these pins sales agents use to stick in maps.

In fact, on more than one occasion while gazing at the tiny object and screwing up courage to the hitting point, the thing has absolutely disappeared from view. I know that because I have missed it entirely many times.

Again—in years so far back as to be almost forgotten—I have distinctly seen TWO very small balls on the tee fading in and out of each other and—but that is beyond the argument.

Yet here is a professional who fancied his opponent's ball smaller than his own. It shows that one's optical illusions change with one's skill at golf.

THE MAJOR DIFFERENCE.

Perhaps Gene was influenced by the superior behavior of Ed's ball in play and decided something must be wrong.

But, after all, it is not how much the manufacturers put into the ball, but how much the player puts into it that really counts.

BOXING BREAKS.

Jack Dempsey, the referee, today must be recalling an experience of his similar to the mishap of poor old Tom Heeney that resulted handsomely in Jack's favor many years ago at Polo Grounds, New York.

Heeney was pushed from the ring and fell into the press seats in the third round of his fight with Max Baer, the hope of California. Willing hands were applied to the seat of Tom's trunks and he was boosted unhurt back into the ring. He then dropped to one knee to take a count and regain his mental balance.

But one timekeeper actually counted the two seconds he had been out of the ring while Referee Dempsey and another official started the count when Heeney regained his position on the canvas. The two seconds' discrepancy misled Tommy and he was technically counted out at "eight" in full possession of his strength and faculties. He might have gone on to win but for the mistake.

Dempsey must recall his own experience in being knocked out of the ring by Luis Angel Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas. After a great delay Dempsey was boosted back into the ring and returned to the fight without ever having a count tolled over him.

Some experts contend that Dempsey should have been disqualified for receiving so much assistance. The two incidents seem to show that some, like Jack, are boy friends of fate and others, like Tom, are strangers to Lady Luck.

CRAZY LIKE A FOX.

Pa Stribling told Atlanta reporters Friday he would offer Jack Sharkey a job as sparring partner for W. L. in preparing for the Schmeling fight.

"What would you do if he accepted it?" someone asked.

"Say, I would take him on right away. Sharkey could do no damage at all with those big practice gloves and think what an attraction it would be in the training camp. Why, I could afford to pay him $100 a day."

Pa was supposed to be having a little joke with the Sharkey faction but there is more sense in his proposal than appears on the surface.

BABY JACKETS BOW TO AGGIES

A looping basketball, sent on its trip by the accurate fingers of a flashing forward named Owens, spelled a 34-32 victory for the Monroe Aggies, a last-five-seconds defeat for Georgia Tech's freshman court squad making its first start of the season.

That 34-32 count might easily have been more. The Aggies, led by George Stanton, piled up what seemed an insurmountable lead early in the game and held a 19-12 advantage at the half.

The Baby Jackets spurted strongly in the second half, however, and pulled even with Red Barron's club. The balance of the game was a ding-dong affair with the Aggies riding through to victory on that one shot by Owens.

Stanton, Mock, Henderson and Farmer shared the spotlight with Owens for Monroe, while Van Houten, Paris and Slocum led the Baby Jackets in their great fight.

CUE TOURNEY SET.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(UP)—The Federation of Billiard Players will hold a world's title 18.2 balk line tournament in New York next month. It will be separate from the National Billiard Association tournament.

MRS. ANDREWS BEST IN DOUBLES

VANDALIA, Ohio, Jan. 17.—(AP)—E. F. Woodward, of Houston, Texas, heads the list of the nation's trapshooters, with an average of .9905 for the year 1930, and the longest run of targets on record, 606, without a miss.

He stepped to the front in official averages released by the Amateur Trapshooting Association, the governing body of target shooting in the United States, Canada and the Canal Zone.

The A. T. A. awards high averages in five divisions in order to arrive at some basis for handicapping the shooters.

Woodward's mark was attained in the 1,000 to 2,000-target division. He broke 1,783 out of 1,800.

Marie Kautsky, Fort Dodge, Iowa, led the women with a mark of 9,286 on 1,150 targets.

Averages in the women's doubles included:

Mrs. W. P. Andrews, Atlanta, .7720 on 250 targets; Miss Leonie Boutall, Houston, .7150 on 500 targets.

ZACHARY MARRIES.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Jan. 17.—(AP) Tom Zachary, pitcher for the Boston Braves, and Miss Etta McVane, of Saxapahaw, N. C., were married here last night at All Soul's Episcopal church. The couple left immediately for St. Petersburg, Fla., where Zachary will join the early arrivals in the Braves' training camp.

ABELSON SEEKS STRIB AND MAX FOR EXHIBITIONS

Card Planned for Auditorium Ring on February 17.

Plans to stage two exhibition boxing matches featuring Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, and Young Stribling, who will fight the German for the title in June, were announced Saturday by Max Abelson, Atlanta's leading fight promoter.

Abelson was unable to announce anything definite late Saturday night, but stated that he expected to arrange for the exhibitions. He talked with Billy McCarney, Joe Jacob's assistant, who is in charge of the champion's southern tour, and said he believes he can bring the champion here for an exhibition.

The Schmeling party will be in Atlanta on Monday, February 16, but there is no auditorium date open that night. McCarney stated that he will try and arrange to stay over until the next night. Abelson has applied for the February 17 date.

The champion will put on exhibitions in principal cities on his way from New York to Miami. If the Atlanta match is arranged he will come here from Greenville.

NO STRIB REPLY.

Abelson talked with Pa Stribling Friday night in an effort to put Young Stribling on the same card with the champion, but the elder Stribling would give no definite answer until he talked with the Georgia heavyweight challenger.

"If I can't arrange for Young Stribling to box an exhibition with one of his sparring partners on the same card I will try and get him to agree to act as referee for the Schmeling bout," Abelson said last night.

"Although I have arranged nothing definite either way, I feel confident I can bring the two big boys here. Schmeling will be on his way to Florida and W. L. is down at the farm. It will be easy for Stribling to come up for an exhibition. I am going to work hard to stage this show here. I know the Atlanta fans want to see them both."

NOT MUCH TALK.

Abelson has heard nothing from Pa Stribling since the latter left here Friday night by auto for the Stribling farm, where W. L., in fine shape, is taking things easy. Pa has had a hard time in New York arranging for the championship fight next June and is not ready to talk much business now.

After a little rest Pa and W. L. will go into a huddle and map plans for the big battle in June.

Meanwhile, Abelson is going ahead with arrangements to bring Schmeling and Stribling here. He expects to have something definite to announce before the middle of the week.

Max Must Post Bond, N. B. A. Says.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(UP)—Max Schmeling must post a $2,500 forfeit with the National Boxing Association to bind his championship match with Young Stribling if he desires to avoid having his title vacated, President John V. Clinnin, of the N. B. A., said today.

Twelve of the 30 states affiliated with the N. B. A. already have voted to vacate the title, although Colorado, Michigan, Mississippi and Oklahoma recommended an extension of up to 90 days. Members who favor immediate vacation of the title are Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Montreal, North Carolina, Ohio, Quebec and Wisconsin.

Jack High-Hats Stribling Offer.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—(UP)—There is no possibility that Jack Sharkey will accept the proffer by "Pa" Stribling of a contract under which Sharkey would be a sparring partner for W. L. (Young) Stribling when the latter trains for his scheduled June bout with Max Schmeling, Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, said tonight.

"The Striblings know right well that Jack would not accept such a contract," Buckley said. "If he did, I'm afraid there wouldn't be any Stribling-Schmeling fight, for Sharkey would ruin Stribling."

Special Golf Bag Is Presented Wade By Sports Writers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 17. (AP)—The matched set of golf clubs presented Coach Wallace Wade by the Alabama football team for a Christmas present henceforth will repose in a new made-to-order bag.

The gift was sent Wade tonight bearing the names of 11 sports writers, 10 of whom accompanied the team to the Pacific coast for the Rose Bowl game. It was made in a Jasper (Ala.) factory, and is the last word in golfing equipment, featuring among other things five locked compartments, a waterproof pocket for tobacco and score cards and an umbrella rack.

A silver plate bears the inscription "Rose Bowl, 1931, Alabama 24-W. S. C. 0" and the names of the following sports writers:

Morgan Blake, Atlanta Journal; H. G. Pennell, Alabama Journal; Ed Danforth, Atlanta Constitution; Stuart X. Stephenson, Montgomery Advertiser; Bob Phillips, Birmingham Age-Herald; Jimmie Burns Atlanta Georgian; John Pulman, Birmingham Post; Zipp Newman and Henry Vance, Birmingham News; Blinky Horn, Nashville Tennessean, and Fred Digby, New Orleans Item.

NEELY IS NAMED CLEMSON COACH

CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Professor H. W. Barr, chairman of the Clemson College athletic council, announced today Jess Neely, assistant coach at the University of Alabama, will succeed Josh Cody as head coach of intercollegiate athletics at Clemson.

Professor Barr said Neely, who is now in Birmingham, Ala., conferring with Gene Parker, alumni secretary of Clemson, would take charge "when Josh leaves."

Cody's contract with Clemson expires June 30, Professor Barr said, but there was a possibility that the "Big Man" would leave before his contract expired.

Neely has not yet formally signed a contract, the athletic council head said, but had verbally agreed to take charge here. The Alabama man will come here "within the next ten days," Professor Barr said, to complete the formalities.

No assistant coaches will be announced, Professor Barr said, until after the athletic council has received any recommendations Neely may care to offer. Jules Carson is now assistant football coach here. His contract will expire this summer, Mr. Barr said.

Neely, he said, would "be here during spring practice" but whether he will take charge of the squad at that time Professor Barr said he did not know.

Neely, like Cody, played under the veteran Dan McGugin at Vanderbilt. He coached five years at Southwestern before going to Alabama, where he has been for the last three years.

Martin Will Attend Caldwell Meeting

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—John D. Martin, president of the Southern association, announced today that he will attend a conference in Nashville Monday at which the receivers for Caldwell & Co. plan to dispose of their interests in the Nashville Baseball Association.

Mr. Martin made this announcement after receiving an invitation from Rutledge Smith, one of the receivers.

GALVESTON BUYS WACO FRANCHISE

WACO, Texas, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Sale of the Waco franchise in the Texas league to Galveston for $23,000 was announced late today by President Charles Turner, of the local club. The price was the same paid by Waco for the Galveston franchise several years ago when the Cubs replaced Galveston as a member of the league.

Wolfpack Matmen Lose to Generals

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 17.—(UP) Washington & Lee defeated North Carolina State in a Southern conference wrestling match here today, 28 to 6, using three reserves, Davidson, Wright and Wofford, who won their matches. Captain Eason, of State, defeated Acting Captain Evans in the 115-pound class.

CARNERA SIGNED WITH MALONEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Walter Friedman, one of the American managers for Primo Carnera, announced today he had signed articles for a fight at Miami February 26 between the Italian giant and Jim Maloney, Boston heavyweight. Frank Bruen, former general manager of Madison Square Garden, will promote the show.

The match has been in the making for some time but official confirmation was lacking until today.

Maloney holds a 10-round decision over Carnera gained in a fight last fall in Boston.

Both fighters are under suspension in New York state and Carnera is in the bad graces of several athletic commissions, but it will have no effect on the Miami fight. Florida is one of the few states in the Union that has no commission or recognized state control of the sport.

Carnera also signed a contract today for a 10 weeks' vaudeville tour, Friedman announced, at $10,000 a week.

JACKETS FIGHT UPHILL BATTLE BUT FALL SHORT

Ever-Hustling Bulldogs Hold Lead in Conference Title Race.

By Ed Danforth,
Sports Editor.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—Georgia Tech's laudable ambition to make the first of the 1931 basketball games with Georgia the turntable for the Yellow Jacket athletic fortunes fell ten points short of the goal tonight.

The agile Georgia five hustled about over the floor of Woodruff hall through heavy clouds of collegiate cigaret smoke and earned a 39-to-30 victory over the Yellow Jackets.

The Flats boys made a great effort, however. They hung on the flanks of the galloping Bulldogs in the first half and finished on the short end of 18 to 14. That is considered hailing distance in basketball circles.

But the Bulldogs came back with a barrage of long shots from all parts of Clarke county and sped away to a big lead. They were far down the road when the Yellow Jackets started a late rally and closed up the gap to a respectable distance.

HIGH ON TOP.

The triumph left Georgia sitting high and handsome at the top of the conference race. They are undefeated to date and show no signs of letting up.

It is an ungainly looking basketball team in action—meaning no offense, of course, but just comparing them to some former graceful-looking machines developed in Athens—but they keep flipping the leather ball through the iron hoop which, we are told, is the big idea in the game.

And for sheer determination, unlimited endurance, and eternal hustling this Bulldog quintet is a marvel. No wonder they have stood these other conference teams in the corner.

OH, QUITE!

It has been some time since Georgia Tech defeated Georgia at anything—sometime back in 1929, they say—and the Jackets came close enough tonight to gain some encouragement.

But ever defeating this present quintet of assorted pinwheels and firecrackers is going to be a tough assignment.

Two underslung kids were the stars of the rival clubs tonight.

TECH'S HUGH.

Hugh Gooding, who performed as a sophomore halfback on the Grey Devils during the football season, roamed the floor unhampered and bagged nine field goals for his side.

He staged a one-man revolution in the last half and put the Jackets back in the ball game just when they were about to be humiliated. in fact, all the playing that was done in the last five minutes of the game was done by Gooding.

He shot field goals like Daniel Boone used to shoot squirrels. All he needed was a coon skin cap and a long rifle to look exactly like Daniel Boone. However, Daniel never appeared in public in his summer underwear—if any—so scratch out the comparison. And it is also fair to say that Gooding kept the Jackets in the game in the first half, too, by his sharpshooting.

GEORGIA'S TOMMY.

The Georgia pony forward was Tommy Moran, who was third-string quarterback last fall.

He is a ball of swamp fire dashing through any defense and is the spark plug of the Georgia passing game. When not shooting he was passing to the next man like a good player.

Sandy Sanford did not really get going until the last half. Then he went on a long shooting spree that buried Tech too deep to be salvaged.

Furman Defeats Atlanta Y, 40-12.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Furman's basketball team tonight regained its stride and won from the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. team, 40 to 12. The score at the half was 24 to 3, Atlanta having registered only one field goal. The game was slow at the end. The college boys apparently taking things easy and the Atlanta team scored nine points near the close.

Bob and Director Play First Round

Bobby Jones had his first round of golf with his new movie director, George Marshall, Saturday afternoon on the new East Lake Country Club course. Bobby's father and C. E. Freeman completed the foursome.

It was a friendly round, the first of many which lie ahead of the pair, although Bobby continued his sub par scores, he did not take any particular pains with his shots.

Marshall arrived in the city Friday and immediately held a conference with Jones, who will make a series of educational golf pictures late in March. Marshall will be in the city several weeks.

Conference Gridmen Face 18 Intersectional Games on '31 Card

Tests Are Booked For All Sections

Tide, 'Gators, Wildcats, Wave and Wolfpack Each Have Eight Tilts Within Loop.

Dixie's Southern conference football clubs, which challenged so well for national honors last season, will make a bid for an even higher spot in countrywide rankings next season, a tabulation of the complete schedules for the circuit shows. In little round figures, the conference gridmen will play 18 intersectional games during the 1931 season.

The list of cross-country contests is two more than that played last year and it carries a better representation of the nation. All sections are represented upon one or the other of 11 conference schedules. This leaves a dozen teams without an intersectional test.

On the conference card the east is represented by Army, Navy, Harvard, Columbia, Yale, Carnegie Tech, Villanova, Pennsylvania, Syracuse and New York University. From the midwest will come Wisconsin, Ohio State and Marquette. The great northwest is represented by Washington State, victim of Alabama's crushing and surprising aerial attack in Rose Bowl.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Southern California will carry colors of the lower Pacific coast region into competition with Dixie football. Texas A. & M., Arkansas and Texas Christian University will come out of the Southwest conference to battle conference elevens. Thus not one of this group will meet Dixie teams in more than one intersectional struggle.

Most noticeable among the absentee intersectional opponents are Northwestern, Minnesota and Chicago. Penn, Navy and Yale also have reduced their southern games to one each, compared with two each last season.

Georgia and Louisiana State top the field with most cross-country crusades. The Bulldogs and Tigers have booked three such appearances. Georgia's is the most impressive of the 22 other conference members. The Mehre machine must meet Yale, N. Y. U. and Southern California on foreign fields. L. S. U. has Army, Arkansas and T. C. U.

TULANE BOOKS MOST.

Georgia Tech, Tulane and Virginia have two each. The Tornado has retained Carnegie Tech and Penn, while the Green Wave dropped Northwestern and added Southern California to Texas A. & M. The Cavaliers will play Harvard and Columbia on successive Saturdays.

Tulane, boasting one of its most powerful elevens last year, has stepped out and hooked the longest card in the conference ranks. The Greenies have 11 games lined up. Seven others—Duke, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, Sewanee and N. C. State—have 10 battles each.

Five elevens have scheduled eight conference contests. Six others have seven in S. C. circles. Those with most conference games are Alabama, Tulane, Florida, Kentucky and North Carolina. Those to play most games at home are Tulane and Tennessee. Right now the Greenies are planning eight home appearances and the Vols have seven. Georgia Tech is next in this respect with six.

COMPARATIVE TABLE.

Here's a comparative list of conference schedules, showing the total number of games, those within the S. C., intersectional battles, the number of games at home and those with S. I. A. A. opposition:

Golfers at Tech Begin Practice

With the clearing of bad weather, the Georgia Tech golfing team is scheduled to get in a few rounds of practice during the next few weeks. Scott Hudson, Jr., captain of the Jacket golfers, is working on a schedule of matches with Florida, Tulane, North Carolina, Duke, Georgia and Vanderbilt.

Prominent among the candidates are Wilbur Sakes, Jr., of Chattanooga, winner of the school championship in his freshman year; Ed Herron, a star of last year, and Carl Harrison. Sakes played well last summer in the southern amateur at Greensboro.

Purple Swimmers Planning Practice

Boys' High swimmers are scheduled to assemble at the Y. M. C. A. pool early in the week to start practice for the spring and summer events. Only four of the veterans from the city championship team of last year are left and around that quartet Coach Crowder is hoping to build another winner. K. T. McKinstry, Judge Valentine, Asa Candler and James Daughtery are the veterans.

THREE TEAMS TIE FOR LEAD IN CITY LOOP

Western Union, Hawkins Electric, Alliance Printing Bowlers Set Pace.

Bowlers of the Western Union, Hawkins Electric Company and Alliance Printing Company, each having won five of their six games during the two series held in the second half of the City Tenpin league race, stand tied for the lead by virtue of those records.

The general run of bowling in the last series was below the usual average, although there were several individual efforts of note. Hughes, of Wormser Hats, was the individual leader with high game of 268 and total of 637 for the three games. Bell, of the Orphans, was second with high game of 253 and total of 610. Third honors went to Foster, of Fort McPherson, with high game of 222 and total of 604.

Hughes has high average for the six games with 201 closely followed by Foster with 199 and Bell with 197.

Next Tuesday night's feature matches match Western Union and the Orphans; Fort McPherson and Alliance Printing Company, and Hawkins Electric Company and the Giants, six of the strongest teams in the league, and the results probably will be in doubt until the last ball has been rolled.

Farrell Changes Mind, Likes New Golf Ball

His Card Shows Better Scores With New One. Believes Other Pros Favor Change.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Johnny Farrell, dapper Irishman of the links, has changed his mind about the new golf ball. He said today he believed he preferred it to the old size.

Farrell's voice was among those raised against the new ball proposal but he said today the "proof was in the pudding." He has played the ball in two open tournaments and, if anything, shot better golf. He believed the other leading professionals found it so, too.

Farrell rates the difference between the old and new ball as "about one club." He said his opinion was that many of the leading players will change their clubs and henceforth use wooden clubs with deeper and straighter faces and irons with thicker blades.

"I was one of those who were strongly opposed to the change when it was first announced," said Farrell. "I thought the change would be impractical and would eventually develop a storm of protest on the part of the great army of golfers.

"Since playing the ball in two tournaments this year, the Miami open and the Fort Lauderdale competition, I have learned from practical experience there is little difference between the old and the new ball. In fact, I believe I prefer the new.

COMPARE SCORES.

"If you will compare the scores made by the leading players in tournaments this year with the scores made by the leaders in the same tournaments last year you will see that the scoring this year is as low, if not better, than it was previously.

"For example, Gene Sarazen won the Miami open last year with a score higher than 300. Playing the same course the same time of the year and under conditions that were very similar, Joe Turnesa had a 294 with the new ball, while I was 295, whereas a year ago I had a score of nearly ten shots higher.

"Incidentally, six players were under 300 in this tournament this year and last year none broke 300. The caliber of the field was practically the same.

"The reports from the California tournaments, and especially the two most important, the Los Angeles and Agua Caliente, show that the scoring this year with the new ball is as good, if not better, than it was a year ago in the same tournaments.

"The reason for this is that the players are using a longer club on their second shots. Instead of using a No. 4 iron for the second shot, for instance, most of the players will use a No. 3 club, and instead of employing a No. 2 iron they probably will take a spoon. Thus, the difference I would say in regard to the use of clubs is just about one club."

BULLDOG NINE CARDS 14 GAMES IN CONFERENCE

Georgia Opens With Maryland and Closes With Tech Here.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Twenty-two games are listed for the University of Georgia's 1931 baseball team, H. J. Stegeman, athletic director, announced today.

Twenty of the games will be played with five other teams composing the Dixie College Baseball league, organized last June with Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, as president. Maryland will play the Bulldogs in a two-game series here in the only non-league games.

Twelve of the games will be played in Athens and 10 on the road. The teams comprising the Dixie league are Georgia, Georgia Tech, Mercer, Oglethorpe, Florida and Auburn.

The league teams will play each other four games and the championship will be decided on a percentage basis.

THE SCHEDULE.

April 3 and 4, Maryland in Athens (not league game).
April 6 and 7, Oglethorpe in Atlanta.
April 10 and 11, Florida in Gainesville.
April 13 and 14, Mercer in Macon.
April 20 and 21, Florida in Athens.
April 22 and 23, Auburn in Athens.
April 24 and 25, Mercer in Athens.
April 27 and 28, Auburn in Auburn.
May 1 and 2, Georgia Tech in Athens.
May 11 and 12, Oglethorpe in Athens.
May 15 and 16, Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Tech Gridmen Open Drill on February 9

Large Squad Will Report to Coaches Alexander and Cannon; Dodd Arrives Later.

By Herb Clark.

Georgia Tech's leaderless and democratic legions of the gridirons, their ranks numerically at a peak, will report to Head Coach W. A. Alexander and Line Coach Jack Cannon on February 9, to start a "free will" session of spring practice which will be prolonged until late in March, when Robert Lee Dodd, newly-appointed guiding hand to the backs, will make his debut at a special school for the ball-toters. Dodd's coming to Atlanta and the Flats will be delayed until after he has closed his work at the University of Tennessee.

The spring grind, as announced some time ago, will not be compulsory.

AMBITIOUS UNENGAGED.

Those men who report will be the ambitious group which is not engaged in basketball, baseball, track or other spring activities at the Flats.

As was likewise announced some time ago—at the annual football banquet, to be exact—the Jackets will all take off from the same starting line.

Coach Alexander, in raising the banner of Tech's new athletic era, stated that all who report for the spring work as well as the entire squad which will start practice in the fall will be lumped into one group—letter winners, scrubs and sophomores—and that the fight for places on the 1931 machine would be wide open. Which means just that. The election of a captain will also be held over until early October.

MANY "POSSIBLES."

With six veterans from the 1930 squad missing, but a good crop of freshmen coming up to battle the reserves for recognition, it is probable that a number of different combinations will be tried before even the "spring varsity" takes shape. And there will be others on tap for fall. Captain Earl Dunlap, Alternate-Captain Tom Jones, Vance Maree, Frank Speer, Jim Brooke and Hudson Edwards form the departing sextet.

And with that list of absentees, Jack Cannon is faced with the major problem as to the teaching of youngsters. He must select and drill an entire new center section for his line—a pair of tackles and a pair of guards. Yet from among a group composed of McKee, Ezell, Harrison, Corn, Jones, Fincher, Millians, and others of the past year's squad and a number of likely sophomores he should find what he needs.

Dodd, a good group of letter men, reserves and sophs on hand, faces fewer problems in the backfield.

PICKING UP.

The National league's 1930 attendance of 5,500,00 is 136,000 more than 1927, the other big year.

Crucial Games Mark Week's Y-Church Basketball Schedule

Upsets Promised In First Division

S. S. A. A. Leaders Battle for Advantage in Tuesday Round.

A week of crucial games lies ahead of fans who follow the teams sponsored by the Y-Church Athletic Association. The schedule calls for the first division teams to meet.

Although Ramah Baptist, of Palmetto, and Central Presbyterian played three extra periods, they were unable to reach a verdict and as a result both teams are trailing the leaders a half game. In the Dixie league feature J. O. Y. Class dropped the game that would have given them a tie with Peachtree Christian, 24 to 22, and dropped to third place as Clarkston Baptist gained a full game by downing Decatur Presbyterian. Alpha Class secured a first division berth by defeating Anchor Class in a hot battle.

Gordon Street Presbyterian, leaders of the Georgia league, were able to maintain their perfect record defeating "Wop" Lyle's Oakhurst Presbyterian five 27 to 25, and G. F. G. Class gained a tie for a first division berth by defeating Fort McPherson 23 to 20.

Monday ig... when the teams of the Dixie league meet on the Y. M. C. A. court interest will center in the nightcap for Clarkston Baptist must defend its right to runner-up position against the J. O. Y. Class. And the opening game between the Anchor Class and Kirkwood Presbyterian will decide the lead of the second division. Peachtree Christian, the leaders, should be able to maintain their perfect record as they are scheduled to meet the cellarites, Decatur Presbyterian.

A change in relative standings of the teams of the Sewanee league will hinge on Wednesday night's results with the winner of each tilt climbing a rung up the ladder. In the opening game Ramah Baptist has an opportunity to supplant Pep Class in the tie for the lead as they are now trailing by one-half a game. While Wester Heights Baptist, half-owners of the coveted position, meets Central Presbyterian in the nightcap with the winner being rewarded with a leg of the leadership.

Gordon Street Presbyterian is leading the Georgia league with a perfect record and will face the acid test in the Frida, night series slated for Central Presbyterian court, as the schedule calls for them to meet the second-place Central Presbyterian five, whom they are now leading by one full game.

Reserves Quit Scott League.

First casualty among local basketball leagues this season came last week when the Naval Reserves dropped out of the Trammel Scott league. They had suffered three straight losses and had two games with strong teams yet to be played before the end of the first round, so they decided to withdraw from the league. This leaves an opening in this league for some team desiring to finish the season with them. Any team wanting this vacancy should get in touch with Trammell Scott.

Leaders Face Second Division.

Tuesday's schedule for the girls' teams of the Cherokee league calls for the second division teams to play the supposedly stronger members of the loop. Central Presbyterian is scheduled to play Decatur Presbyterian, and as the latter club has shown remarkable improvement in their last games they are very likely to break into the games won column.

Western Heights Baptist, the leaders, will meet the College Park Methodist five for the first time since their reorganization.

Two Tied in City League.

Outstanding games in the Girls' City league for the coming week seem to be the Girls' Athletic Club-Pattillo game slated for 7:50 Wednesday night, and the one between John Reed and Alpha Class, which opens the program at 7 o'clock.

Southern Business University draw Westminster this time, an in-an-out team that is just as likely to win against a good team as to lose against a poor one.

Changes Seen In S. S. A. A. List.

Sunday School Athletic Association teams will see great changes in the standings in the Tuesday night basketball series at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Calvary and Triple E are tied on top in the American league, having won three and lost two games each. Grace and Westminster have won two and lost three each and the top two play the lower pair Tuesday night.

The Calvary Aces and First Presbyterian are tied for the top position in the National. Pat Stephens' Gogettums promise to get nearer the top if they continue their improvement.

John Lewis got only one point in Calvary's defeat by Grace last Tuesday, but maintains his high point scoring lead over "Buck" Weaver, of Westminster, with 40 points to 36. Next week their teams meet.

Two Headliners In Girls' Loop.

First round of play in the City league was finished last week and two teams share the lead with one game lost and four won. Gulf took the lead at the start and met defeat only in the final game against 122d infantry. The Soldiers won at first, but were bumped off by First National bank by a one-point margin. It is still anybody's championship.

Costly---But Worth It

"Dutch" Dehnert, captain of the original Celtics, now playing for the Red Man Tobacco Company, of Toledo, Ohio, is rated as the greatest basketball player in the game today, and is also reputed to be the highest paid player.

CELTICS INVADE ATLANTA FRIDAY

Dehnert and Lapchick Lead Famous Quintet Against Jaycees.

Led by "Dutch" Dehnert, acclaimed as the greatest player now running about on the basebetball courts, and Joe Lapchick, lanky center wizard, the "Original Celtics" will make their annua Atlanta appearance Friday night on the floor at the city auditorium. The Atlanta Jaycee five will furnish the opposition for the Celts here.

The card Frida, will open at 7:30 o'clock with a clash between the Macon and Atlanta teams of the Georgia Power Company, with the Celtic-Jaycee game slated to get under way at approximately 8:45 o'clock.

These Celts, who have been playing together, with the usual replacements as age set in or as players—notably the ace of them all, Nat Holman—retired, form the most potent ball-handling, point-getting club ever known to the court game.

Dehnert, however, has ably filled Holman's shoes as floor man and shot. He invented the pivot play and developed it to such an extent that officials of the professional leagues were forced to legislate against it. On the present trip, however, that rule has been laid aside, as the play is one of the most colorful in the modern game and is the greatest fan-pleaser of all the tricks in the Celtic bag.

Dehnert, with Lapchick as chief aide, forms a passing combination which seldom lets the opposing team even follow the ball, much less retain it. This unless that other team is well versed in the ways of the Celts.

Beside that pair of aces, the Celtics will show Pete Barry, another veteran in Celtic ranks; "Cookie" Cunningham, Davy Banks and Lou Spindell, who have been around for some time, and Shudtz, a promising rookie—to Celtic company, at least—on their one-night stand here.

Dehnert and Barry are the guards. Lapchick the center, and Spindell and Banks the forwards. Shudtz is a reserve forward, while Cunningham is the utility man.

The visitors, relying on experience for their game, will be opposed by a club which may be outplayed but will never be outfought. Jack English, an expert shot from any spot on the court, and Guy Green will work at forwards. Both are former local prep stars. Waxelbaum, ex-Tech star, and Bass, who played for Oglethorpe some time ago, will alternate at center. Leffler and Cook handle the guard assignments.

Darlington High Beats La Grange

ROME, Ga., Jan. 17.—Darlington school's flashy basketeers defeated a plucky quintet from LaGrange High school here tonight, 24 to 11.

The beautiful floor work of Captain Barton and Hackett plus Rogers' unerring eye on short shots and the close guarding of the Darlington team checked the long-range loopers from the south Georgia city.

BELL, M'ADAMS FIGHT TO DRAW

Good Match Features Fine Mat Card at Y. M. C. A.

A. K. (Ding-Dong) Bell, light-heavyweight wrestling champion at the Y. M. C. A., and Jack McAdams, a newcomer to local wrestling circles, wrestled 15 minutes to a draw Saturday night in the "Y" gymnasium in the feature match of one of the best amateur cards that has been held this year. There was plenty of action in the match. Both used arm locks effectively.

In the semi-windup Jack English and Whitey Patterson wrestled 37 minutes to a draw. It was scheduled for a no-limit, one-fall match, following a 30-minute draw last Saturday night, but was called because of a lack of time. It was a clever defensive match, with neither wrestler taking any chances. English weighed 147, Patterson 150.

Whitey Craig and S. Rupley, 155 pounds each, failed to settle an old argument of bitter rivalry on the mat in a 15-minute limit match. They used every means possible to pin each other to the canvas, and as the timer's bell rang both wrestlers were completely "out." They had to be revived before accepting a draw decision. The match had the spectators standing at the end.

Bill Carson (142) pinned Atlee Perkins (143) in two minutes and six seconds with a headlock and body block.

George Tatum (130) threw K. O. Caristner (137) with an under body and head scissors lock after eight minutes and 30 seconds of fast wrestling. Christner was on the defensive after the first few minutes and wiggled out of several bad holes.

L. C. Henry (160) and H. L. Nelson (167) wrestled 10 minutes to a popular draw decision. They wrestled under the professional rules, with no holds barred.

Bob Shannon (42) a 6-year-old youngster, pinned "Snooks" Gurley (42), with a half-Nelson after five minutes of rolling and tumbling about on the canvas. They put up a real match, despite their tender age and light weight.

As an added attraction Pete Poulos knocked out Dick Dike in the fourth round of a boxing match.

WADLEY HIGH WINS.

WADLEY, Ga., Jan. 17.—Wadley High school's basketball team defeated the Avery High school five, 29 to 14, last night on the Wadley court.

CITY'S MAJOR QUINTETS FACE 12-GAME CARD

Jackets, Triangles Each Have Three Tilts on Program.

By Roy White.

An even dozen basketball games in which Atlanta's teams will be involved will be played during the week. Two other games are pending and another will likely be played before Saturday night has passed. Georgia Tech and the Y. M. C. A. quintets, with three games each, will share the spotlight, while the Atlanta Athletic Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Jewish Progressive Club teams will each play two games.

Tech will start the week's play with a game at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night in the Tech gymnasium with the Florida 'Gators as opponents. It will be a return game and Tech's fifth start in the Southern conference schedule. The 'Gators defeated Tech in Gainesville, Fla., last week. Mercer plays J. P. C. Tuesday in a return game on the South Pryor street court.

WEDNESDAY CARD.

Two games will be played Wednesday night. Bobby Dodd and Corbitt, All-Southern forward, will lead the Vols into Tech's camp, while Mercer will play the Y. M. C. A. Triangles on the Y court.

Joe Bean and his A. A. C. team will journey to LaGrange, Ga., Wednesday night to play the strong LaGrange Y. M. C. A. quintet.

Friday night is an open date in the major schedules unless one or two of the games now pending materialize.

The week's activities will close Saturday night with two and possibly three games scheduled for local courts. Atlanta Athletic Club will play the Charlotte Monograms, from Charlotte, N. C., and Tech will meet the University of Kentucky Wildcats in the Tech gymnasium.

CELTIC GAME.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce team will play the Celtics, the world's champion basketball team, Friday night on the city auditorium court, and will close the week with a game against Fort Benning on the Columbus (Ga.) court.

Georgia Tech will meet plenty of opposition in its three games with Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky. Tennessee and Kentucky will be particularly hard for the Jackets to defeat. Bobby Dodd, who will assume his coaching duties at the Flats late in February, and Corbitt, flashy forward, are the spark plugs in the Vol quintet. They gave Georgia a scare Friday night in Athens, losing by a three-point decision. Kentucky has a veteran outfit and their "submarine" attack is one of the most unusual in Southern conference circles.

The Y Triangles has a game with Mercer Wednesday night and has two other games pending during the week.

NO SETUPS.

None of the games, especially those scheduled for local courts, are setups for Atlanta's favorite teams. There will be plenty of action in each of the games and the week's basketball card in general looms as one of the most interesting of the entire season.

After a hard week of three games the University of Georgia team will coast until Friday night when the Auburn Tigers will be played in Athens.

The week's schedule:

TUESDAY.
Florida vs. Tech at Tech.
Mercer vs. J. P. C. at J. P. C.

WEDNESDAY.
Mercer vs. Y. M. C. A. at Y.
Tennessee vs. Tech at Tech.
A. A. C. vs. LaGrange at LaGrange.

FRIDAY.
Auburn vs. Georgia at Athens.
Celtics vs. Jr. Chamber at auditorium.
Macon Power vs. Ga. Power at auditorium.

SATURDAY.
Charlotte vs. A. A. C. at club.
Kentucky vs. Tech at Tech.
Jr. Chamber vs. Benning at Columbus.

J. P. C. Invades Chattanooga.

The Jewish Progressive Club basketball team will start the week with a game tonight in Chattanooga, Tenn., against the Chattanooga Y. M. H. A. Chattanooga will pay a return visit to the J. P. C. court early in February.

Atlanta Girls Lose To Chattanooga Five

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 17. After a ragged first half of rough play, much fouling and wild shots the Interstate Lifers, champions of Chattanooga, made a sensational comeback to defeat the Atlanta girls' champs, the Pattillo Memorial Girls, 14-12, in the first intercity girls' game of the season here tonight.

Led by Williams, diminutive forward of the Lifers, the Chattanoogans began to hit their stride late in the second half, Williams accounting for 11 of her team's 14 points.

Conliff was high scorer for the Georgians with two field goals to her credit.

Two Ex-Petrels Join Lookouts

Two former stars of the undefeated Oglethorpe baseball team of 1930, Gyp Bennett and Glenn Gardner, outfielders, have been signed by Bert Niehoff for his Chattanooga team, it was announced Saturday.

Claude Herrin, star third baseman of the Petrel team of last year, is considering two Southern league contracts, it was learned. Both Bennett and Gardner have been ruled ineligible for play this year because of having participated in more than three games per week of summer baseball.

Proselyting 'Natural,' Vanderbilt Dean Says

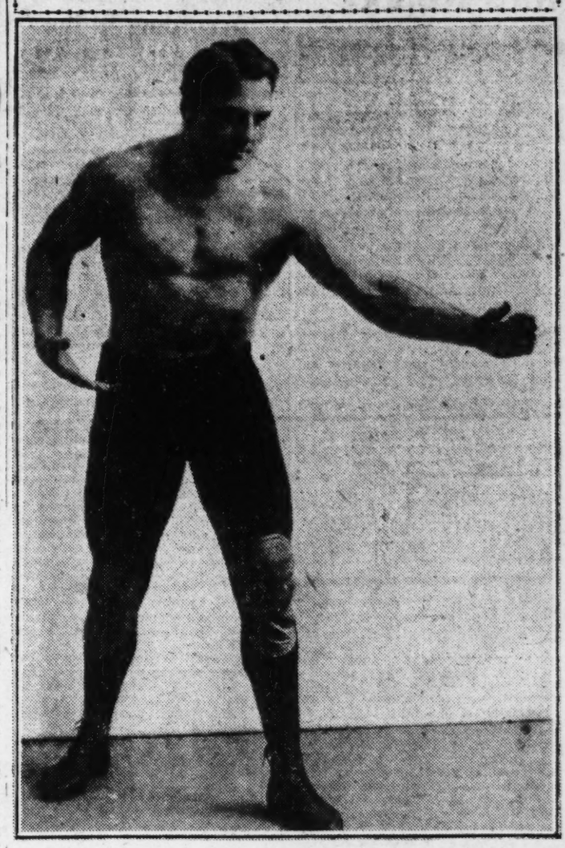

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Madison Sarratt, dean of men at Vanderbilt University, said today that proselyting of athletes by a university or college is "natural and sometimes, in a form, even commendable."

"It is only natural for an alumnus to invite a promising boy to his alma mater," he said. "If a man thinks well of his college it is to be expected that he will want to urge promising boys that he knows to go to it, whether it is his motive to bolster the football team, the school of engineering, or the elocution society.

"The responsibility of the college to the boy begins only after he has applied for admission. The college must maintain entrance requirements with absolute rigidity."

Referring to subsidization of athletes, Dean Sarratt said "it is foolish to say that a boy, whether he plays on the football team or in the band, can't accept money for working part time. The only requirement is that the boy exert himself, that he give honestly whatever labor is required of him for his salary."

Wrestles Jones Here

Dick Shikat, former world's champion heavyweight wrestler, who meets Paul Jones, Texas grappler, in the feature two-hour match at the city auditorium Tuesday night. Shikat defeated Jones here last year in a rough and tumble scrap and all are looking forward to a great match.

PETRELS OPEN GRID TRAINING

Freshmen Will Report Monday To Start Spring Practice.

By Jack Troy.

Tomorrow is another football season for the Oglethorpe squad.

Freshman football players, among them a number of very promising candidates for the varsity, will be first served when spring football practice gets under way Monday afternoon at the Petrel school with Coach Harry Robertson in charge. These players are to be given two weeks of training in the fundamentals of the Robertson system before the varsity members join the workouts, which will last for a period of from six to eight weeks, according to weather conditions.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

While Coach Robertson's work is cut out for him, none of the yearling candidates having a working knowledge of the system, prospects for a strong Petrel eleven are bright for the fall season, should the prospects come through as expected.

Should they come through as pleasingly as did the sophomores of last season Coach Robertson should have no worries over replacing Captain Charley McKissick, end; Al Church, tackle, and Curly Fulton, guard, the only regulars to be lost to the Petrel squad through graduation.

For McKissick's position T. Johansen, a six-footer weighing 200 pounds, would seem to have the inside track. He showed great promise as a freshman player, and it is no secret that Coach Robertson is expecting him to develop into varsity material in his sophomore year. The giant from Savannah combines speed with height and heft and is a capable pass receiver.

Dave Barrow and Pickard are two exceptionally fine prospects for tackle. Both are big and aggressive and have some experience.

The guard material is both plentiful and promising, with Sleepy Young, Joe Herriot, Don Aderhold and Walker heading the list. The latter was unable to play last season because of a twisted knee, but the record he established in the G. I. A. A., in which he was an all-conference player, merits him varsity consideration.

Rudy Shouse is a good center prospect, but it is unlikely that he can displace Andy Morrow.

Coach Robertson is apparently well off as to experienced backfield material, losing only Jenny Woodward, a speedy halfback, but he doubtless will find varsity men from among Jeff Bolden, Harry Wren, Phil Hildreath, Luke Moss, Flynt and a number of others.

FUNDAMENTALS FIRST.

The actual process of building a team for the 1931 season will not begin until the other members of the squad report for practice two weeks from Monday. By that time, however, Coaches Robertson and Nutty Campbell, who will have charge of the backfield candidates, expect to have the freshmen thoroughly versed in the fundamentals of the system, so that advanced work can be started at full speed.

On one factor alone the Stormy Petrels seem headed for better football days in 1931, and that is reserve strength. There was no question that last season the Gold and Black was deplorably weak in this respect. When injury followed injury a good record was almost ruined at the close of the season because of lack of reserves, but improved conditions loom for the next campaign. The coaches at least are hopeful.

Oglethorpe Diamond Call Is Sounded.

Coach Frank Anderson, mentor to the Oglethorpe baseball team, announced Saturday that diamond practice at the Peachtree road school would get under way on or about February 20.

Anderson's call will be answered by but two members of the championship 1930 aggregation. All but Herrin, infielder, and Mitchell, pitcher, of last year's club, have graduated and the gaps will have to be filled from members of last year's reserve team and the youngsters who come up from the freshman crew.

Walker, Whitely and Moore look best of the sophomore group, while Whaley and Golden, both reserves of last year, seem to top that crop.

JONES CERTAIN TO BEAT SKIKAT

Texan Sees "Different Story" From That of Last Year.

Just what Paul Jones will do to Dick Shikat at the auditorium Tuesday night remains to be seen, but to hear Jones tell it, the former heavyweight champion is in for a very bad night.

"I know he won from me in our last match here, but this time it will be a different story," that is what the Texan told Matchmaker Weber when he was signed for the match.

The Texan says that he has improved 100 per cent since he met the former champion here and is confident he will win.

Their match last year was one of the greatest seen in Atlanta. It drew a record house at the auditorium. That match was not soon forgotten by those who witnessed it. They staged a real battle, and before it was over the fans were all but in the ring. It was one exciting night.

Matchmaker Weber is happy over being able to arrange the match and feels confident it will attract another packed house.

"Jones was anxious to get another match with Shikat after his defeat here last year and after several attempts I matched them," Weber said. "I feel that in this match I have arranged the best attraction possible at this time," he added.

In the semi-windup—which would go as a main event in many large cities—Joe Vargo, Hungarian champion, will meet Nick Velcoff, Bulgarian champion. They tip the scales at 210. This match should produce much action.

Tickets for the match are on sale at the Candler Building Soda Company and the Piedmont Hatters. Ladies will be admitted to any seat in the house for $1.

NATIONAL FIELD TRIALS TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

Bob Whites Whistling as Dogs Are Being Groomed.

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Wily Bob White is whistling in the clover fields at the old Ames plantation, and the nation's best dogflesh is being groomed for the national field trials here in January.

Weather permitting, the first stake will be run January 19, and the events will be continued until a grand national champion is selected.

The grand national is the greatest bird dog event of the year and always means a renewal of the hunting feud between pointers and setters. Last year Feagin's Mohawk Pal, a sturdy setter, almost ran little Mary Blue, trim pointer, off her feet in the finals.

Only professional handlers are allowed to compete and the regulations are as stringent as any sport knows. Only a few words may be spoken to the dogs, which are judged on stamina, poise, scent, courage and general conduct.

Mohawk Pal, owned by E. W. Tutwiler of Montgomery, Ala., kept his head in the wind last year, set beries perfectly over his shoulder and off his nose to win the title for the third time.

The event was run on a "setter's day," and the pointer followers believe they will come back this time to return the trophy to their camp.

Mary Blue, owned by Walter C. Teagle, Standard Oil Company executive, will be back this year. Teagle's Morris Roy, which won the southwestern title this year, also will run. Old Mohawk Pal, whose nose seems to improve with the years, will defend his title.

High Tone Toney, pride of Charles Jones, of Tulsa, Okla., will work, as will Yankee Doodle Jack, owned by Pete Dixon, of Catoosa, Okla. The famous Junedale Allie, owned by Henry Cilchrist, of Boston, has been entered in the trials this year.

All these dogs are pointers except Mohawk Pal and High Tone Toney.

G. M. A. Is Defeated By Madison, 26 to 21

Rallying in the last half after a ragged first period, the Madison Aggies defeated G. M. A., 26 to 21, Saturday night on the College Park court in a return game. The Cadets defeated the Aggies by a wide margin in an early season game on the Madison court.

It was consistent team play that spelled defeat for the Cadets. Cordell was high point scorer for the visitors with eight points, while Hale, Martin, and Gavan were close behind.

POWER, ACCELERATION, SPEED AND SILENCE FEATURE 1931 CARS

Engineering Critics Report Findings on New York Show

Expert Says Those Who Buy Cars This Year Will Get Greatest Values Ever Offered.

BY E. Y. WATSON.
(Written Exclusively for The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

DETROIT, Jan. 17.—With automobile manufacturing off to a new start for the year through the introduction of 1931 models in New York and other cities, the engineering critics have had a chance to survey them all and to report their findings.

Each year the men who design the cars for the big producers, together with those engaged in research, hold an annual session at show time, at which all have an opportunity to air their views.

The progress that has been made is the subject of a forum conducted by the Society of Automotive Engineers at which speech is free. Among the veterans of the profession to be heard this year was H. L. Horning, a past president of the S. A. E., whose experience dates back to the formative days of cars and plants. On one point, he was emphatic:

"The outstanding features of 1931 engines," he said, "are power, acceleration, speed and silence. There are some promising developments in 1931, but those who buy cars this year will get the greatest values ever offered."

In reviewing the changes apparent on the new cars, Mr. Horning referred particularly to new accessories that have been added, in one form or another, on most of the models.

On the air intake mufflers that have been devised to prevent the roar common with eight-cylinder engines, he found that such devices have been well developed, although not entirely perfected. The combination of an air-cleaner and muffler is no simple problem, but the accessory is an excellent follow-up to the general scheme of mounting engines on rubber, so as to deaden sound, which may get to the car through the chassis, and through the body to the car.

"Silence," he pointed out, "prevents fatigue, and fatigue is the cause of accidents."

"For sales reasons," Mr. Horning added, "there is still a tendency to build more top horsepower into engines. The new examples are the Cadillac V-12, which develops 135 horsepower, and the new V-16 Marmon with 200 horsepower. Of course the 'advertised' powers are seldom used but the torque is the envy of every driver who is passed on the road and at the crossing 'getaway.'

"Socially speaking, these engines are the seventh heaven to the Mrs. Castorbilts, whose satisfaction and pride is mensured by the number of dollars and country homes they own."

On the relative merit of iron and aluminum for pistons, Mr. Horning finds each one seeming to be more firmly intrenched. He conceded that with demands for higher speed and better cooling, aluminum is gaining. On the other hand, he holds that within the limits of speed and heat within which iron pistons can be used, they never will be equalled for satisfactory performance.

Mr. Horning referred also to the new electro-plated pistons which General Motors is introducing on the new Oakland. This refinement, he believes, would never have come about had it not been for the development of chrome plating and the exceedingly hard surface presented by this material and the control of dimensions that is possible.

Summarizing 1931 changes in chassis design, A. F. Denham, who observes the new cars for the publication Automotive Industries, finds five makes of cars and 15 chassis that have adopted free-wheeling.

There are six makes and fourteen chassis that have synchro-mesh transmissions.

There are three makes and seven chassis with completely automatic chassis lubrication.

Nine more makes than last year are using double drop frames on 17 different chassis.

There are six more makes in which the rear axle tread has been increased to 58 inches or more, 56 inches being standard.

There are 11 makes on which the wheelbase has been increased, representing 17 chassis models.

Five wire wheels are now found as standard on 10 more cars than in 1930, chiefly in the lower price ranges.

General Manager Champ Motors, Inc.

GEORGE M. ALBERTSON.

Announcement was made recently by officials of the Champ Motors, Inc., of the appointment of George M. Albertson as general manager.

Mr. Albertson has been in the automobile business since 1914, and has experience in every department of the automobile business. For the past ten years he has been a dealer at West Palm Beach, Fla., where he gained an enviable record. Mr. Albertson, a native Georgian, says he is delighted at the opportunity to return and resume his business career.

Franklin Builds According to the Public Dictates

Acting on the theory that since it is the public who buy motor cars, it would be the logical thing to do to go to them and learn their desire before developing a new motor car. This guided Franklin Automobile Company some months ago in conducting a nation-wide survey to determine the major demands of buyers in the fine car field.

This comprehensive national canvass brought out the buying motives of purchasers in the Franklin price class and enabled the Syracuse manufacturer to build his 1931 car according to the dictates of the buyer.

The investigation revealed that buyers in the fine car class seek luxury above all things—and luxury, it develops, consists of more than appearance, smart appointments and rich upholstery, although these elements enter definitely into the picture.

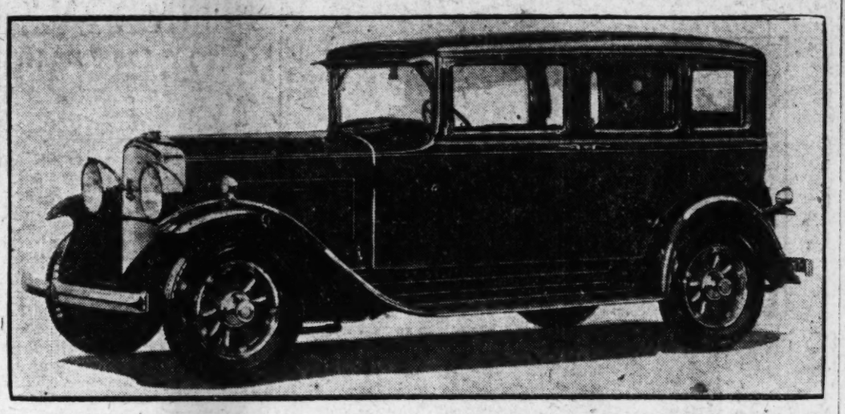

The term luxury in the mind of the public also means maximum comfort, smooth, effortless power and speed at all ranges, ease in handling, artistic trim and the most advanced conveniences, the study disclosed.

With this direct information in hand, Franklin engineers and designers were able to chart their course along a definite lane and to fully meet the luxury requirements of today's discriminating car buyer in the new Series 15. A careful inspection of this line shows how completely Franklin has adopted the high standards set for the truly luxurious motor car.

The appeal of line and proportion, of detail and fitment, of color and trimming, are indicative of the most exclusive and discriminating practice. The lowness, length and grace of the bodies, the rakish slant of the windshields, the carefully developed streamlining from stem to stern, plated shutters, and numerous other details are all in step with luxury. In the interiors the luxurious note is also plainly evident in the spacious, deep, soft cushions, padded arm rests at either side and in the center of the rear lin, while in long trips of 400 to 500 miles a day, the absence of the usual tired feeling at the end of the journey is a tribute to the riding comfort that has been built into the new model.

One of the chief contributions to Franklin luxury is its highly developed air-cooled, airplane-type engine, the most powerful of its kind ever developed for an automobile.

Strengthened Essex Frame Insures Riding Comfort

The frame of the new Essex Super Six has been entirely redesigned, providing a new rigidity that insures riding comfort at all speeds. Extensive research and experimentation by Hudson-Essex engineers over the last several years brought to light many of the formerly unknown qualities inherent in the double drop frame, a type pioneered by Hudson-Essex and the new frame is the result of these experiments.

Over a year was spent in developing the present frame, the design of which provides maximum rigidity and resistance to road shock, assuring passengers of a rugged, stable structure that is the foundation of the rare riding comfort offered in the 1931 Essex cars.

That portion of the frame between the body dash and the rear support in conventionally designed frames is theoretically weak, according to engineering authorities. To overcome this weakness, Hudson engineers perfected the side rails of the newly designed Essex frame by introducing a deeper center section carried well forward to the rear motor support. Further strength is added by extending the body sill well up on this portion of the frame and seven cross members of the box and bridge type, flanged and gusseted, grip the side rails at top and bottom forming a stiff and rigid foundation.

Body, fender, and running board brackets, larger than in previous Essex cars, are attached securely to the frame at points of greatest strength.

This unique frame construction is one of the many features in the new Essex Super Six which, this year, is selling at the lowest price in its history.

Association Directors To Hold Very Important Meeting

Matters of vital concern to the automotive industry of Atlanta and Georgia will be discussed at the January meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile Association, which will be held Friday, January 23, 12:30 luncheon, Atlanta Athletic Club. The board of directors is made up of officers of the association; past presidents; several special directors and chairmen of all standing committees. In this way all interests of the association are represented on the board of directors.

The Atlanta Automobile Association interests itself in all matters pertaining to the advancement of the automotive industry in this section. The association has always been an advocate of good roads as a means of aiding not only the automotive industry but all interests in the state of Georgia.

It is probable that a big general membership meeting of the association will be arranged for February or March.

SYDNEY C. JOHNSON OPENS USED CAR LOT

Sydney C. Johnson, who has been connected with the Buick factory for the past ten years in charge of used car sales promotion for Buick dealers, has established a used car business of his own at 270 Peachtree street. Mr. Johnson is well-known in Atlanta, having resided here formerly.

Import Survey Is Ready for Wholesale Dealers

PONTIAC, Mich., Jan. 17.—Distributive trends that have complicated wholesalers' problems during the past few years are discussed in a report just issued of a nationwide, impartial study of the wholesaling of non-perishable products. This study reveals that effort spent in planning better truck operation will yield more profitable returns for the average wholesaler than an equal amount of effort directed toward almost any other phase of his business.

The importance of more economical truck operation is stressed by the fact, as this study shows, that in some cases as high as 10 per cent of the total expense of the average wholesaler goes for truck operation. And in none of a number of typical cases observed was the wholesaler's profit equal to his truck expense.

The printed and illustrated report covering this field study is used by the General Motors Truck Company and made available to men in the industry without charge. It marks another step in what is steadily proving to be the most broad, practical and widely used survey ever undertaken of actual truck operation in major industries.

Seventh of a series issued monthly by the truck company, the current report deals with methods used by successful wholesalers to stabilize and increase profits by greater efficiency in truck management, operation and control.

Subject covered, based upon the most successful practices of leading wholesalers throughout the United States, include: The important trends in wholesaling; the wholesaler's job; the truck and wholesale movement of goods; making truck transportation pay profits; reducing losses in the warehouse; making each order more profitable; building up unprofitable accounts; serving a larger area profitably; making profits on special lines; planning for sound transportation.

Charts, diagrams and printed forms help to make the facts easily and quickly grasped.

Other reports also available cover food wholesaling, coal retailing, parcel delivery, retail food delivery, wholesale baking, and oil and gasoline distribution. Copies may be obtained from General Motors truck branches, distributors and dealers. Reports on other cross sections of American industry will be issued in succeeding months through 1931.

ALUMNI COUNCIL TO CONVENE HERE

The American Alumni Council, composed of alumni secretaries and editors from all of the leading colleges and universities of the United States and Canada, will hold its annual convention in Atlanta April 15-18, it was announced Saturday at a regional meeting of the council in Birmingham.

Agnes Scott, Emory, and Georgia Tech, the three Atlanta institutions which hold membership in the alumni organization, will act as hosts to the convention. A local committee on arrangements consists of Raymond B. Nixon, Emory, chairman; Mrs. D. B. Donaldson, Agnes Scott, and R. J. Thiesen, Georgia Tech. James E. Armstrong, alumni secretary of Notre Dame University, is convention director, and John G. Olmstead, of Oberlin College, is president of the council.

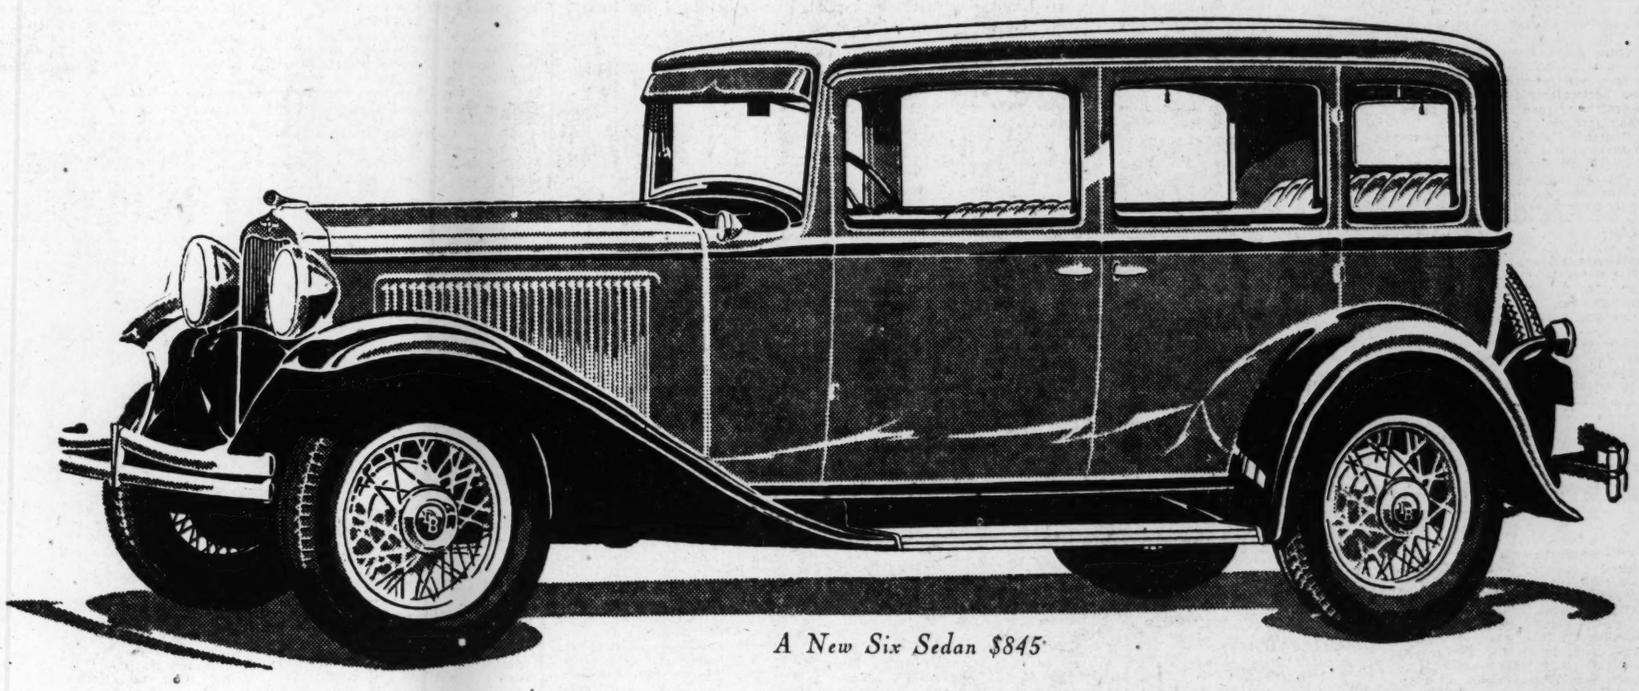

Novel Station for Atlanta

Work has already started at Courtland and Houston streets in preparation to erecting a duplicate of the station above. It is the lighthouse beacon type of the Specification Oil Company, who are planning several stations in Atlanta. In the tower a beacon runs all night and is designed to act as an aerial guide for aviators.

CARRY ON A FINE TRADITION

A New Six Sedan $845

It is Dodge Brothers belief that the best way to stimulate business is to offer the public more for its dollars—to meet the desire for higher living standards by giving real advancements without increase in cost. ∞ The new Dodge Six and Eight are better cars, not cheaper cars. They represent a great stride forward in beauty, size, comfort and power. And they are built with the firm conviction that the most important thing about a motor car is that it be a good motor car. ∞ In offering cars so obviously advanced in character, yet remaining at traditional Dodge levels in price, Dodge feels that it is acting in the true spirit of American progress, and that the value which results is instantly apparent.

Hupmobile Announces Free Wheeling for New '31 Models

Free-wheeling, described by engineers as one of the greatest single advancements in motor car design since the advent of the electric starter, will be included as standard equipment on every new model produced by Hupmobile, according to an official announcement made by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation at the opening of the New York National Automobile Show.

In making this announcement, Hupmobile is in the unique position of having free-wheeling in not only all its new eight cylinder cars, but in its new six cylinder models as well. By including free-wheeling, Hupmobile opens the way for every Hupmobile purchaser to lowered operation cost, easier and simpler car handling and an entirely new era in car performance.

Some of the features resulting from the adoption of free-wheeling by this 22-year-old manufacturer, include an oil economy of 18 per cent and better, a fuel savings of 12 per cent and more, reduction of necessary clutch operation of from 30 to 60 per cent and a new freedom in driving ease. Actual tests conducted for the Hupp Motor Car Corporation show that the engine is actually pulling the car only 8,000 out of every 10,000 miles registered on the speedometer.

Hupmobile's free-wheeling drive has been subjected to the most rigorous tests company engineers and testing drivers could devise. Cars equipped with free-wheeling under the steady hand of hard-fisted drivers and checked by unerring dials of delicate mechanical counting devices have stood up with amazing success in every part of the country and under every conceivable kind of weather and road surface. Numerous unlooked for advantages have been discovered. For example, the car equipped with free-wheeling is capable of a quicker stop than one not so equipped. Again, there is less danger of skidding on wet and icy pavement in free-wheeling than with the conventional transmission. And, likewise, there is a greater feeling of safety and security with free-wheeling than with the conventional type of transmission. All of these important features were discovered after thousands of miles of test driving under all kinds of road and weather conditions.

As adopted by Hupmobile, free-wheeling is simplicity itself. There is nothing new to learn, and even less to remember than with the old-fashioned type of car. In free-wheeling, the clutch may be used to shift into all speeds. It must be used as in ordinary driving when shifting into reverse and low speeds and from low into second speed. However, under certain operating conditions, it is easily possible to shift from second to high or back from high to second speed in free-wheeling without using the clutch. In such cases the forward speed of the car must be sufficient to permit the engine to idle below car speed. When free-wheeling is not used, the clutch must be used to shift into all gears. In its ease of operation and its simplicity and freedom from mental strain, the company believes free-wheeling will find its greatest favor among women drivers.

Much of the driving ease found in free-wheeling comes from its unusually quiet operation. Everyone knows of the quiet high speed operation in most cars of today. With the introduction of Hupmobile's new free-wheeling transmission, it is now possible to include a spiral type of gear in second speed. This new second gear provides third speed quiet in second gear operation on all new Hupmobiles. It introduces a new sense of silent operation—a particularly desirable feature when traffic or road conditions make frequent gear shifting necessary.

Hupmobile's free-wheeling consists of an over-running or one-way clutch. This clutch permits the gears to remain engaged in either second or high speed while the car is rolling forward under its own momentum and the engine is idling at a speed equivalent to from 6 to 8 miles an hour. In operation, this clutch operates similar to the well known bicycle coaster feature, the stem winding watch and the winding key of a portable moving picture camera, in that it turns free in one direction and engages when the power is applied.

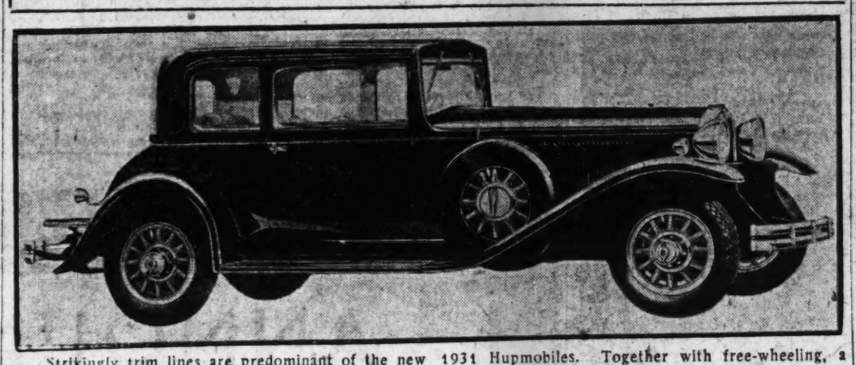

Just as the bicycle saves in effort, so does Hupmobile's free-wheeling effect economies in operation cost and driving effort that will, almost at a single stroke, obsolete the older type of transmission in popular favor.

The first two savings effected by Hupmobile's free-wheeling drive are, obviously, economies in fuel and oil. Whereas the engine formerly continued to turn up in revolutions although the throttle was closed, it now only idles while the car continues to roll along under its own momentum at 10, 25, 30 miles an hour or more. Engine vibration is completely lost when free-wheeling. Engine backlash, so common in other types of transmission when the throttle is suddenly closed or opened, is done away with. This feature alone saves in wear and tear on tires and the entire driving assembly, and particularly in the wracking effect on the car body.

Postponed, too, are engine overhauls and repair bills because of lessened engine operation and speed. Tests in rolling country showed a reduction in engine revolutions of as much as 34 per cent and some tests averaged a greater saving. This lessened wear, points out Hupmobile, will meet with positive favor from all owners. Still another advantageous feature of the new transmission for the new Century Six, Century Eight and series "C," "H" and "U" Hupmobiles is an easier, quieter and more flexible second gear performance.

Not only does Hupmobile step into the forefront with free-wheeling in all new models, but it presents a six and four straight eight series with improved body construction and other important changes. This company again leads with engines of great horsepower and startling performance. The new Century Six develops 70 horsepower. The new Century Eight develops 90 horsepower. The new series "C" has 100 horsepower, while the new series "H" boasts Hupmobile's big 133 horsepower engine with several important innovations. The custom-built series "U" cars are equipped with the same 133 horsepower engine which introduced double downdraft carburetion and radiator cooled oil to the American motoring public. Likewise the company has substantially reduced the prices on all five lines of cars, free-wheeling and other major improvements having been added at no extra cost to the purchaser.

Hupp's Free-Wheeling Straight Eight

Strikingly trim lines are predominant of the new 1931 Hupmobiles. Together with free-wheeling, a feature just added on Hupmobiles, their beauty and fine finish has come in for an unusual amount of attention. The new Hupmobile sixes and eights are being shown here in the showrooms of the Cauthorn Motor Company, Peachtree and Pine streets, all this week.

DR. PEPPER BEVERAGE PLANT TO OPEN HERE

Organization of a company to bottle Dr. Pepper carbonated beverages in Atlanta was completed last week, it is announced by J. W. Link, of Houston, Texas, president of the Dr. Pepper Company.

Under franchise of the Dr. Pepper Company, which maintains its general offices in Dallas, Texas, the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company, a Georgia corporation, has been organized and has leased a plant at 271 Boulevard, N. E.

J. W. LINK.

R. L. Treadaway will be in charge of the bottling plant as vice president and general manager, and according to the announcement the organization will be composed entirely of Atlanta people.

Present intentions are to have the plant in operation by March 1. Providing 15,000 square feet of floor space, the plant will be modern and up-to-date in every respect. It will have a capacity of approximately 2,500 cases daily.

Complete new equipment, including the bottling machinery and other apparatus in the plant, as well as the delivery trucks, all of which were purchased in Atlanta, will be used. At the beginning the company will operate 14 trucks and employ 30 men.

Dr. Pepper beverages are sold both at fountains and in bottles. The syrup manufacturer is represented here by Jack McFarland, calling on soda fountain operators and jobbers. The drink is now being sold at 150 fountains in Atlanta.

Beginning March 1 the company will stage an extensive newspaper advertising campaign in Atlanta and the surrounding territory, the franchise here covering a radius of 50 miles within the city.

The company is now operating in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri, and is entering Georgia, North and South Carolina this year.

MERCHANTS TO HEAR ROBERT STRICKLAND

Great interest has been displayed among the membership of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association over the announcement sent out last week o the effect that Robert Strickland Jr., vice president of the First National bank of Atlanta and one of Atlanta's young business leaders, will deliver the feature address at the annual meeting of the association, which will be held January 29 at Rich's. His address is expected to be the highlight of this annual occasion.

The event will be accompanied by a musical entertainment, interspersed with some general singing. Following the dinner retiring President Sinclair Jacobs will deliver a brief address touching on some phases of the association's work during the past year.

At this meeting 1931 officers of the association will be elected. John C. Sage is chairman of the nominating committee and will render his report at this time.

The president's annual report will touch on some of the following activities of the association: Legislative work; problem of street beggars; participation in matters of civic betterment; traffic, parking and safety regulations; publicly secured; protective services; registering and voting; destructive and unfair methods of competition; membership and finances; information bureau; affiliated bodies and trade lines; board and membership meetings held and various other items in which the association participates.

Florida's 67 counties used 18,623,470 gallons of gasoline, 2,381,927 gallons of kerosene and 7,262 gallons of signal oil during November.

DEAN DE OVIES TO ADDRESS CLUB

At the regular study course program Wednesday morning, January 21, in Wesley Memorial auditorium, the Atlanta Music Club will present Dean Raimundo De Ovies, dean of St. Philip's cathedral, in an address to the club, and Dr. Ben Potter, well-known organist, in two organ solos. Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend, chairman of the study course, arranged the program, and the members of the Music Club are anticipating the opportunity of hearing such an outstanding speaker and Dr. Potter.

Mrs. Walter H. Bedard, president of the Music Club, Saturday urged all club members to be present promptly at 10:30, at which time will be held an important business meeting.

REBEKAHS INSTALL AT FORT M'PHERSON

Patriotic Rebekah Lodge No. 8, Fort McPherson, installed the following officers Thursday evening:

PARKER PEN COMPANY HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

George S. Parker, president of the Parker Pen Company, on his departure from San Francisco recently for the orient, accompanied by Mrs. Parker, announced that his company came through 1930 in a successful fashion, supporting sales with advertising.

Business for the company in 1930 was such that all employes were given a cash bonus, Mr. Parker explained. Mr. and Mrs. Parker will visit China, the Philippines, Java and other places in the far east, returning to the United States about May 1.

TECH BAND PLANS CONCERT FRIDAY

The Georgia Tech band of 120 members, with 75 in the concert division, will give a concert in the Egyptian room of Shrine mosque Friday night under the direction of A. J. Garing, leader of the organization.

The concert will be sponsored by the uniformed organizations of Yaarab Temple, and Yaarab band, of which Mr. Garing is a member, will act as a reception committee.

The Egyptian room will seat 1,500 persons, and Nobles of Yaarab Temple, with their families and friends, are invited to be present. Special tickets have been issued to members of Georgia Tech faculty, while Nobles and their parties will be admitted on presentation of the Shrine card.

IMPEACHED GOVERNOR CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. Jan. 17. (AP)—J. C. (Jack) Walton, former Oklahoma City mayor and impeached governor, announced today he will be a candidate for mayor in the spring election.

Walton became mayor here in 1919, serving until he was elected governor in 1922. He was impeached and ousted from the executive office in October, 1923.

Pratt Motor Co. To Open Monday In New Building

Pratt Motor Company, authorized Ford dealer, will open Monday in the modern and up-to-date plant recently completed at 361 Moreland avenue, near Little Five Points. The company, which has been operating since last August, was formerly located at 1121 Euclid avenue, and has established a growing and successful business in that section.

PRESTON P. PRATT.

The company is under the management and direction of Preston P. Pratt, who has had a vast amount of experience with Ford products, having been connected with the Ford Motor Company branch here for 16 years, from 1915 until the time he established his own agency.

The new plant is considered one of the most complete and most modern dealer plants in the south, emphasizing the super-service idea. The plant will feature washing and lubricating service, being equipped to do this work thoroughly and completely.

Providing, 10,000 square feet of floor space, the plant is 100 feet square. Eighty-three per cent of the space is devoted to service, and the balance to showroom, stockroom and office. The building was constructed by W. S. Loftis, contractor, who also owns the property.

Mr. Pratt started with the Ford Motor Company branch in Atlanta when he left college in 1915, having attended the University of Florida. He started as a helper in the receiving department and before he had been there a year had been promoted to the head of the service department. From this position he was promoted successively to assistant cashier, cashier, chief clerk in the accounting department, then to the sales department, after which he was mad eassistant manager of the plant. He resigned last August to organize the Pratt Motor Company.

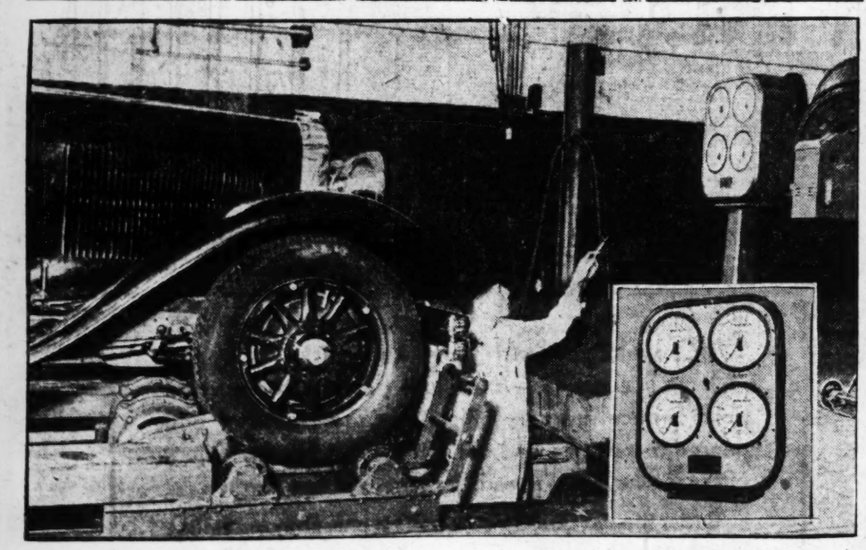

ARCADE TENANTS PLAN FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Directors of the Arcade Co-operative Association will meet Tuesday to make final plans for the annual meeting of the organization, which will be held Thursday at 6:30 p. m., with supper in the Arcade cafeteria.

Miss Margaret Waite is chairman of the committee arranging the program for the meeting and promises an evening of unusual interest to the members. The annual meeting will be featured by entertainment, a short address by one of Atlanta's business leaders and election and installation of 1931 officers.

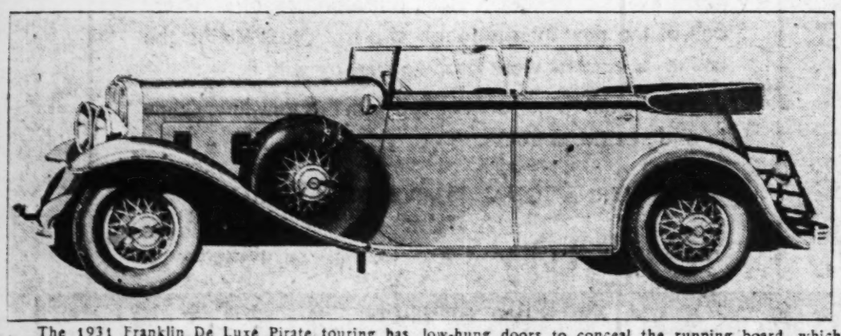

All of the tenants of the Peachtree Arcade building are being invited to attend the meeting and it is expected that at least 100 will be present.

All Four Brakes Absolutely the Same

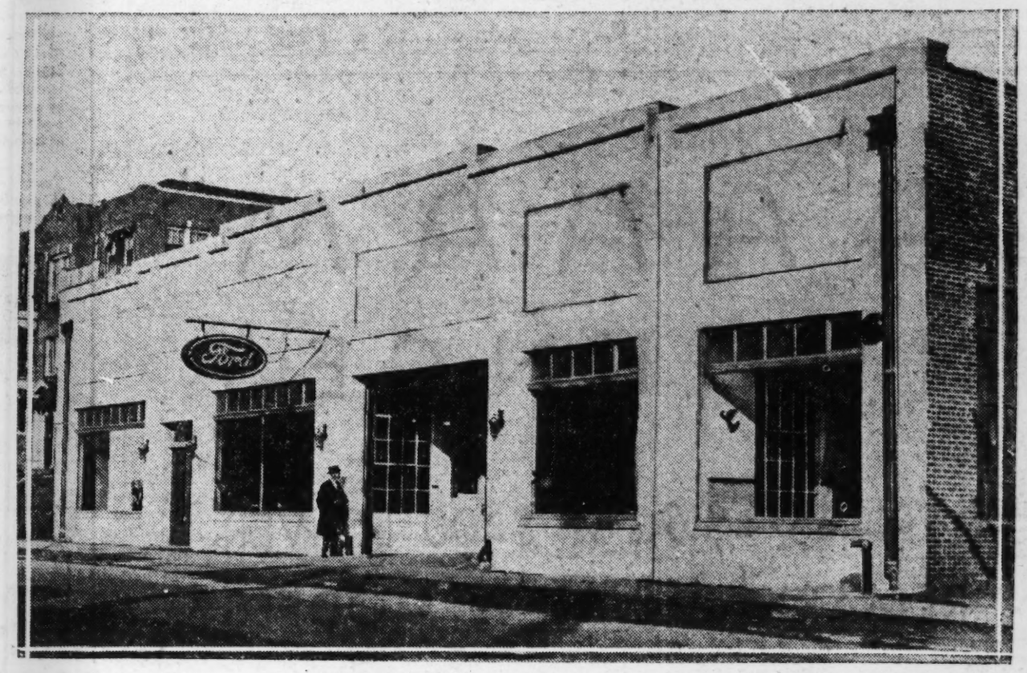

This extensive brake-testing layout is a feature of the Sinclair Merry-Go-Round located at Ponce de Leon avenue and Juniper street. It is the only machine of its kind in Atlanta and tells the operator at a glance the relative strength of each individual brake. This department is run by F. W. Reader, who has studied brake work for the past four years and is considered an expert in every respect by officials of many leading brake-lining companies. He is a graduate of the Bendix Brake school and is qualified to act on any brake ills. The testing service is free and motorists are invited by the Merry-Go-Round to drive by and see if their cars are safe.

Franklin's Air-Cooled De Luxe Pirate Touring

The 1931 Franklin De Luxe Pirate touring has low-hung doors to conceal the running board, which gives it a distinctive custom appearance. Two spare wheels are carried in the forward fenders. This car is, powered by the new Franklin air-cooled, airplane-type power plant, developing 100 horsepower. This car is on display all this week in the showrooms of the Franklin Motor Car Company, 481 West Peachtree, N. W.

Headquarters

Ford

Sales and Service

The Pratt Motor Company takes pleasure in announcing its removal to new and larger quarters.

This removal is made in the interest of the growing number of Ford owners in this territory, and is in keeping with the Ford policy of rendering an increasing measure of service to every purchaser of a Ford car.

This policy is founded on the belief that a sale does not complete the transaction between the Ford Motor Company and the buyer but establishes a new obligation on us to see that the car gives good service. And in fulfilling this obligation to the letter we present larger and more complete facilities in our new establishment.

Our mechanics have been thoroughly trained in schools conducted by the Ford Motor Company, and they use tools and machinery made especially for servicing the Ford car.

The well-ordered cleanliness of the display room and shop and the consistent courtesy of all attendants will be especially appreciated by the woman driver.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN PIEDMONT PARK

Supposed Heart Attack Victim Is Believed To Be Mrs. Blythe.

The body of a woman identified by police as Mrs. E. Pearl Blythe, about 55 or 60 years of age, was discovered on the steps near the tennis courts of Piedmont park late Saturday afternoon.

Wynn Upchurch, of 16 Inman circle, walking through the park, noticed the position of the woman sitting on the steps and upon investigation found that she was dead. Death apparently had occurred several hours earlier.

Officers investigating found cards in the woman's purse, among which was one with the name Mrs. E. Pearl Blythe, and on the back of which had been scrawled in pencil:

"In case of accident notify Mrs. B. F. Jones, 741 Ponce de Leon court." It also bore the apartment and telephone numbers.

Police said there was no indication of suicide and expressed the belief that a heart attack had caused death. The body was removed to Blanchard Brothers, Inc., and it was said an inquest will be held by the coroner today.

40,000 Atlantans Visit Ford Show

More than 40,000 people visited the Ford Products show held last week at 452 Peachtree street, N. E., according to figures announced Saturday night by J. H. Wood Jr., manager of the Ford Motor Company's Atlanta branch.

Mr. Wood says that this is believed to be a record for this section of the country and points to it as an indication of the popularity of Ford products.

F. A. Seiberling Visits Atlanta Dealers

F. A. Seiberling and his two sons were visitors to Atlanta the past week, stopping here to conduct a one-day sales conference that was attended by over a hundred Seiberling dealers from Georgia, Florida and Alabama. The Atlanta dealers are shown with the Seiberlings. They are: Front row, left to right, W. P. Melton, Atlanta branch manager; E. R. Lambert, F. A. BROWNE LECTURE SUBJECT CHOSEN

"Can We Do Without Religion?" a question very widely debated at present, will be Dr. Lewis Browne's subject when he lectures here on January 27 at the Atlanta Woman's Club. This distinguished author and ex-rabbi will have ample opportunity in discussing this topic to either affirm or deny.

That this subject is of great popular interest was evidenced by the crowds that were turned away from Mecca temple, New York city, in spite of the rain, when the question was debated by Rabbi Nathan Krass and Clarence Darrow recently.

Dr. Lewis Browne, who, before devoting his entire time to travel and writing, was in the rabbinate, is particularly fitted to master this subject. Not yet in his thirties, he has already become the widest read authority in this country on the abstruse and difficult subject of comparative religion.

Dr. Browne comes to Atlanta under the auspices of the Atlanta unit of Junior Hadassah, a group of young Jewish women who are working hand-in-hand with the Zionists in the rehabilitation of Palestine as a Jewish homeland. Each year this organization sponsors some lecture program. They have brought such men as Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Dr. Will Durant to Atlanta.

Tickets for the Browne lecture may be obtained from any member of Junior Hadassah or at Rich's department store. Miss Lillian Esserman is chairman of ticket selling.

HUBERT SLAYING CASE TO TRIAL WEDNESDAY

The cases of Tom Berryman, Aubrey Sikes, W. M. Harmon, J. G. Garvin and R. H. Evans, who are charged with murder of Dennis Hubert, negro college student, have been set for Wednesday in Judge Virlyn B. Moore's division of superior court. Conviction of T. L. Martin, a co-defendant, on a voluntary manslaughter charge, was affirmed last week by the court of appeals.

BUREAU TO BRING NEW RESIDENTS

More than 125 families will come to Atlanta from Louisville and Richmond within a few weeks if the efforts of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to consolidate railroad tariff bureaus here are successful, it was pointed out Saturday by Horace Russell, president of the chamber.

For some time the railroads entering Atlanta have discussed the advisability of consolidating in Atlanta the tariff bureaus of the Southern Freight Association, which has had its headquarters here for 25 years. Up to this time the tariff bureaus have had branches in Louisville and Richmond, and it is now proposed to consolidate these offices in Atlanta and bring their officials and employes here.

The step was virtually decided upon, it is stated, but both Richmond and Louisville entered vigorous protest. The Southern Freight Association therefore decided to hold a hearing on the matter in St. Augustine, Fla., next Tuesday, when all the cities will set forth their claims.

Atlanta will be represented at this hearing by Mayor James L. Key, Ivan Allen, chairman, and Frank Shaw, secretary, of the industrial bureau of the Chamber of Commerce; Benjamin S. Barker, executive vice president of the chamber, and W. H. Barnwell, of the Georgia Power Company. They will leave Monday to attend the hearing.

PRINCETON'S ALUMNI MEETS TUESDAY NIGHT

Sons of Old Nassau in Atlanta and vicinity will gather at the Atlanta Athletic Club Tuesday night for the annual meeting of the Princeton Alumni Association of Georgia, at which Dr. Robert G. Albion, associate professor of history at Princeton and representative of the graduate council, will be guest of honor. Edwin K. Large, Atlanta postmaster, who is vice president of the alumni association, will preside.

One of the important matters before the meeting will be the election of officers. A successor to Hugh Foster, president, who recently was transferred from the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank to the Jacksonville branch, and other officers will be chosen.

HUPMOBILE ANNOUNCES ITS NEW Free-Wheeling DRIVE

AS STANDARD EQUIPMENT ON ALL OF ITS NEW SIXES AND EIGHTS

HUPMOBILE foresees that within a few years, the Free-Wheeling principle will be as standard in motor cars as the electric starter and four-wheel brakes.

For Hupmobile sincerely believes that Free-Wheeling is the most important motor car improvement in a generation.

Today Hupmobile brings you perfected Free-Wheeling. Not as an attachment . . . but as an in-built principle in all of its new models.

Free-Wheeling . . . synchronized with Hupmobile's traditional mechanical excellence. Free-Wheeling . . . proved by a year and a half of grueling road and factory tests. Free-Wheeling . . . at its best.

Your first ride in a Free-Wheeling Hupmobile will give you a never-to-be-forgotten sensation.

It's the nearest thing to flying on wheels. Yet the car is always in gear and fully controlled . . . with the braking power of the motor at your instant command.

But that is only the half of it. You approach a stop-light. With a simple flick of the hand, you shift from high gear to second and back again . . . without touching the clutch.

Hupmobile Free-Wheeling makes driving unbelievably simple. It ends clutch drudgery . . . for you rarely have to use the clutch, excepting to start or back up. It does away with "traffic tension," gear-shift nerves and leg-fatigue.

Hupmobile Free-Wheeling saves gas and oil. Saves tires. Saves upkeep. Saves the motor. But more important still, it saves you. For it takes the stress and strain out of motoring.

The New International Heavy-Duty Line

(Rated Capacities from 2½ tons up)

THE new International Heavy-Duty Trucks have good looks in every line—stamina in every part—unrivaled performance in every mile. They are powered and geared to pull into and out of anything the day's work offers. All have five speeds forward and two reverse.

Under the new hood you'll find an unusually accessible heavy-duty engine, thoroughly in keeping with the truck's powerful appearance. Vibrationless, it develops great power at low engine speed with surprising fuel economy. Reserve strength to match the engine's ample power has been built into every chassis member, into the clutch, transmission, drive shaft, rear axle assembly—and into the truck as a whole. In all its parts and features, every one of the new Internationals is a truck to shoulder the country's hardest work and walk away with it.

You'll want to get acquainted with this new line. Come in and see these trucks.

BRIEF FACTS

Engine: Valve-in-head; overhead camshaft; powerful, simple, and unusually accessible.

Clutch: Single plate with built-in vibration damper.

Transmission: 5 speeds forward, 2 reverse.

Final Drive: Double reduction herringbone gear type.

Springs: Semi-elliptic, front and rear. Auxiliary rear springs, quarter elliptic.

Brakes: 4-wheel mechanical.

Besides the Heavy-Duty line, there are International Speed Trucks, ¾-ton to 3-ton.

CENTRAL OPENS CAFETERIA SOON

Opening of the cafeteria at Central night school at an early date, probably Monday, January 19, has been promised by those in charge.

It is planned to serve good, hot, nourishing food to the students at very nominal prices. It is thought that the cafeteria will prove of great advantage in both price and convenience to those connected with the school.

A program, in which the school orchestra is to take part, to celebrate the opening is planned.

The next debate between the Jeffs and the Gradys, the literary societies of the school, at which the subject "Resolved, that the United States should abolish all debts incurred by the allies during the World War" will be discussed, is scheduled for Thursday, January 22. A Jeff team composed of John T. Clark, Jr., Edgar Sheridan and Frances Wilson is to argue the affirmative side. LeRoy Seignious, Oneal Johnson and Herbert White are to represent the Gradys.

Miss Nell Tomlin is to declaim for the Gradys and will have as her opponent Miss Evelyn Ray, of the Jeffs.

A class in commercial law, under the supervision of D. P. Bradbury, has just begun and anyone who desires to take this subject should enroll at once.

TENTH CHILDREN MAKE IMAGINARY VISIT TO ESKIMO

The pupils of Tenth Street school had a big Christmas. They tried, everyone, to make other folks, too, have a good Christmas. Now that they are in school they are working harder than ever.

Low 5-2 has a new athletic event which is the 60-yard dash. Bill Anderson, of Low 5-2, brought a deer skin to school for nature study.

Low 5-1 is getting up an interesting pageant called "Life in Colonial Days."

The children of High 4 deeply regret that their teacher, Miss Colins, has had an automobile accident. They surely miss her, but are grateful for a good supply teacher, Mrs. Suttles.

Low 4-1 boys and girls have made some chariots in connection with their Greek and Roman history study.

Low 2-2 has gone on an imaginary trip to see Kattuck, an Eskimo boy. While at the pole they are making many interesting things to bring back home with them.

High 1 is reading a circus story. They are making pretty posters to illustrate what they have read.

Low 1-1 had a grand Christmas and have settled down to hard study so that they may be promoted to High 1.

After a big Christmas high kindergarten hopes to go "over the top" to the first grade, February 1.

Low kindergarten has ten children more that are perfect in weight than they had in October.

ENGLISH AVENUE PUPILS DISCUSS LIFE IN INDIA

Low 6-1 was in charge of a very interesting assembly on January 12. They discussed life as it is today in India. They used slides to illustrate their information. These slides were: "Sacred Cows," "Inflated Bullock Skins Used for Ferry-boats," "Taj Mahal," "Pilgrims Bathing in Sacred Ganges," "Elephants on Parade," and "Manufacturing Woolen Shawls." Besides these slides, original drawings and maps were used. This assembly was very instructive as well as entertaining.

The school is very proud of the children who won writing certificates of excellence:

High 6-1—Frances McKee, Hazel Nash, Frances Cole, Reba Hollis, Edna Hampton and Pat Denman.

High 6-2—Ellen McKinney, Hilda Sprouse, Hazel Vandervi and Prince Harget.

Low 6-1—Vera Whitaker, Olive Booth, Ruby Hallman, Winifred Free, Ozella Wadsworth and Evelyn Warnock.

Low 6-2—J. E. Bowden and Alta Harper.

These children were awarded certificates of merit:

High 6-1—Lizzie Yancy, Vernon Smith, Verta Stansell, Dorothy Head and Evelyn Sayer.

High 6-2—Rose Schuler, Mellie Nations, Mary New, Dorsy Mahaffy, Blanche Davis and Elsie Pittman.

Low 6-1—Dorothy Smith, Juanita Pyland and Elaine White.

Low 6-2—Margaret Harris, Carl Brown, Cora Martin, Bernice Wagner and Nina Gravely.

We are as busy as bees getting our class newspapers ready. We are going to send these to Miss Pollard and she will send the best to Michigan. Each grade is anxious, of course, to have their paper selected.

Jewel Chapman has just received an interesting letter from Virginia Page, Fitzgerald school, Detroit, Mich.

FRANCES McKEE.

INMAN RECEIVES BOOK EXPLAINING ROCKY MT. PARK

Low 1 are very happy to have Lila Russ, from Forrest Avenue school.

High 2-1 are enjoying a book which was presented to them by the P.-T. A. The name of it is "The Missing Katchina." It is a story of the Pueblo Indians.

Low 4-3 were sorry to lose Frank Wickersham last week. He was the president of their class. The class is studying about the Greeks now, and have made some Greek vases.

Low 5-1 have read, as a class, over 400 books since school started in September. They are trying for 100 per cent in the reading contest which requires each child to read five accredited books during a semester.

High 5 was delighted to receive a booklet explaining in detail about the Rocky Mountain National park, in answer to a letter written by the class to Estes Park, Colorado.

Low 6-1 was very sorry to lose Carolyn Wickersham, who returned to Tenth Street school.

FAITH CLASS HAS STUDENTS OBTAIN WRITING AWARDS

High kindergarten is very happy because they have 100 per cent in perfect teeth.

High 6 is very proud that 21 out of 30 won penmanship certificates.

Superintendent's Message

January 18, 1931.

My dear Boys and Girls:

Much is being said in our papers with reference to the budget for our schools and for school expenditures. I feel that you are more interested in education in Atlanta than possibly anyone in the entire city, with the exception of the teachers and educators themselves. I also feel that your parents are interested in the great cause of education. I wish you boys and girls to know that in the city of Atlanta a dollar is going further in education than any city in this nation. Many places in the United States where the program of education is just about the same that it is in the city of Atlanta it is costing from $100.00 to $190.00 per child, while we are giving you the same education in the city of Atlanta at an expense of about $60.00 per child.

I am writing this letter at the beginning of the new year hoping and praying that each boy and each girl will help the teachers and school administrators to be just as economical as we can with everything that pertains to our schools. We need your help in saving the chalk, in saving the lights, in being careful and thoughtful of your floor in order that it may not cost us so much to clean up the building. We need your assistance in taking care of our equipment and in seeing that the books are neatly kept. The children of Atlanta would save us every year possibly twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars if they would be careful with the books which we are supplying to them. See that no leaves are torn, that the books are not thrown about as you go home or as you come back to school. Will you not be careful to see that every item of equipment is taken care of—our globes, our charts, our books, the utensils with which we work in the laboratories, and in the shops and in the home economics department. If these are all carefully handled and skillfully used so that they will last longer we shall be indebted to you and you will be helping to educate the people of this great city.

It may be interesting for you to know that the entire income of the United States of America amounts to about eighty-nine billions of dollars and that of this we spend twelve billion five hundred million on automobiles, and spend six billion five hundred million on luxuries, and that we only spend two billion five hundred million on education. We spend six times as much on automobiles as we do on education and over three times as much upon luxuries. If we could come to see that education is of more value and take care of the things in our schools and teach our parents just what education means I am sure you would help us build bigger and better schools in Atlanta.

Always your friend,

WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

HOME PARK BOYS MAKE EXCELLENT CHINNING RECORD

We all returned to school after a nice holiday.

Several members of our faculty enjoyed trips to Florida. They were Miss Taylor, Miss Foster, Miss Campbell, Mrs. Symmers.

High 6 is very busy getting ready for junior high. We are all working hard to be promoted so that our class will be 100 per cent.

Low 6 were very proud of the boys for their records in chinning. We came fifth in the city.

We are so happy to have Pauline Dall with us. She is from East Lake school.

The hyacinth bulbs of High 5 are growing fine, and we hope to have some flowers soon. We are enjoying our study about the stars.

Low 5 is very glad to have a new pupil, Doris Howard. The boys of this class made the third highest chinning record in the city.

High 4 is proud of the record in chinning. They came sixth among the highest records in the city.

Several children of Low 4 received musical instruments Christmas and are studying to be able to play in the school orchestra.

Low 3 is trying hard to have perfect teeth before promotion time so that they can go to High 3 with 100 per cent.

There are three new pupils in High 2 and they are all working hard to go to Low 3.

Low 2 is trying hard to have 100 per cent teeth before they get promoted.

High 1 enjoyed a birthday party at school. Billy Baldwin was seven years old January 7 and gave the class a birthday cake.

Low 1 are sorry that Don Payne, one of our group, moved away. We will miss him so much.

We have made some New Year cards of which we are proud.

LUKE MADDOX.

CALHOUN PUPILS IN FIRST GRADE IMPROVE READING

We were so busy last week getting back into school harness after the Christmas holidays that we did not have time to write our usual weekly letter. Our entire school has gone back to work with vim and energy.

The little High First-graders are making rapid progress in reading and many excellent readers are to be found in this class. They are working hard to get ready for the second grade in February.

The second grade pupils are enjoying studying about the Eskimos.

The third grade enjoyed a visit from Miss Weegand Monday, the first visit she has paid them since September. They had just read Mr. Sutton's letter about music before she came. This class is still bringing good wholesome lunches for which they are noted.

The Low 4 children have designed and made same beautiful Grecian vases. They are glad to welcome Albert Ericson from Philadelphia.

The High 4 pupils are getting much pleasure out of reading a book, "Grey Fawn," by Albert Payson Terhune.

The Low 5 pupils are interested in their arithmetic race which is speeding on with the first section leading, and the sixth section a close second. Roy Day is still spelling captain.

The pupils of Low 6 have taken up the study of India. They are also studying the animals of this country. Among the most prized possessions of Mary Crichton, of Low 6, is a letter from Albert Payson Terhune, written in reply to one she wrote him during "Good Book Week."

The High 6 pupils are making a very interesting study of poetry. There are seven children in this class who won penmanship certificates. They are: Marjorie McAdams, Virginia Yarbrough, Alma Marshall, Dorothy Gabriel, James Arledge, Jewel Poe and Mary Helen Bratcher.

The sight saving class will be glad to welcome their teacher back to school. She is out on account of illness.

JEWEL POE.
MARY HELEN BRATCHER.

CLASS OF HARRIS PLANS EXERCISES FOR GRADUATION

High 6th grade is studying about our own city, Atlanta. This class is also planning their promotion exercises and preparing to go to junior high in February.

The children of Mrs. Grice's room have completed their rock garden on the sand table, which is very pretty.

The pupils and teachers of J. C. Harris school were sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Black, chairman of the fourth grade and the mother of Thomas and Emily.

A number of children of High 2 and Low 4-I will entertain the mothers at the next P.-T. A. meeting.

Low 6-I was very sorry to lose Chester Beagly, who moved to Cleveland this week, but were glad to welcome Retta Picklesimer from Moreland.

LOUISE LINDSEY.

FAIR AT SPRING SHOWS ARTICLES MADE IN CHINA

Low 6-I are beginning their study about China and expect to enjoy it very much.

Low 6-II had an interesting Chinese fair, showing things that were made in China. Some things were made by children in our room, such as the compass and the water wheel.

Low 5-I is very glad to have Anne Saunders back with us. She has been sick.

Low 5-II and High 4 are studying the modern methods of transportation.

Low 4 are enjoying their study of Greece.

High and Low 3 are enjoying making bills and totaling cost in their number work. They are learning to handle money and learning the cost of articles in this study.

Low 3 and High 2 children have been playing their Bible stories.

The children of Low 2 are making an Eskimo scene on their sand table.

The Low 1 children are very much interested in the farm books they are making.

Many children of the kindergarten have had measles but are beginning to come back.

OTIS GARRARD.

LUCKIE STUDENTS IN SIXTH GRADE DEBATE IN CLASS

The pupils of High 6 had a debate last Friday on the subject, "Resolved, That the radio is of more value to the world than the aeroplane." The affirmative side won. The best speakers were Frank Coley, of the affirmitive side, and Buford Randall, of the negative side.

The pupils of High 5 are making a stage coach.

High 4 are proud of their boys and girls because they come high in the citywide athletics. Each one has a spelling partner. Each one is trying to out-spell the others.

Low 4 has a new pupil from Center Hill, Ga. They are studying about Greece.

High 1 has built a little city. It contains a school, fire department and all the buildings in a real city. They have written a play about this city.

The teachers of all the schools in Atlanta came to Luckie for the manuals. Mrs. Thomas bought a set of the new Encyclopedia Britannica for our school. We are sure these books will help us in our work.

CHARLES WITHERS.

KIRKWOOD CLASS BUILDS GRECIAN HOME FOR STUDY

Low 5-II are happy to see William Hill Gardner, who has just arrived home from Texas.

Low 5-I has been busy planting tulip bulbs for the tulip show.

Low 4-I is making an interesting study of Greece and is building a Greek home with furnishings.

High 2-II has a snow border on their board and is going to put some Eskimos on its sand table. It is happy over the thought of making clocks soon.

The girls of Low 1-I brought their dolls to school last week and enjoyed recess more than ever. The pupils are glad to welcome Ernest Dixon to their class.

Low 4-III has been carving different designs out of soap.

High 6 is interested in making a book of Georgia.

EUGENIA BRIDGES.

KEY SIXTH GRADE CHOOSES LEADERS FOR STUDY GROUPS

Low 6-1 has chosen five group leaders to choose children for their groups. Each group has a different topic to study and are working nicely. The group leaders are as follows: Edith Tesler, Doris Poole, Shirley Bock, Sol Ruden and Lawrence Danneman.

High 5 is sorry Nick Poolos is in the hospital. The children wrote him some letters last week.

High 4 are busy planning for their Viking Fair for this week.

Low and High 3 have an interesting border of animal pictures.

Low 2-2 has made some pretty New Years cards.

Low 1-1 is glad to have J. T. Brumbeloe. They are having a good time drawing toys.

SHIRLEY BOCK,
WESLEY HAYWOOD.

MURPHY JUNIOR HIGH HAS OLD PAPER SALE

Murphy students started back to school from the holidays with a determination to work harder than ever before. Just two more weeks in this semester, but what a lot can be done in them. Our teachers are trying to prevent failures by getting out deficiency slips to the laggards in the scholarship race.

We had a paper sale last Wednesday. Seven-High-4 had the most papers for the seventh grades. Eight-Low-2 had the most for the eighth grades. Each class received a beautifully colored picture which they were proud to have.

The music room that we had before Christmas has been moved to a wing by itself. We can sing lustily now! Tra-la-la!

New portables are being built for the new pupils that will come in February. We will be glad to have the children, for they will add to our population and help us carry out the slogan "Murphy Grows."

GERALDINE CHAMBERS.

GOLDSMITH SEES SCOUT MAKE FIRE WITHOUT MATCH

Our school was overjoyed at the demonstration given by a scoutmaster in Howell Mill road section, Ernest Knight. With the aid of his sticks, bow and moss, he showed the interested children how to start a fire when there were no matches. Everybody had a fine time and learned how our early people made fire.

The following pupils in the sixth grade won the Zaner Bloser writing certificates: Mildred Manley, Bertie Bass, Catherine McAnsh, Georgia Bell Turner, Mary Reed, Catherine Hughes, Louise Hollingsworth and Dixie Floyd. We are very proud of these pupils.

The fifth grade is preparing a debate on the three early sections of colonial life in eastern United States. We have all had much fun in pretending to be colonists living in the three sections and trying to prove that our section is the best.

The fourth grade pupils are learning how to drill as soldiers do. They had much fun in marching with wands in the auditorium during the rainy days.

Surprise! The tulip beds in the yard belonging to the third grade have awakened and the tiny shoots of green are peeping above the ground.

High 1, Low 2 and High 2 invited Mr. Earnest Knight to give a special demonstration on how to build fire. They enjoyed it immensely. The first grade children have a New Year's story which tells how to make every one happy. They are trying to make everyone happy, too.

The kindergarten children are making doll houses out of hat boxes. They are putting pretty paper on the walls and are making furniture, rugs and curtains.

EVELYN KNIGHT,
KATHRYN JOHNSON.

PUPILS OF FAIR IN KINDERGARTEN ENJOY DOLL DAY

Tuesday was doll day in the kindergarten at Fair. All the little girls brought their dolls to school that Santa Claus had left for them at Christmas.

Low 1 is making a pretty farm chart. They have read many interesting things about farm life this quarter.

Low 2 is very interested in what the little Eskimo children wear and eat and the kind of houses they live in.

High 2 has written many interesting papers on the Indians. They have also illustrated their stories with drawings.

Low 3 welcomes Alton McArthur to their class. They hope that Alton will like Fair just as they do.

High 3 has a pretty Holland scene on their sand table. They have a Dutch market also.

All the upper grades are interested in their athletic event, running.

Low 5 is interested in the study of the pine tree. They find that the colonists used this tree for many purposes.

Low 6 is studying about Atlanta. They find many things about their home city to be proud of.

High 5 welcomes two new pupils to their class, Frances McArthur and Carrie Stewart.

FRED NAJOUR.

CREW WELCOMES MANY CHILDREN AS NEW PUPILS

The beginning of this year 1931 brought some new friends to Crew.

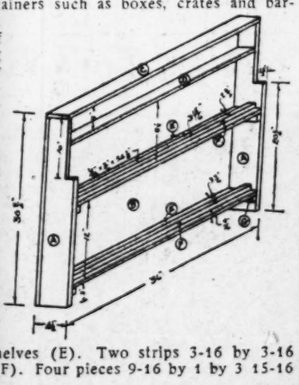

Margaret White and William Kelly came to the sixth grade. Edward Easter and Lucia Williams entered the fifth grade. Lucia came from the big state of Texas and has told interesting things about her life on the Texas plains.

George Richardson, George Ellison, C. T. Buffington and Billie White came to the low fourth. Jessie Lee Jackson, a former pupil, came back to low third. We welcome them all.

JACK COLEMAN.

Discarded Lumber Makes Useful Wall Plate Rack

(This is the seventh of a series of articles prepared by the National Committee on Wood Utilization in its effort to bring about the utilization of second-hand wooden containers such as boxes, crates and barrels, now thrown away or burned. More than 4,000,000,000 feet of lumber is used annually in making these containers. If suitable for construction purposes, this lumber would build more than 400,000 average-size frame dwellings.)

Your mother will appreciate this rack to show off her hand-painted china. Follow directions carefully and secure the lumber specified.

Two pieces 9-16 by 3 15-16 by 30 3-16 inches for ends (A). One piece 9-16 by 30 3-16 by 36 inches for back (B). One piece 9-16 by 2 3-4 by 36 inches for top (C). One piece 9-16 by 2 3-16 by 34 7-8 inches for top shelf (D). Two pieces 9-16 by 3 15-16 by 3 7-8 inches for shelves (E). Two strips 3-16 by 3-16 by 34 7-8 inches for plate cleats (F). Four pieces 9-16 by 1 by 3 15-16 inches for shelf cleats (G).

Shape ends (A) as shown. Nail back (B) to ends (A). Nail top (C) to upper ends of (A). Cleats (G) and top shelf (D) should also be nailed to ends (A). Nail strips (F) to shelves (E), which should then be nailed to cleats (G).

Dimensions and proper locations of homes for 27 different species of birds will be found in the booklet, "You Can Make It for Camp and Cottage," published by the National Committee on Wood Utilization.

A forty-nine page booklet, with illustrations, entitled "You Can Make It for Camp and Cottage," can be obtained at 504 Postoffice Bldg., for 10 cents a copy.

Pupils Present Indian Play

Shown in the picture is the cast of the play, "The Little Indian Weaver," presented by the high and low second grade pupils of Pryor Street school at the Parent-Teacher Association meeting held at the school on Tuesday, January 13. The children wrote the play, composed the dances, and made their own costumes as part of their social activity program.

NORTH FULTON HIGH INCREASES LIBRARY

We are very proud of our increased library facilities due to the work of Mrs. Winship, library chairman of the P.-T. A. A book drive is on for the week. The class bringing the greatest number of books is to be given a party.

As another means for raising money for our library we plan to have "stunt night" the last of February, in the auditorium at E. Rivers school. Each class is to present a stunt, a prize to be given for the best.

On Wednesday William Wallace appeared on the program sponsored by the Junior Music Club of Atlanta. He played a mandolin solo, "The Witch's Dance," accompanied by Mrs. Griffith.

ADELE RUFFNER.

PEEPLES SCHOOL FIRST GRADE HAS SPELLING MATCH

The lower grades of Peeples Street school enjoyed Miss Boylston's visit very much. Some of them are drawing toys.

High kindergarten children are working hard for promotion to the first grade.

Low 1-1 children are drawing toys.

Low 1-2 pupils are having a good time cutting out pictures of toys.

High 1 children had a spelling match and these children spelled down the others: Jewell Jones, Mary Blue, Harriet Smith, Frances Mitchell, Alice White, Myrtice Jackson, Madge Riddle, Beverly King, John Jenkins, Ben Cathy, James Dava, Gene Bennett, Robert Reed, Bobby Phillips, and Dan Jakes.

Low 2-1 children are reading a book called "The Eskimo Twins."

Low 2-2 pupils are studying the life of the Eskimos.

Miss Boylston liked the Low 3 color chart so much that she took it with her.

High 3 pupils enjoyed their airships made by Joe Bryan, Rogers Chipely and Rabun Rutherford.

Low 4 like their new room in the new building.

High 4 children are studying hard so that they will be promoted.

High 5 pupils are finishing a book called "Art and Artist."

Low 6 was awarded thirty-one writing certificates. They are very proud of these pupils.

High 6 was awarded eighteen writing certificates.

DAVIDSON ALUMNI TO CONVENE HERE

Professor Archibald Currie, member of the faculty at Davidson College and a widely known authority on statecraft and legal subjects, will be guest of honor and speaker at the annual dinner-meeting of the Atlanta Davidson College Alumni Association Monday night at the Henry Grady hotel.

He will be joined in Atlanta by Ernest Milton, Davidson alumni secretary, who will arrive Monday afternoon from Birmingham. Mr. Milton will go to Columbia, S. C., from Atlanta to organize an alumni association.

More than 125 graduates and former students of Davidson College are members of the local alumni chapter. A large number of these, together with Davidson alumni from Rome and Mount Berry, Ga., will attend the meeting Monday night. Harllee Branch, Jr., is president of the Atlanta association and William S. Woods is secretary.

Look at What Woodpeckers Do to Posts in California

Sections of a redwood telephone pole that has been exposed to the woodpeckers in California. The pieces of timber were sent here to the West Lumber Company and are on display at the company's branch office at 1491 Piedmont avenue.

What in the dickens is always eatin' on a woodpecker for him to be eatin' a piece of wood all the time?

Has the thought ever struck you? Or have you just ignored the problem without making it any of your personal business—for a change?

Eternally hammering away with their beaks on just anything that happens to be of wood. Could they be in search of the missing link or something of that sort? What's your guess?

The easiest way to overlook one's own ignorance on the subject is to just dismiss the question with, "O, it's just their nature, I reckon."

Well, there's one thing certain, if this is just a little idiosyncrasy of the birds it has been used to a distinct advantage out in the San Joaquin valley (California) and perhaps in other places.

Or it may be that the birds picked up the habit out there and on spreading to other sections of the country couldn't persuade themselves to give it up.

Anyway out in California they have a real reason for pecking and go about their business in a very energetic as well as methodical manner.

There are seasons of the year when these birds find it difficult to satisfy their appetites in California, so they drill these holes to lay up a store of acorns for hard times.

Woodpeckers in other sections of the country go right on drilling their holes, but they don't bother to fill them with acorns. They don't have to do it. They have no trouble finding food at any time of the year in Georgia.

The California woodpeckers also use their heads for something besides pecking. They always pick out soft wood to work on. They show a particular fondness for the bark of oak trees, and drill the holes just large enough so that the acorns may be driven tightly into them.

When the acorn crop is good, the birds are pretty industrious, usually confining their work to certain trees or soft posts like telegraph poles, and then for the rest of the year up to early summer at least, they visit these stores, eating both kernels of the acorns and any worms and bugs found in them.

Sometimes when acorns are pretty scarce these birds will put other material which cannot be used into the holes, such as small dates from the palm trees.

Occasionally the woodpeckers will drill a hole into the side of a house or some other hollow place and pound acorns into this same hole, until a considerable pile lies at the bottom.

They seem to pick out particular trees or pieces of wood that suit their fancy, and have been known to hammer away at flag poles until the flag poles fell down, and they sometimes do a considerable amount of damage to telegraph poles.

In one case a bird pecked into a lead covered wire until the bare, highly charged copper was reached and the bird was electrocuted. Other birds followed in this same way until five or six were picked up below.

The pieces of red wood shown in the picture are sections of a telegraph pole which were sent here to the West Lumber Company. They are on display in the Piedmont office of the company at 1491 Piedmont avenue.

Dr. Newton's Church Gets Portrait Of Early Baptist Leaders Today

The congregation of the Druid Hills Baptist church will formally receive from the children of the late Judge George Hillyer and Mrs. Hillyer a very valuable composite portrait of more than 300 prominent Baptist ministers and laymen in Georgia in the 19th century at 11 o'clock this morning, according to announcement by Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the church.

The presentation of the picture will be made by Alfred C. Newell, prominent Atlanta business and civic leader, and son-in-law of Judge Hillyer. Dr. Newton will accept the picture on behalf of the church. The letter of presentation from the three daughters of Judge and Mrs. Hillyer is signed by Mrs. Alfred C. Newell, Mrs. Bernard Wolff and Mrs. J. D. Cromer. The only son, George Hillyer, of Washington, D. C., was not present to sign the letter.

Judge Hillyer, along with other Baptist leaders, arranged for the collection and arrangement of these portraits into one composite picture in 1878. The picture was engraved and published by The Christian Index, at that time owned and published by the Harrison Company, of Atlanta.

Few Copies of Picture.

Only a few copies of the picture are extant today. One is in the Baptist historical society's rooms in Philadelphia, another in the Georgia Baptist headquarters in Atlanta, another in the library of Mercer University, and perhaps one or two others in private homes.

Included in the picture are the first five presidents of Mercer University; the first six editors of The Christian Index; the first eight presidents of the Georgia Baptist convention; four governors of Georgia; two United States senators; the first president of Shorter College; the first president of Bessie Tift College; two chancellors of the University of Georgia; the first pastors of the original Baptist churches in Savannah, Augusta, Macon, Atlanta, Griffin, Milledgeville, Louisville, and many other notable men.

Jesse Mercer, the founder of Mercer University, is given the central place in the grouping. Clustered immediately about Mercer are such men as Billington M. Sanders, first president of Mercer University; Patrick H. Mell, for many years chancellor of the University of Georgia, and president of the Southern Baptist convention; Adiel Sherwood, foremost leader amongst early Georgia Baptists; William T. Brantly, Henry Holcomb, V. R. Thornton, Humphrey Posey, J. H. T. Kilpatrick, Joshua Callaway, Richard Malcolm Johnston, novelist; John L. Dagg, N. M. Crawford and many others.

"We appreciate this picture beyond words to express," declared Dr. Newton, "both because of the donors and because of the rare value it possesses. It is one of the most important historical documents in Georgia, apart from its particular reference to Baptists. The names of the men whose potraits appear in this picture had a very large part in the building of Georgia in the 19th century.

"I am impressed with the fact that there are almost as many laymen in the group as ministers, which indicates the lively interest of the laity in church affairs during the past century.

Pays Tribute to Judge.

"A amazing thing about this picture is the fact that in that distant day they had developed photography and engraving processes sufficiently to make this intricate composite picture with such excellent detail in every particular. The fine stock on which it is engraved has held the colors in almost perfect condition.

"The picture will have a prominent plac in my study and our young people will make a special study of the personalities with reference to their part in the upbuilding of our state in all its varied life."

Dr. Newton took occasion also to pay high tribute to Judge Hillyer, declaring that he was amongst the leaders of the denomination in the latter half of the century who carried forward the comprehensive program which the earlier leaders had mapped out. At the time of his death, Judge Hillyer was the oldest living alumnus of Mercer University, which distinction he had enjoyed for a decade prior to his death.

VISITOR SPEAKS AT COMMERCIAL

While on leave of absence, Miss Mabel A. Bessey, head of the English department at Bay Ridge High school, Brooklyn, N. Y., visited Commercial High Wednesday, January 14, and spoke to the assembled English teachers. Miss Bessey is editor of "Current Literature," a magazine which encourages the reading of better books.

Kodak, snapshot albums, and framed photograph enlargements are some of the prizes offered Commercial students by Lyle and Gaston, advertisers in the Co-Ed Leader, for the best amateur kodak pictures entered by pupils. The only condition in this contest is that the pictures must be developed by Lyle and Gaston.

In connection with thrift week at Commercial, the thrift issue of the Co-Ed Leader was distributed Thursday, January 15. Cartoons, poems, editorials, and stories echoed the keynote of saving. To the exchange mailing list of the Co-Ed has been added the name of Holt school, Liverpool, England. Journalism students enjoyed the magazine issued by this school. Exchange editors are working to secure more of these foreign papers.

Twelve boys comprising the Commercial High boys' chorus entertained the fifth district Parent-Teacher Association in the ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel on Wednesday, January 7. The chorus is under the direction of Miss Edna Whitmore.

MUSIC OFFICIAL VISITS CLASSES AT COUCH SCHOOL

The midyear promotions are just two weeks off and all of us are looking forward to the change, especially High 6, who will leave for the Junior High.

Miss Ruth F. Weegand, primary supervisor of music, made us a visit Tuesday and reported all grades satisfactory, making especial mention of Miss Few's, Miss Maughon's, Miss Foster's and Mrs. Dollie Johnson's classes.

A number of sixth grade children will receive penmanship certificates from the writing specialists whose system is used in the schools.

The Smith-Hughes art class for adults, under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Clegg, resumed work this week. The class meets every Tuesday and new pupils will always be welcome.

There were several new entrants this week. Couch has a large increase this year.

Now is the time for kinderganten children to get entrance tickets for the new semester. Many have already secured them.

Our lip-reading class, Mrs. E. Rogers Jones, teacher, is progressing rapirly. Children having difficulty in hearing are admitted to this class.

Miss May Walker, efficient supervisor of ungraded classes, was here this week in her official capacity.

We miss our friendly outdoor recesses these rainy days, but the beautiful spring weather is just ahead.

INDUSTRIAL HOME PLEADS FOR HELP

The Georgia Industrial Home, at Macon, established for the benefit of dependent children, faces the possibility of closing its doors unless funds to pay accumulated bills of several months and workers' salaries for the current month are not forthcoming within a few days, it was pointed out in a letter Saturday to Atlanta friends of the institution from J. A. Harris, general manager of the home.

Many contributions were made at Thanksgiving and at Christmas, but because a Macon bank in which this money was deposited, has closed its doors, the institution is without funds,

RICHMOND SEEKS ROAD SETTLEMENT

Adjustment of financial relations between Richmond county and the state highway board will be the object of a visit to Atlanta of two officials of the Richmond county commission.

Auditor Victor Markwalter and John C. Fraser, chairman of the road and bridges committee, will come to Atlanta this week to seek adjustment on items of $16,000 the commission has been advised is owed to the county.

BEAVERS AVOIDS SERIOUS CRASH

Adroit handling of his automobile saved Chief of Police James L. Beavers from the possibility of a serious accident Saturday afternoon, and the net result was one flat tire.

The chief was hurrying to catch a funeral procession entering Greenwood cemetery and had just turned off of Cascade avenue. The curve there, according to Chief Beavers is banked improperly, and he was faced with the possibility of going over into a deep ditch or climbing the cement curb. He chose the latter—result—one flat tire.

COST ACCOUNTANTS WILL CONVENE TUESDAY

The National Association of Cost Accountants will hold its monthly meeting at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the Pompeian ballroom of the Biltmore hotel, with Paul M. Millians, first vice president of the association and treasurer of the Ernest L. Rhodes Company, speaking on the subject, "The New Technique in Selling and Administrative Cost Accounting." A special feature of the program will be interpretations of Oriental dances by Miss Mary Agnes Crawford, Atlanta dancer. Arrangements are in charge of C. H. Rehagen.

SPECIAL PROGRAM WILL HONOR LEE

General Robert E. Lee will be honored on the eve of his birthday in a special program to be presented over WJZ tonight at 6 o'clock.

The program will portray General Lee at the outbreak of the Civil War, at a time when he was torn between loyalty to the army he had served for 30 years and duty to his native state. The episode reaches a climax when General Lee's sense of honor dictates his refusal of supreme command of the Union forces, and he casts his lot with the south.

Actors who will participate in the presentation will be William Corbett, Ann Sutherland, Linda Watkins, Louis Mason and John Milton. The program will be presented over a nation-wide network.

SUMMERALL ACCEPTS CITADEL PRESIDENCY

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Major-General Charles P. Summerall's dream of spending the rest of his life quietly in a Eustis, Fla., second lieutenant's cottage, announced when he retired recently as chief of staff of the United States army, today gave way to the prospect of his return to a military environment.

Officials of The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina, here announced late today that the veteran soldier had accepted the presidency of that institution, and would take up his new duties at the beginning of the next college year, September 12.

As president of The Citadel, which calls itself the "West Point of the South" because of the emphasis upon military instruction, General Summerall will occupy quarters on the campus, a shaded 200-acre tract of grass land on the Ashley river, just north of this historic city.

At the state's military college, he will have in his charge the training of 700 cadets, whose college careers are patterned as closely after those of West Point students as circumstances will permit. A staff of four regular army officers has been attached to the faculty of the institution since the World War.

His new position will bring the army officers back to the scenes of his own school days. His first military training was obtained as a cadet at Porter Military Academy here, from which he was graduated. He later won his appointment to West Point.

K. OF C. LAUNCH RELIEF PROGRAM

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 17. (AP)—An international program of unemployment relief was launched here today by the supreme board of directors of the Knights of Columbus, to act in co-operation with national, state and community agencies.

The project, which will extend through the United States, its possessions and Canada, will include the "creation of work where possible and calls for every council of the Knights of Columbus to act as a free employment agency to locate jobs for the unemployed."

Many councils already have started this work, William J. McGinley, supreme secretary, announced.

McGinley told of the expenditure of several thousand dollars of the order's funds for food in parts of Kentucky and other southern states. The directors staunchly indorsed the $10,000,000 Red Cross campaign.

REALTORS OPPOSE WOOD'S JOBLESS PLAN

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 17. (AP)—The National Association of Real Estate Boards today telegraphed Chairman Arthur N. Woods, of President Hoover's unemployment committee in Washington that it would cooperate in ameliorating the unemployment situation by stimulating home ownership and home building, but that "a blanket recommendation to modernize old homes, however, is, in our opinion, unsound."

Characterizing recurring periods of unemployment as a "disease of society," and not an "inevitable blight," Chairman Wood said the home modernization movement "which uses up existing stocks of commodities and also makes many jobs available," has received the hearty indorsement of the unemployment committee.

COLONEL'S SON SHOT BY CAPITAL POLICE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Hospital officials today predicted the recovery of Charles M. Wesson from a bullet wound inflicted by a Washington policeman after Wesson had fired a pistol at random on a wild dash through the city.

Wesson is 23 years old and the son of Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Wesson.

A taxicab driver, John R. Jensen, told police Wesson engaged him late last night and while in his cab fired two shots through the windshield and told him to "step on it."

He complied.

A little later, Jensen, said, Wesson fired three shots at electric lights and these attracted the police. Jensen was told to get away from the pursuing officers. Rounding a corner, he deliberately ran his cab into a tree.

Detective M. F. Mahaney said Wesson alighted with a pistol in his hand, raising it as if to shoot. Mahaney fired and the shot hit Wesson just below the heart.

Marrying for Money Is Swindle, Says Court

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 17. (AP)—A Budapest court today characterized as "swindling" the action of a young man who married a rich girl to get enough money to pay his debts.

The young man, Andor Festetich, and his parents, the Count and Countess Festetich, were ordered to repay large sums of money to the girl's father, Herr Kenez, who advanced it to young Festetich after the marriage.

It was charged the count and countess withheld from Herr Kenez and his daughter the fact that young Festetich was unable to contract a legal marriage, having been declared a minor and placed under the tutelage of the court as a spendthrift unable to control his own finances.

921 MILLION BUILDING IN PAST YEAR

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 17.—(AP) Construction, engineering and building contracts awarded last year in 16 southern states had an aggregate valuation of $921,715,000, a summary compiled from reports in the Daily Construction Bulletin and the Manufacturers Record, published here, revealed today.

This was said to be the highest amount on record, exceeding southern construction contracts awarded in 1929 by $141,000,000, and surpassing by $30,000,000 the previous peak, reached in 1926.

Only those projects were included for which actual figures were available as to the cost. No effort was made to estimate the contract prices of hundreds of varied engineering projects or structures on which no cost figures were announced.

Projects under $10,000 each were not reported. Inclusion of these would bring the contract-award total in the south to more than $1,000,000,000, it was estimated.

Woman Sought.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Jan. 17.—(AP) Sebastian county officers left here today for Huntington, Ark., to search for a woman believed to know Earl Quinn, former convict sought as the slayer of the Griffith sisters near Tonkawa, Okla., several weeks ago, with a view to bringing her here to try to identify a man in custody as Quinn. Meanwhile police awaited finger prints of Quinn from the Missouri penitentiary.

Around the Samovar Characters

Garbed in their native Russian dress, these vocal and instrumental soloists will participate in the gala celebration which will mark the second radio anniversary of "Around the Samovar" through WABC and the Columbia network tonight at 8 o'clock over WGST. Left to right they are Valia Valentinova, contralto; Eli Spivak, baritone; Eliena Kazanova, violinist, and Peter Biljo, director of the balalaika orchestra.

RADIO CONDITIONS IMPROVE IN SOUTH

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(Special.) "Conditions generally in the south, particularly in such states as North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, indicate rapid strides being made toward business recovery, to such extent, in fact, that I expect the volume of radio business transacted in this area to reach normalcy again by the beginning of the next wholesale buying season beginning about August 1."

The foregoing is the opinion expressed by P. M. Jefferys, district sales manager at Atlanta for E. T. Cunningham, Inc., radio tube company, at the concluding convention session of his organization here. The volume of Christmas radio business in territory is reported by Mr. Jefferys to have exceeded early expectations, while in addition wholesale purchases of equipment in this line have taken a decided upturn during the first two weeks of the new year.

Mr. Jefferys notes conditions in Florida indicating a very rapid return to normalcy throughout that area, with that state bidding fair to assume first place in radio set and accessory purchases in southeastern territory during the current year.

DR. KLEIN TO SPEAK OF NEW SOUTHWEST

"A New Commercial Picture of the Pacific Southwest" will be the subject of a radio talk to be broadcast tonight by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, over station WGST and a coast-to-coast hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting system. Dr. Klein will speak from 7 to 7:15 o'clock.

The department of commerce has recently finished a comprehensive survey of the business activities in the southwestern states, covering every form of industry, trade and transportation. Dr. Klein will discuss some of the most vital facts that have been brought out—emphasizing, also, many of the colorful and picturesque aspects of the region's commercial development. He will show the intimate relationship exsiting between business in the Pacific southwest and the well-being of the people in the remainder of the country.

Texas Has No Law Against Kidnaping

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Texas learned today it does not have a law against kidnaping, except as applying to a person under 17 years of age or for the purpose of taking the victim out of the state.

Judge George E. Hosey, of Fort Worth, pointed out the absence of a statute making kidnaping such as in the case of Robert Cerf, 24-year-old Corsicana banker's son, held for $15,000 ransom recently, a clear-cut punishable offense.

Law books at the state capitol were scanned in vain in an effort to contradict Judge Hosey and legislators expressed the opinion that a statutory provision was missing, either due to an oversight or because kidnaping was yet in its infancy in this state.

Representative Alfred Persch, of Fredericksburg, had begun preparation of a bill to make kidnaping punishable by death, having been moved by the Cerf incident.

MOVE TO EXPEDITE SHOALS BILL MADE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A move to expedite action on the Muscle Shoals controversy was made today by Minority Leader Garner in a resolution to authorize Speaker Longworth to appoint new house conferees.

The measure was referred to the rules committee. It was offered because of the deadlock between the house and senate conferees on the Norris proposal for government operation of the war-time nitrate project.

Garner said he would demand a hearing at an early date.

The present house conferees are Representatives Ransley, of Pennsylvania; Reece, of Tennessee, and Wurzbach, of Texas, republicans, and Quin, of Mississippi, and Fisher, of Tennessee, democrats. The house and senate measures for private and government operation, respectively, have been in controversy since last spring.

The house conferees have expressed the view that a solution of the problem at this session would not be found.

Expenses of the extraordinary session, which several members felt it important to specify in the call, have passed the $30,000 mark, including the mileage pay to members, and are expected to run for the rest of the session at a rate in excess of $2,500 per day.

Nye Body Seeks Right To Open Ballot Box

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A resolution to give the senate campaign funds committee authority to seize and examine ballot boxes was introduced today by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska.

The Nye committee has considered impounding the ballot boxes in Alabama in connection with charges by Senator Heflin that he was "counted out" last November in his race as an independent against Senator-elect Bankhead.

The conclusion was reached, however, that the committee was powerless. Norris' resolution specified no state, but it was regarded as opening the way to seizure of the Alabama ballot boxes if this were found advisable.

WILL HAVE NO EFFECT ON DESTROYED BALLOTS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 17.—Judge D. W. Crosland, of Montgomery probate court, tonight said the Norris resolution authorizing the senate elections committee to seize the ballots in any state would not be effective in Alabama since under the state law the ballots must be destroyed after 30 days. The law requires that after the canvassing committee has completed its work the ballots shall be destroyed in 30 days if no contest is filed.

ALABAMA TO DROP UNDERCOVER MEN

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Thomas E. Knight, attorney-general-elect, who takes office next Tuesday, has announced he will discontinue employment of a staff of special investigators now in the service of the attorney-general's department.

In his announcement the attorney-general-elect said that the action would be in keeping with his campaign pledge to abolish the "under-cover" system.

He said elimination of the investigators, numbering 12 to 15, would save the state approximately $60,000 annually.

Murder Verdict.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—John Skipper, Fernandina night policeman, was found guilty of murder in the first degree here today in his trial for shooting J. F. Surrency, chief of police there.

HOUSE WETS PREPARE FOR BATTLE TUESDAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Members of the house wet bloc launched a preliminary attack today upon the prohibition bureau's request for 500 new dry agents and additional funds of approximately $2,500,000.

The skirmish was believed by some house members to be the forerunner of a historic prohibition storm.

The law enforcement commission, meanwhile, marked time in the delivery of its controversy-laden prohibition report. All hope for its submission to President Hoover before Monday was abandoned as the commission's headquarters closed early in the afternoon. Only two members remained in the capital.

The wet and dry conflict was precipitated by Representative Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, leader of the unofficial anti-prohibition group. He attacked the practice of wire tapping and accused the prohibition bureau of "operating speakeasies to entrap police."

He was joined by Representatives Black and Mead, both New York democrats. Black urged that final action on the proposed prohibition appropriation be postponed until congress had received from the Wickersham commission its recommendations on the prohibition problem.

Mead contended instead that further consideration be given pending measures for the relief of the unemployed, asserting "we have millions for prohibition, but we have no money whatever" for some needed labor surveys.

Word also came today from within the anti-prohibition ranks that a carefully laid plan has been agreed upon for attacking the proposed prohibition appropriation contained in the justice department supply bill, next week. It was described as the first united plan ever worked out between the independent wets and the recognized wet bloc.

As agreed upon, the preliminary skirmishes were to center upon efforts to prevent federal dry agents from tapping wires in search of evidence, and to cut off the buying of alcoholic evidence as well as the use of informers.

Should these efforts fail the plan would call for a record vote upon a proposal to send the appropriations measure back to the subcommittee which considered it.

MORE SENATE PROBES WILL BEGIN MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Senate committees arranged today to begin on Monday investigations into food prices and banking conditions.

The two inquiries will occupy separate committees which are looking for information on which to base legislation if it is deemed necessary.

Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, will direct the study into the banking situation. His inquiry also will cover speculation on the stock exchanges.

Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, the chairman of the food investigating committee, called a meeting for Monday to map out the program for work he intends to start immediately.

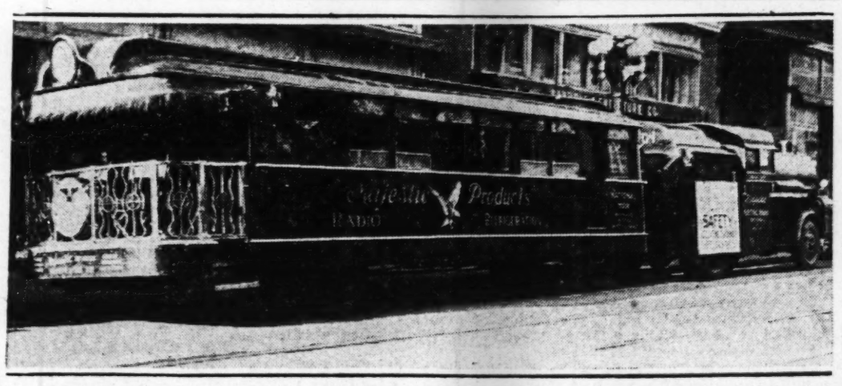

This inquiry will be directed first into the cost of bread and sugar. Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, today proposed that a study of milk and dairy products prices be included. Capper said he favored a later study of other foods including meat prices.

ARMY COURT ORDERS DISMISSAL OF OFFICER

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Captain Francis C. Browne, twelfth infantry, stationed at Fort Howard, Md., has been dismissed from the army by a general court-martial on charges of financial irregularities, it was announced today by the third corps area headquarters.

Charged with mismanagement of his company's fund, Captain Browne was tried last July and the sentence of dismissal became effective Wednesday, said the announcement. He left for his home at Detroit.

Half Million Spent on Mardi Gras To Aid New Orleans Unemployed

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—New Orleans will kill several birds with one stone when a half million dollars is spent on carnival whoopee this winter to perpetuate a tradition in make-believe dating back before the Civil War.

The time-honored festival of Mardi Gras will be preserved, the tired businessman will have his fling at being king or clown or Aladdin for a night, hundreds of jobs for dressmakers, costumers, jewelers, maids, chauffeurs and other attendants will be created, relief funds will be raised for the unemployed, and everyone will have a good time in the bargain.

Men who have been leaders in the carnival organizations for years—anonymous as always—told the Associated Press today that the outlay of the annual celebration for 1931 could be conservatively estimated at $500,000. The bulk of this disbursement of cash will go into the pockets of the butcher, the baker and the candlestick-maker, or their neighbors, the false-face artist, the scene-painter, the musician, the torchbearer and all the other unseen collaborators who help to create the fantastic carnival "atmosphere" in which the season's debutantes are glorified.

When the city's elite flock to the long series of brilliant balls, the buds claim the glory, but it is the skilled and unskilled worker who reaps the profits, according to the carnival officials.

RELIANCE LIFE CO. MAKES NEW RECORD

1930 Business Shows Nearly Two Million Increase.

A new record for the Reliance Life Insurance Company, of Pittsburgh, for paid business was established in 1930, with a volume of $74,808,841, it is reported by Robert L. Troy, agency organizer for the company in Georgia.

The 1930 figure shows an increase of $1,912,683 over the previous year, which also established a new record for production. The increase in 1930 over 1929 amounted to 2.6 per cent for the company's total business, and Mr. Troy says that the Georgia department also made a fine increase for the year.

In announcing this increase in business, the company says experience has shown that newspapers are an ideal medium to place the benefits of insurance before the public. The statement says that 1930 was a tremendously successful year from an advertising point of view, in that business actually traceable to advertising exceeded all hopes. Because of the success in 1930, the company says that the advertising program for this year has been materially increased.

The written life volume last year was $118,979,168, an increase of $10,324,327, or 9.4 per cent, over the previous record set in 1929. Reliance Life also placed in force in 1930 accident insurance amounting to $28,779,850, and $67,031 of weekly indemnity health insurance.

The company's assets increased $7,000,000 in 1930 and now exceed $69,000,000. At the end of 1930, Reliance Life had in force $466,790,080 life insurance, $152,937,422 accident insurance, and $316,367 weekly indemnity health insurance.

Loud Speaker Put to Test In Open Field

Radio receivers of the better sort are subjected to scores of electrical and mechanical measuring tests before they leave the factories, where they are made. Loud speakers, too, need to be measured, but the process has offered more difficulty.

It might be thought that the speaker should be measured in a typical living room, as representative of normal conditions of use. This cannot be done satisfactorily, however, because reflection of sound from the walls of a room produces variation in the measured sound greater than may be caused by the characteristics of the loud speaker itself. No completely sound absorbent material has been found for acoustical testing rooms, although a heavy felt lining on the walls absorb much of the sound falling upon it. A room with such a lining has been in use in the Stromberg-Carlson acoustical laboratory at Rochester, N. Y., for some time, the sound pick-up device being rotated over a circular path in order to obtain an average measurement of the sound in various portions of the room.

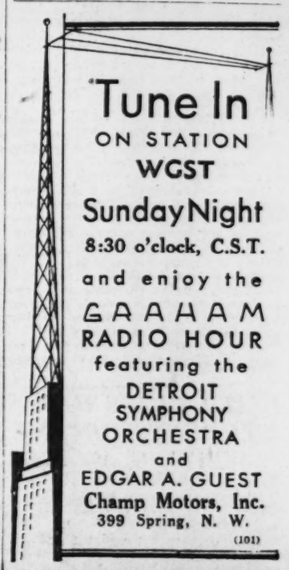

Stromberg-Carlson acoustical engineers have also arranged an interesting outdoor set up in an open field at the rear of the factory. Two pairs of tall poles are erected, with tops connected by tight intersecting steel cables and the loud speaker or radio set suspended from the intersection about 35 feet above the ground. The microphone is suspended some distance away on one of the cables, and its output is connected with measuring instruments on the ground. Echo being practically eliminated by this method, very accurate acoustical measurements can be made to supplement other tests.

VICTOR DEVELOPS NEW RADIO PILLOW

A "singing" and "talking" radio pillow for use in hospitals and Pullman cars has just been developed by the engineering products division of the RCA Victor Company, Inc., it was disclosed Saturday.

The radio pillow is of regulation hospital size, and is made of specially selected sponge rubber in which a sensitive radio reproducing unit is concealed. It is so constructed that although the sound permeates the pillow it cannot be heard except by resting the head on the pillow. The RCA radio pillow was designed especially for use in hospitals to replace ordinary earphones which become irksome and chafe when worn for any length of time. The loudspeaker is often impracticable too, because the radio programs may be disturbing to other patients in various stages of illness.

The new pillow, according to its sponsors, may be sterilized like an ordinary pillow, and the pillowcases changed at will. The patient lies in a natural reclining or sitting-up position to hear the radio programs. A connecting cord of ample length is plugged into the centralized radio receiving system.

Money to Loan

Household Loans
$50 to $300
ON PLEASANT TERMS

THE Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.
LOANS above $100 and up to $300 are made at a rate almost one-third lower than the lawful maximum.
STRICTLY confidential—no inquiries of friends, relatives or tradespeople.
THE only signatures required are those of husband and wife. No endorsers.
UNDER the Household Plan loans are repaid in twenty equal monthly payments. Larger payments than required under the twenty-month plan reduce the loan more rapidly and cut the cost.
INTEREST is paid by the month and charge is made only for the actual number of days the money is in use. There are no fines or fees.

ATLANTA HOMES

Disappearing MORTGAGES
Provide the easy, sensible, convenient way of paying for homes. They make home ownership within the reach of all. You pay only $10.00 per month per thousand with simple interest. Our representative will be glad to call and explain the plan fully.

Unlimited funds are available to Atlanta home owners through the Investors Syndicate, whom we represent in this section. Under this practical plan of financing you may make new loans or refinance mortgages so that you are not burdened with large interest payments that become due all in one lump sum.

DEMOCRAT MAY GET SIBLEY'S VACANT POST

Silence of Mitchell on Judgeship Is as Yet Unbroken.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—If Attorney General William Mitchell has reached a conclusion already in the choice of a candidate to be recommended to the president for appointment to succeed Judge Samuel H. Sibley, he has been successful in keeping it a well-guarded secret. So far as known, no word of an official nature has leaked out to give a line on his plans.

Barry Wright, of Rome, prominently identified with the independent campaign in behalf of the Hoover-Curtis ticket in Georgia two years ago, is still regarded as the leading contender for the post, and for the same reason is having more opposition centered on him than any other applicant. It remains the consensus of those informed on the situation that eventually he will be named, although misgivings have developed in the minds of some of his supporters because of the delay.

Leaders of the republican organization of the state are reported to be waging a vigorous opposition to the Rome man. Indorsements of several others have been forwarded the department by the state organization, it is understood, one of the latest being Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, who was in Washington this week.

United States District Attorney Clint W. Yeger, of Atlanta, who holds the chief indorsement of the state republican organization, headed by Collector of Revenue J. T. Rose, of Atlanta, remains in the picture also. But his chances seem to be dwindling.

The hesitancy of the department in winding up the matter has evidently given friends of democratic aspirants reason to believe the administration may go outside the republican party to find an appointee.

This may later prove to be true, although the department's attitude is thought to be in favor of giving preferential treatment to a republican or someone who voted the republican ticket in 1928 if such an applicant can be found without involving too many political considerations.

At any rate, the past week has seen strong indorsements presented in behalf of several democratic lawyers of the district, including Judge John D. Humphries, of the Fulton county superior court; Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., of Griffin; Judge G. E. Maddox, of Rome; Judge C. E. Roop, of Carrollton; Judge J. Render Terrell, of Greenville, and a few others.

Others mentioned for the post are: Stiles Hopkins, of Atlanta; Harold Hirsch, of Atlanta; Linton Hopkins, of Atlanta; Claude A. Smith, of Decatur; Joseph G. Collins, of Gainesville; George W. Whiteman, of Hapeville; Marvin E. Underwood, Edgar Watkins, H. A. Allen, Harry Alexander and Frank Doughman, all of Atlanta.

The week saw a delegation of attorneys from the district, headed by Reuben Arnold, of Atlanta, come to Washington for a conference with the attorney general and Assistant Attorney General Sisson in behalf of Mr. Wright.

SLAIN GIRL'S FATHER KILLS YOUNG TEXAN

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Jan. 17.—(AP)—O. L. Adams, 23, a medical assistant, was shot and killed here tonight. A. B. Johnson, father of Elizabeth Johnson, 17, found December 27 by her former sweetheart shot to death in the latter's automobile, surrendered to officers.

Robert L. Williams, 18, Texas University sophomore, the girl's former fiance, was charged with her murder, but released when a jury refused to return an indictment. He said he found the girl's body in his parked automobile. He left her in the car, he said, while he entered a near-by church to ask the pastor to intercede in an effort to effect a reconciliation with the girl.

Williams charged Miss Johnson had ended their engagement after accepting attentions from a young married man.

Adams was married, but he and his wife had been living apart. He was a former student in medicine at Tulane University, New Orleans, and had been assistant in the Gulf Refining Company's medical department here.

CHAMBER TO AID RETAIL DEALERS

Georgia Merchants Asked to "Prosperity Luncheon" Here February 4.

Several hundred retail merchants in Georgia cities and towns outside of Atlanta will be guests of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at a "prosperity luncheon" to be given February 4, it was announced Saturday by Horace Russell, president of the chamber.

Plans will be discussed for improving business conditions of Georgia retail stores.

"We shall give the retailer something concrete to think about and use in his business," said Mr. Russell. "We want him to quit 'marking time' and will try to show him how he can help bring good times back."

Invitations will be sent out this week to several thousand merchants, customers of Atlanta wholesale houses, which are furnishing the invitation list. The wholesalers are co-operating heartily with the Chamber of Commerce in planning the luncheon.

The Chamber of Commerce committee in charge of arrangements is composed of: C. A. Smith, chairman; C. J. Williamson, Arthur Kitchings, Ben H. Bach, Clark Harrison, Powers Pace, Raymond A. Kline and J. R. Little.

CONGRESS ANSWERS CRY OF OIL PRODUCERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The cry for help of the independent oil producers today took legislative form in the shape of bills for an investigation of the industry and for an oil tariff, or an embargo.

A measure to put a $1 per barrel duty on petroleum and a 50 per cent ad valorem tariff on petroleum products was introduced by Representative Garber, republican, Oklahoma, along with a bill to permit the president to put a stop to oil coming into the country for as long a period as he saw fit.

Representative Hoch, republican, Kansas, presented another measure under which a house committee would investigate and make recommendations. It would determine if the decree of the supreme court some years ago dissolving the Standard Oil Company is being violated. It would also go into many price and production phases of petroleum and gasoline.

Throughout their stay in Washington many of the independents have openly blamed some of the larger oil companies for a part of their financial ills and the theme was still further stressed today.

Two pleas for an investigation of the oil industry were laid before senators by the independents.

FRANCE FEELS GRIP OF TRADE DEPRESSION

PARIS, Jan. 17.—(UP)—The government acted today to halt the spread of unemployment in France and to alleviate the economic depression, especially among farmers.

The chamber of deputies unanimously passed the first part of a $200,000,000 program drawn up by former Premier Andre Tardieu for development of national resources. Meanwhile, the ministry of agriculture elaborated on plans for raising the value of farm products. These plans caused a serious cabinet split and threatened a defeat.

The vote of the chamber established credits of 670,000,000 francs (about $26,800,000) for development of national projects which will give employment to a large number of men. Minister of Labor Edouard Grinda, who has proposed a world conference to deal with unemployment, estimated that the entire development program would keep about 500,000 men busy three years. France now has about 17,000 unemployed and more than 100,000 partly unemployed.

CUBA LIFTS BAN ON ONE PAPER

HAVANA, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The government ban on the newspaper Informacion, one of the publications suspended January 9, was lifted tonight and the presses were permitted to turn out a complete edition.

Observers believed that President Machado would comply with publishers' requests and issue, within the next day or two, an order countermanding the suspension decree.

Informacion's staff had been working several days getting material ready for publication and each day forms had been stereotyped and the presses made ready, but the expected permission to resume was not forthcoming until this evening.

Escobar Exonerated.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—(UP)—Charges that General Jose Gonzales Escobar obtained $15,000 in El Paso, Texas, by false pretenses were dismissed today and police released the man who attempted to overthrow the Mexican government two years ago.

END THE CONGRESS GAG.

The measure to reform and expedite legislation in the house of congress, introduced by Congressman Crisp, of Georgia, who is the premier parliamentarian in the congress, deserves the highest consideration of his colleagues.

It was long supposed that such czarism as was embodied in Speaker Tom Reed and then in Speaker Joe Cannon, had been made impossible again by the successful revolt led against the latter by Senator Norris, when he was a member of the house. But under the system now in vogue Speaker Longworth, Leader Tilson and Rules Committee Chairman Snell, the czarisms of Reed and Cannon look like a Punch and Judy knock-about in a puppet-show at a county fair.

The American house of representatives is one of the most important of all legislative bodies. It comes fresh from the general electorate every two years. It assesses the revenues to be paid by the people in whatever form. It appropriates the national funds. All bills for either purpose must originate in the house; therefore its more direct responsibility to the people.

Therefore the greater reason why the rules of the house should be such as to enable demanded and necessary legislation to be promptly passed upon. Only this week an important public measure, after being submerged under the present rules for eight years, was finally enacted by a house now containing less than half of those members to whom it was originally introduced.

The present rules are stifling, obstructive and intensively partisan. Every friend of orderly, responsive and impartial government will hope that the Crisp measure will be enacted.

THE RACES IN THE SOUTH.

The annual report from the Julius Rosenwald Fund in aid of the racial improvement of the negroes, in the south especially, says that "All is quiet on the negro front—The race question is being solved—Negro progress is satisfactory."

Commenting upon the content of the report the New York Times says:

> Like the war bulletins, their essential truth laughs ironically at hundreds and thousands of negroes daily snubbed, often insulted and even publicly murdered; at bitter discrimination against them in the south and indifference and neglect in the nogth; at the drag on normal progress and prosperity caused by the dead weight of masses of ignorant and dependent blacks.

We cannot repress our surprise that so well-informed and usually impartial an observer as the New York Times should give utterance to such comments. The managers of the Rosenwald Fund speak directly from the large field of their negro-helping philantropies. They have actual contacts with the facts which exist in negro racial life experiences. They know first-hand whether the race question is advancing toward satisfactory solution, and their testimony is not subject to the heavy discount subtracted by the New York newspaper.

It might occur to any observer that daily in this broad nation hundreds and thousands of persons other than negroes are "snubbed, often insulted and even publicly murdered." That there is "bitter discrimination against them in the south and indifference and neglect in the north" are assumptions largely mythical, except in small areas and spasmodic instances. We can confidently assert and challenge adverse testimony, that there has never been since their emancipation more sympathy and more local support for the negroes than can be seen in the south today.

It is full time now for those who assume the roll of philadelphians for the negro race in this country to get down to facts and abandon the mass of fictions which have so long misrepresented racial relations in the south. Those myths have irritated the traditional and true friends of the southern negro and have hampered him in his own sensible and available efforts to improve his economic and civic conditions.

The Rosenwald fund managers have conducted their work for negro advancement along sane and helpful lines. They have received the fullest and readiest co-operation from southern governors, legislators and humane men and women in the highest walks of our sectional society. All of those influential people entertain the sincere hope that those in the north who champion negro advancement will speak the known truth about southern inter-racial relations and refrain from pouring oil upon the fast dying embers of a once formidable politically fomented antagonism.

TAXES IN TENNESSEE.

On another page of this issue is printed a clear and copious statement by George Fort Milton, chairman of a Tennessee state tax committee, organized by taxpayers of that state. Mr. Milton is publisher and editor of the Chattanooga News and therefore a daily student of the public affairs of the state.

Tennessee, like Georgia and many other states, suffers from archaic methods of assessing nad collecting government supporting taxes. Constitutional restrictions and iron-clad prescriptions, perhaps prudent in conditions long outgrown, hamper Tennessee as they do other states. Hence the urgency to study how present necessities may be met by equitable and productive readjustments in the tax system.

Fact-finding by the Tennessee committee, it is shown, has revealed startling increases in government expenses, city, county and state, in recent years. The burden upon each inhabitant, per capita figured, has grown almost unbelievably and is now plainly intolerable. It is leading to bankruptcies for both individuals and counties, with large and troublesome state fiscal problems.

The report of the Tennessee state tax committee brings into public view once more the need and justice of taxation reforms that will distribute the costs of government, state and county, more strictly upon the principle of benefits obtained from those governments. The base line of all just and equal taxation is that of privileges enjoyed under the aegis of the state and a reasonable excise from the fruits thereof.

It is not surprising that, after a strict examination of tax practices, the Tennessee committee recommends the adoption of the income tax system as the main tree of revenue fruitage. In all tax expert circles in America, as well as in European countries, the consensus obtains that the income tax, with reasonable exemptions, is the most equitable and effective mode of taxation. Now that Tennessee has enacted the abolition of ad valorem land taxes in and after 1932, the need for the income and other justly assessed excises becomes imperative.

The committee also deals with the county reduction problem. Tennessee has 95 counties, of which 47 lost population and property values in the census period between 1920 and 1930. Many of the counties of Tennessee, as in Georgia, are small, weak and suffering from political and official bloodpoison. The committee recommends that the 95 counties could be profitably reduced to 60 counties at most. That same condition of over-county organization and administration afflicts Georgia and makes the Tennessee report, which we publish today, worthy of reading and consideration by our legislators and county electors.

This Tennessee report, coinciding in its conclusions with other similar reviews made in many states, should profitably affect the sitting state general assembly to which it is submitted.

THE "DEAD DUCK" POLICY.

The action of the Georgia Tax Revision Association in demanding that the proposition to divert highway funds to floating debt payments be abandoned is fully justified by the result of the late gubernatorial contest.

In the primary to name a governor there was actually little outside of personal preference for the people to decide other than whether they wanted the Carswell plan to use highway revenues to pay debts or the Russell plan to hold those funds to their allocated uses and pay the debts from other resources.

The popular verdict was strongly against the diversion plan. It is morally res adjudicata. As an issue of state policy it is as nearly written and fixed law of action as though decided by a verbal referendum. There may be those who cannot see any other funds accessible by the state than the tag and gas taxes; but to so argue is to discount the ability of the people's representatives to understand the popular will and to wisely deal with a fiscal problem.

Let the diversion idea stay on the morgue slab where the people laid it. No one should be allowed to apply a pulmotor to revive it. The state is able to supply the money to pay its debts without the humorous device of passing its ready money from one pocket to the other, and still being in debt.

ATLANTA'S MISSING TOURISTS.

Donald M. Hastings, well-known young businessman of Atlanta, in a communication to The Constitution published elsewhere in this issue, calls attention to the large per cent of the state's tourist trade the city is missing on account of the condition of the highway between Atlanta and Augusta, and the failure to resume work on the carving of the Stone Mountain memorial.

As pointed out by Mr. Hastings, a large proportion of the eastern tourists who each winter travel through Georgia in going to Florida, come into the state at Augusta. With the memorial to the heroes of the Confederacy completed, and with a hard-surfaced road from Augusta to Atlanta, the great bulk of these tourists would come this way in proceeding to their destinations.

Atlanta as the cultural, financial and shopping center of the southeast is entitled to these tourists, but as it is now the great bulk of them go on to Florida via the Louisville and Waycross road, which is hard-surfaced for its entire route. Nobody can blame them for not wanting to traverse 40 or 50 miles of Georgia mud at the worst period of the year, which would be necessary if they came by Atlanta.

The word of the state highway department has been given that before another winter there will be all-weather roads stretching northward and eastward from Atlanta, over which automobilists may travel in safety and comfort the year around.

By the time these roads are opened, every indication gives ground for the belief that, under the leadership of Mayor Key, the difficulties which caused the suspension of work at Stone Mountain will have been ironed out, and carving resumed.

With the affairs of the memorial again in order, and with the city no longer practically unreachable during the winter months by automobiles from the north and east, tourists will be as plentiful in Atlanta as they now are in other Georgia cities with much less to offer in the way of interest and entertainment.

CUTTING FARM COSTS.

Fair warning is given to the farmers of Georgia by E. C. Westbrook, cotton and tobacco specialist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, in a communication published elsewhere in this issue, that if they are to reap profits from their labors this year, they must farm more scientifically and sensibly than they have in past years.

The question of what the program of the farmer this year should be is not an easy one to answer, but, as pointed out by Mr. Westbrook, one thing is certain, and that is that the planter who would come out ahead at the end of his marketing season must raise more of his "money crop" to the acre, and cut down on the amount he has practically thrown away heretofore in the purchase of food he could have produced himself.

The farmer who averaged a bale and a half of cotton to the acre in 1930 had a production cost of around 7½ cents per pound; the one who raised one bale to the acre had a cost of 9 cents, and those who produced a half bale to the acre did so at a cost of 15 cents per pound.

Taking into consideration the prevailing prices for which the 1930 crop was sold, it is easy to figure out which of these farmers were on the right side of the ledger and which on the wrong side when the final returns from their crops were in.

Since the 1931 crops will be produced by the farmer with less cash than for many preceding years, it is all the more important that they produce every item of food for their families and their stock that they can raise on their land. Many of them are now buying twice as much as they raise. So long as they do, they will continue to eke out a bare living from their farms.

The manufacturing and commercial interests of the country countered the falling off in the volume of trade during 1930 by reducing production costs. Overhead expenses were cut to the minimum and every cost not absolutely necessary was eliminated.

Mr. Westbrook shows the farmers of Georgia how by causing two bales of cotton to grow where only one grew before they can so reduce production costs as to turn losses into profits. They can conserve these profits by putting an end to their custom of paying out money for the products of other farmers in other states which they could themselves have raised.

Every county demonstration agent in the state is preaching the doctrine set forth in Mr. Westbrook's communiction. In addition the members of the Georgia Bankers' Association are vigorously backing a campaign looking to the raising of more food crops by the farmers who would borrow from their local banks.

Consequently the farmer who fails to diversify and adopt modern methods of cultivation this year will do so not as a result of ignorance but from willful refusal to accept the advice of those on whom he is now calling for assistance.

Every businessman or financier in the state is anxious to do his utmost to bring our farming interests out of the slough of despond into which they have fallen—but our farmers must realize that in the last analysis their salvation lies in their own hands.

They can either adopt modern methods to meet modern conditions, and in that way attain prosperity, or else they can stick to worn-out and obsolete customs and intensify the unfortunate condition in which they now are.

SEEKING THE ROAD OUT.

The eleventh anniversary of the prohibition amendment was mildly and scatteringly celebrated on Friday. Senator Sheppard, co-author of the amendment in the senate, praised its existence and scoffed at the idea that it will ever be repealed. The leaders of the Anti-Saloon League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as in duty bound by their employments, pronounced prohibition a progressive success.

It may be good policy and wise strategy to continue declaring prohibition a "success," but the vast public of the nation, seeing daily the lawlessness and corruption attending it and flowing over the land in increasing streams from that source alone, refuses to glorify the law. More and more the conservative sense of the people is demanding some better treatment of the liquor problem than seems possible by efforts to enforce the amendment through the Volstead, Jones and Stobbs laws.

Bishop Mouzon, of the Southern Methodist church, who repudiated in 1928 the "wet Al Smith" and whooped-up the cause of "dry Hoover," has now gotten his eyes opened to the true situation. He declares that none of the presidents—Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, or Hoover—have sought to adequately enforce prohibition.

He does the better thing now of declaring for the education of the rising generation in the practice of sobriety and in observance of law.

The Constitution is in full sympathy with such education, but in the meantime feels the necessity of so reforming the law as not only to make it workable, but worthy of the respect of a free people.

CALL OF THE RED CROSS.

The decision of the American Red Cross society, with the full approval of President Hoover, its national president, to appeal for public gifts to the sum of $10,000,000, to aid sufferers from drouth and other calamitous circumstances, will very certainly and promptly be answered by the generous people of the nation.

There is just now an extraordinary obligation upon the Red Cross to do for distressed and dependent people in our own country the same wonderful salvage and sustenance work that it has often done for the calamity-stricken in all parts of the world. Through the quick and prepared actions of the American Red Cross our people have come to be esteemed all over the globe as the one nation that is indeed "half-brother to the world." Its ministries of rescue, relief and restoration have caused the society itself to be pictured on all continents and to all people as "The World's Greatest Mother."

Those who have been in positions at home or abroad to witness the proficiency and efficiency of the Red Cross agents and nurses testify without a querulous voice to the wisdom and necessity for the Red Cross and the duty to support it adequately in all great emergencies.

Such an emergency pleads at our home doors today in the needs of our own kith and kin. The appeal is for 20 cents for every adult of the nation, but the total means the saving of lives, the satisfying of helpless hunger, the clothing of the naked and cold, and the restoration of strength and hopeful spirits to millions now forlorn and near to despair.

Chairman Fess says the democrats are "welcome to Raskob and all his millions." Which suggests that School Teacher Fess hasn't forgotten the fable of the fox and the "sour grapes."

Jack Sharkey is trying to argue that the shark part of his name is not illustrative. Still he is a gob who gobbles whatever he can reach.

That "favorable opportunity" for Mellon to get out of the treasury will come when a democratic president gets into the White House.

Sixteen persons are candidates for mayor of Chicago. Strange there should be so many trouble-hunters in the same town.

Purse-snatching from Uncle Sam is the latest phase of dementia Americana.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The American People Are Bad Actors Now But Will Come Through O. K.

There is a common feeling throughout the country that the mass morale of our people has been deeply and deplorably lowered since the conclusion of the World War.

That there is less regard for personal and public morals is evident to every observer of conduct. That there is less reverence for and obedience of law, divine or human, is made plain by indisputable statistics. That public office, once insisted upon imperatively as a public trust, is now mostly sought for its perquisites and profits, is believed by the great mass of the citizens of the nation. That social rights and social customs are now evaluated and enjoyed on the basis of "what have you" in the shape of wealth, is only too manifest.

These are the comprehensive counts in the indictment of the spirit of our times.

* * * *

They Are Ratable and Debatable.

No one can know better than a newspaper editor how variously these phases of national character are rated—how hotly and indecisively they are debated in all circles of thought and opinion.

But the common concensus is as I have stated, a conviction that we are in a condition of moral and spiritual depression as surely as we are in a period of economic depression.

The effects of the intangible mental and religious recession are more depleting and dangerous to the national security than the current loss of work, wages and markets.

They decimate the higher offices of our wills, loosen the rivets of our most valuable restraints, cut the cables that should hold us to the standards of righteous character, convert us into social racketeers, and organize us into industrial, commercial and political gangsters. American character is now suffering from such unmoral infections. The press, the pulpits, the honest people say so with strong voices.

* * * *

Hearing the Negative Side.

On the other haud we have these views of current life vigorously and angrily combated by certain schools of philosophers and social actuaries.

We are told that what seems the demoralization of individual and communal character is not that at all; that it seems so only to those mossbacks who wear blue stockings and look through blue spectacles.

These modern character accountants hold that the character complex of our people is even more moral than in any previous generation, and only looks worse to those who cannot realize that the standard of character valuation has healthfully changed from the measurements of traditional "religion" to the more rational and liberal balances of "behavior."

In other words, people now live frankly and not artificially, honestly and not hypocritically; that they have cast off pretenses of prudery and feel no shame in speaking and acting with the same freedom we see in the herds of the field and the hogs in a pen. Their morals are those of nature.

* * * *

Watch the Proof of the Pudding.

How far all that frankness and freedom, personal license and social libertinism is making for a higher American civilization and a nobler nation of self-ruling people must be left to the individual judgment of each student and spectator.

As for me, my nearly 80 years of life among our people, three-fourths of those years spent in active intellectual, moral and social propaganda, this new gospel of animalistic behaviorism is a repulsive rule of action.

It exhibits no improvement or benefits over the code of personal and public conduct, based upon biblical precepts and taught as binding upon everyone not deliberately determined to be a moral or statutory outlaw.

Hence, my sympathies are entirely with those editors, preachers and publicists who are strongly renewing the doctrine that a "religious conscience" is the great present need of the American people. In the matter of morals they must radically reform or degenerate into hopeless rottenness.

* * * *

Our Case Is Not Hopeless.

But our present case is far from being that hopeless trend.

Always in a state of confusion and readjustments there are many exaggerations and baseless imaginations. They alarm our fears and distort our physical and spiritual visions alike.

The agencies and forces in our American system of civilization are more in number and influence than the casual can calculate.

It is a great fallacy to claim that personal religion is decaying among us. The Bible is still the "best seller" among the books the people want and read. Why are more Bibles bought every year than of any 10 other popular books coming from the press?

Why are the automobile, radio and good roads drying up small rural ineffective churches and building up greater churches in accessible centers?

Of course, there are a lot of preachers who would serve better selling soap or life insurance—but there are plenty of bankers, lawyers, so-called statesmen, and some editors also who would serve better doing likewise.

* * * *

What We Need Most of All.

A habit is hard to break off, and a habit of mind or conscience is the hardest of all habits to overcome by replacing evil with good.

The wisest counsellors of our day, speaking out of business, social and political circles, tell us that the need of our people is more religious culture and character. They see such knowledge and self-engineering as the sovereign remedy for most of the evils of which the sane and conservative complain.

That they are right scarcely admits of a doubt. And they frankly realize that that remedy cannot be made effective over night. The present adult and maturing generations are chronically addicted to the liberal and unmoral habits whose character degrading effects were noted earlier in this article.

The plea for a quickened "religious conscience" is made in behalf of the youthful Americans, that they may be taught while teachable to love cleanness of character, and may acquire ambitions to be men and women whom the people will respect and to whom they will entrust leadership and power.

* * * *

Significant Signs of Revival.

Most likely I will have vanished within the veil between us and another order of life before the new and more self-esteeming generation gets into action, giving a more beautiful complexion and cleaner costuming to American life.

But I have a solid faith that such a generation is already in the offing. It has been the history of human nature in its progressive movement that degeneracy only affects a period. The reaction from it surely happens and carries a nation or an age to higher and better things.

It is inconceivable that so Providentially created a people, endowed with virile minds and ample munitions for world leadership in the anticipated arts of civilization, will allow themselves to degenerate into moral morons and irreligious parials—the national stench in the nostrils of all races of the world.

I don't and won't believe that.

The Community Conscience

For a long time we talked about organized society in terms of "the social contract." There is still a measure of truth in the conception that people living together in a city or state have formed a mutual contract, by which their privileges and rights are conserved. This is expressed in the laws which are enacted. It is also expressed in the unwritten laws and customs.

The underlying reason, however, for these mutual agreements is, that when people live together in a city they inevitably live a common life. The city government, with its laws, does not make this common life, but it is the common life which makes necessary the laws and customs. So we have ceased to talk of "the social contract," as if the community were an artificial organization created by contract, but think of it as an organism rather than an organization. It is a living thing. It is quite remarkable that nearly 19 centuries ago the Apostle Paul, anticipating the social thinking of today, wrote of his ideal Christian community: "For as the body is one and hath many members, so also is the body of Christ." When we think of a city from this standpoint, each person connected with all the others by vital interests, and each independent upon the others for health and happiness, the analogy is almost perfect.

The Common Life.

Think for a moment how vitally we are connected. There are common dangers of fire and flood, of disease and crime, so we are united through common agencies for protection. The sanitary conditions of the community are of first interest to all. Then there are those public ministries of communication, transportation, and lighting, which involve the comfort and efficiency of the entire citizenship. The commercial interests of the community include the prosperity of each one. Education and the development of the characters of all the people is of vital importance to each one, because on the intelligence and the integrity of all the people depends the prosperity and happiness of all.

When these common interests are suggested, each one of us recognizes their existence, and yet most of us live conscious only of a very small part of the community. So many people are thinking and acting as if there are no other people, save those with whom they come into immediate contact in social and business circles. This is community ignorance, and most of the ills of community life grow out of it. "Because the eye says I am not of the body, it is not therefore not of the body." Of course the eye is vitally dependent upon the health of the other organs for its normal vision. So for a man to say, "I am not of the social body," does not protect him in any way from the social disease of the community. A prosperous and happy community can only be builded, where the individual is conscious of the life of his entire community. He must be conscious of the fact that even one case of malaria, or tuberculosis, means that to that extent the community is sick. Every illiterate citizen helps to make an illiterate city, and every case of poverty is an added burden of responsibility to the community.

It is in this consciousness of one's vital membership of the community that one's community conscience is born. It grows out of a sense of obligation for his community. When that sense of oneness with the community is felt by a citizen, instead of a self-superior aloofness from community affairs, he will feel a sense of shame and hurt in every community failure, and a sense of obligation to help remedy its evils. No man can ever rise to his highest self until his self-consciousness shall include all others, who are in any sense dependent upon him for good. In this way his conscience shall become as large as his capacity for service. It is quite the vogue in America to talk of making one's city larger. This can only be done by making one's city bulk larger within one's own sense of responsibility. Each man's city is only so large as his own consciousness of responsibility. To make a larger city, then, we must have larger citizens.

A Large Citizen.

If this is the way to make a larger community, it is equally true that it is the only way to make larger men. The city can only find its largest self in the lives of its individual citizens and in turn the citizen can only find his largest self in the life of the community. The seed, if it abide by itself alone, will bring forth no fruit. It is equally true that the citizen, if he abide by himself alone, can bring forth no helpful community fruitage. If, however, his life he planted in the life of his community, what an abundant harvest there will be.

Jesus called Himself the "Son of Man." He refused to be limited to any tribe or time, to any nation or race. He identified Himself with the interests of all men of all time. Taking the very least of human life by the hand, He said, "He is my brother. Give him a cup of cold water, feed or minister to him in any way and I will count it as being done unto Me." It was in this way He took His own life, and in self-abandon cast it like a seed into the fertile field of the life of the human race. The centuries which have passed have witnessed the ever-growing harvest of that seed sowing. To Him the world was a community. He was a world citizen, because He had a world consciousness, and a world conscience.

Farmers' Profits This Year Depend On More Food Crops and More Cotton Per Acre, Says Agricultural Expert

BY E. C. WESTBROOK,
Cotton and Tobacco Specialist, Georgia State College of Agriculture.

All of the outlook reports for 1931 show that we have overproduced in most everything. This applies not only to agricultural products but it applies to non-agricultural products as well. We are told that there is not only a surplus of most everything, but to make the situation still more difficult the buying power of the consumer is not as great as it was a year ago.

The yield of cotton in Georgia for 1930 was 199 pounds of lint per acre, which is the largest acre yield since 1915. The crop cost about 15 cents per pound to grow and it sold for 10 cents and less, or 5 cents per pound below cost of production.

This means a loss to the Georgia farmers of between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. Not all of this loss is represented by actual cash. Many farmers did not lose any cash on the crop, but lost their labor, which means that they worked for nothing and boarded themselves. The tobacco farmers did not fare any better than the cotton farmers.

Farmers are asking the question, "What should be our program in 1931?"

It is not an easy question to answer. However, upon investigation we find that the farmer who produced one and a half bales of cotton per acre had a production cost of only 7 1-2 cents per pound; those who produced a bale per acre had a production cost of 9 cents per pound; those who produced one-half bale per acre had a production cost of 15 cents per pound, and those who produced only 150 pounds of lint per acre had a production cost of 22 cents per pound. These same relative costs of production have been true each year. Yield per acre determines cost of production, and likewise profit.

Therefore, it appears that it will require close to a bale to the acre of cotton to yield much profit in 1931.

Farmers will be forced to produce the 1931 crops with a minimum amount of cash. Old-timers say that good crops usually follow cold winters and heavy snows. Much of the cotton belt has been covered with snow this winter. The snow has melted and left the soil mellow and tillable. This will help in preparing a good seed bed. Thorough preparation of the seed bed this year will be one of the best ways of increasing yields without adding much to cost of production.

The average farm family consumes about $500 worth of food annually. Most of this food can be raised at much less cost than it can be bought. A good garden, a good milk cow, and a few pigs and chickens will prevent a great deal of cotton money from passing down the throats of the farm family.

The average Georgia mule is fed 70 bushels of grain and two tons of hay annually. This feed has a value of about $120. A good pasture for the work stock to run in when they are idle will help to cut the feed cost.

The prospect for a good crop of small grain is splendid at this time. If it gets through the winter without damage it will help wonderfully in taking care of the feed situation.

In conclusion we would like to offer this hint to farmers when planning their program for 1931: Instead of planting so many acres of this or that crop, wouldn't it be a good plan to check up and find out how many acres you have which have a fair chance of producing a profitable yield per acre of these crops? If every farmer would do this there would be no overproduction next year, and the much-talked-of farm relief would be obtained.

Mankind Must League Itself for Common Good Or Face Extermination

Editor Constitution: Your readers owe you a debt of gratitude for your illuminating editorial on "The World Court Case."

The World Court is bound to create neighborhood between nations and that means the co-operation of the entire human race for common ends. We have but two paths before us: Co-operation or conquest. We have but two goals, mutual brotherhood or mutual butchery. We have but two principles to guide us, amity which makes for peace, rivalry which makes for extermination.

Every thoughtful man sees two things; the first is that there is no secure peace for the world in rivalry. We have tried this method for centuries, and bloodstained centuries they have been. If we are to continue in the same path it means yet larger fleets and armies, the application of science to the production of yet more terrible weapons of destruction, the piling up of the means of aggression until the temptation to use them becomes overwhelming, and then the inevitable clash of interests and ambitions, with fresh struggles for world power, until the whole structure of civilization sinks, overwhelmed in fire and blood.

The second thing which every thoughtful man sees is that however faulty our present scheme for a world's court is, we must come to something of the kind if the human race is to be saved from extermination. Hitherto history contains little more than the record of successive conquests accomplished by what torture to mankind no historian can compute, with each conquest in the end proving itself impermanent and futile.

If the new history of the world is to be the record of a real advance of mankind toward secure happiness, it will only be because the world has at last learned to replace the law of conquest by the law of co-operation. In plain words, the world must learn to league itself for the common good or mankind must perish, and imperfect as the present World Court is, and battered as its ideal is by a thousand animosities, I am convinced that it is not extinguished.

Time Is Ripe for Atlanta To Cash In On Its Reputation, Holds Hastings

Editor Constitution: It has occurred to me what a wonderful and profitable opportunity Atlanta is missing by not completing: First, the Stone Mountain Memorial, and, second, the highway (Georgia 12) from Augusta.

As is well known, Augusta is the gateway to Georgia and Florida for a large proportion of eastern automobile tourist traffic, and when these tourists leave that popular city they come to a fork in the highway. One way, via Louisville and Waycross, offers a hard-surfaced highway through to Florida, while the other via Atlanta, offers slush and mud for many miles to offset the thousands of dollars that Atlanta and Atlanta's institutions spend annually endeavoring to attract worthy visitors.

No sensible tourist will careen through 40 or 50 miles of Georgia mud to view the seven wonders of the world if they were all in Atlanta, but a hard surfaced highway to Florida via Atlanta would in all likelihood attract 40 to 50 per cent of those who now take the shortest cut to get through Georgia, while should we, as real "go-getters," develop that eighth wonder of the world, the "Stone Mountain Memorial," we could expect 70 to 75 per cent to either come or go via our city already made famous by Bobby Jones, Coca-Cola, Bryan Grant, Agnes Scott, Emory and Georgia Tech, besides many battlefields and mementoes of 1861-5, all of our modern hospitable hotels, theaters, department stores and other busy but delightful attractions of real southern life.

The time is ripe now to capitalize on Atlanta's international reputation as a real metropolis with the world's best year 'round climate.

The Stone Mountain Memorial must be completed at once before the effect of all of our wonderful advertising has gone.

What business firm would spend a million dollars in advertising something that they thought might be placed on the market 10 or 15 years from now?

Isn't Atlanta wasting millions of dollars of advertising in such manner?

The world knows Atlanta through our Bobby Jones.

Sad to say in 10 years the world, while perhaps remembering Bobby, will have forgotten that Atlanta is his home.

Bond the city and complete the memorial, or better, pay cash for it. Small admissions to the museum in connection would take care of the upkeep and repayment, while Atlanta's business institutions would be repaid annually many times over.

Cash in Atlanta while the melons are ripening!

Too Many Taxes Now, Says Quitman Editor

Editor Constitution: People here read with amazement and dismay the suggestions to add more taxes to what we already have. If the legislature will take two basic facts to work from and stick to them its task will be greatly simplified: We don't want more taxes and we want the state debt paid. For example: The state has an income of approximately $30,000,000—manage to get along with it. Manage. The states owes this county $30,000; it would do a lot of good to have that money distributed here now.

Increase taxes! Truly, there must be something about the state capitol that inspires ill-balanced optimism. We are in no mood to endure added taxes. In every town in Georgia vacant stores, people out of jobs, decreased business, are creating uneasiness and distress.

Taxes are never popular and now they provoke acute resentment. We are paying corporation tax, special taxes on certain lines of business, registration fees, city license tax, sales tax, auto tag tax, gas tax, federal income tax, state income tax, state, county and city ad valorem taxes and more.

We have too much taxation and too much politics.

Time To Stop Taxing Owners of Automobiles

Editor Constitution: For some days now we have heard suggestions as to how taxes could be raised. The suggestion is made in the legislature to tax autos one dollar each and the drivers one dollar each to raise state revenue. Then comes along our city officials and suggest taxing autos three dollars each and an additional dollar for every driver.

The student of Russian history at once arises to ask: "Why not tax autos $25 each, and make each driver pay a special tax of $10?" Americans are hogs for punishment in the realm of auto and auto accessory taxes. But even a seemingly simple and foolish public will awaken to its senses finally and rebel. And the point has been about reached. Surely it is time for some of our would-be Solomons to get serious and devise some other means than the ones suggested to raise moneys from the burdened taxpayers to increase salaries of the ones who suggest such means.

What American who thinks would dare suggest that we tax any other commodity as we are now taxing autos and accessories? There is a limit to some things and the limit has been about reached in this matter.

Good Roads Association Urges Gasoline Taxes Be Used Only on Roads

Editor Constitution: There is a growing tendency throughout the United States to increase the gasoline taxes and to use the same for general expense purposes of the states, counties and cities. The United States ood Roads Association is making an active campaign throughout the United States to combat all legislation increasing gasoline and oil taxes and to make it unlawful to use the receipts from the same for any other purpose except for road building, road maintenance and streets.

The state legislature in 44 states will meet this year in accordance with the campaign that is being conducted by the United States Good Roads Association. The organization has written to the members of the legislatures in these 44 states urging them to pass a law in their respective states embodying the following points:

1. Not to increase the gasoline tax.
2. To apply all gasoline tax to road building, maintenance and street building.
3. To make it unlawful for cities and counties to place an extra gasoline tax.
4. To have all gasoline taxes collected by the state, making collections uniform.

A number of favorable and outspoken letters have been received from state senators and members of the house in various states indorsing the action and campaign of the good roads association. Newspapers, automobile associations, automobile dealers' associations, oil men's associations, farm organizations and civic clubs are passing resolutions indorsing the campaign.

MANY SOUTHERN STATES NOW STUDYING TAX PROBLEMS

INCREASING TIDE OF LOCAL COSTS CALLED STARTLING

George Fort Milton, Head of Tennessee Investigating Committee Shows Necessity for Sweeping Revisions.

BY GEORGE FORT MILTON.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 17.—The problem of taxation has been giving concern not alone in Georgia but to nearly all of her neighbor states of the southeast. The North Carolina legislature is now actively at work on a general revamping of taxation procedure; Alabama is pondering fundamental changes in her tax laws, and the Tennessee general assembly, now in session at Nashville, is considering a thoroughgoing reformation of the Volunteer State's tax policy, as well as the general reorganization of administration and public finance.

The present Tennessee situation has two distinct phases. First of all, during the past three months Tennessee has been confronted with an extraordinary emergency, the result of the collapse of the financial house of cards erected over the past four years by the legerdemain of Colonel Luke Lea, Nashville newspaper magnate, and Rogers Caldwell, whilom financial wizard of the new south. Various manipulations not yet thoroughly explained led to deposit of millions of state funds in Caldwell-controlled banking institutions which collapsed last November, thus confronting the state with prospect of possible loss of some $6,000,000 of state funds. Failures of the Bank of Tennessee, Caldwell subsidiary in Nashville, and the Holston-Union National bank of Knoxville, another Lea-Caldwell venture, have reverberated through the state for the past two months with resultant mounting public indignation, demands for impeachment of Henry H. Horton, present governor of the state, and third member of the Lea-Caldwell-Horton political triumvirate, and the like. Thus one of the main tasks confronting the sixty-seventh session of Tennessee's general assembly is the investigation of the condition of state finance, definite ascertainment of responsibility for the state's probably enormous loss, and prosecution of those officials and private citizens whose acts caused the debacle.

But spectacular as this has been, it is by no means the fundamental problem of the state. These extraordinary allocations of state deposits to tottering banks, constitute, after all, a special rather than a continuing condition of government in Tennessee. The fundamental problem with which the Tennessee general assembly is confronted is the stark necessity of a realistic and thoroughgoing reformation of the tax system of the state. That this essential reform will gain a keener attention from the legislators because of the general focusing of public interest in problems of government due to disclosures of the last three months, seems assured. For that matter, it can be said with thorough truth that, should the present emergency result in a sound revision of Tennessee's taxation system, the state will save as much money every year as it would lose by a complete wiping out of all of its deposits in the defunct banks.

Tennessee differs from Georgia, from a taxation standpoint, because of the essential differences between the constitutions of the two states. The present basic law of Georgia is amendable. In fact, it has been amended many times, and some of these times seemingly without due reason. Tennessee, however, is now suffering from a deficit arising from the reverse cause. The present Tennessee constitution, adopted in 1870, has never been amended since its adoption. This is not because effort has not been made to amend it, but rather, because of the provision in the constitution itself making the process amendment almost impossible of successful completion. Percentage of vote which must be received for the amendment to be carried at the polls is put at so high a figure that no amendment had ever come close to the toll required. This provision was deliberately inserted by the constitution makers of reconstruction days; their anxiety was to keep the state, then just wrested from the radicals, securely in democratic hands. Thus the amending process was made one of great difficulty, to prevent temporary republican majorities in the legislature from instituting constitutional changes which would place Tennessee back in the hands of the Brownlow radical regime.

Taxation Handicaps.

So far as taxation is concerned, this unamendability of the constitution has played havoc with progress in Tennessee, for the 1870 constitution carried over, practically without alteration, the provision of the 1834 constitution, to the effect that "no one species of property shall be taxed at a higher rate than any other species of property." This provision, so common in early state constitutions, seemed unusually just and fair to our forefathers, whose property in the main consisted of land and buildings, of cattle and farm machinery, items of tangible character and readily comparable types of wealth.

With the changing order of property, with the great increase of intangibles, a change all the more rapid throughout the south in the last 30 years, there has come impelling need for a revision of taxation systems so that these new types of property could be reached, and could be made to contribute their fair share toward the sustenance of the cost of government. This is a necessity with which all American states have been confronted since the turn of the century, a necessity bearing most immediately upon the industrialized commonwealths of north and east, but likewise having its effects upon the slowly but surely shifting southern economy. State after state in the south has altered its constitution to permit classification of property for taxation purposes, and segregation of sources of revenue to governmental units, but Tennessee's constitution has been the lion in the path of tax reform.

In consequence of the increasing gravity of Tennessee's tax picture, a statewide conference of business and professional men assembled in Chattanooga on October 8, 1929, to consider and discuss the tax problems then confronting the state. The significant forces of industry, commerce, and finance of Tennessee were represented at this meeting, as a consequence of which a state tax committee of 15 members were named, five coming from each of the three grand divisions of the state. This committee was directed "to consider and report upon a modern system of taxation to be proposed to the next regular session of the legislature." Its membership included the following: George Fort Milton, chairman, Chattanooga; Royden Dixon, secretary, Memphis; Dr. Frank W. Prescott, executive secretary, Chattanooga; C. H. Bacon, Lenoir City; Samuel O. Bates, Memphis; C. W. Bailey, Clarksville; J. C. Dean, Memphis; John S. Fletcher, Chattanooga; Frank S. Hall, Dickson; Albert E. Hill, Nashville; D. P. Houston, Nashville; W. E. Norvell, Jr., Nashville; Thomas Scott, Dyersburg; C. M. Seymour, Knoxville; Lawrence Taylor, Jackson, and A. L. Todd, Murfreesboro.

The Citizens' Tax Bill.

At its initial meeting early in the year the state tax committee determined to undertake a careful analysis of actual conditions existing in the state. It was recognized that Tennessee's tax problem was not alone the problem of the cost of state government. The tax bill which the citizen paid was the sum of his state, city and county taxes, plus whatever he paid to the federal government. The committee could not consider federal tax cost, but it did undertake an investigation of the three types of local taxes, state, county, and city, as well as an exhaustive examination of the items of revenue, expenditure and debt of local governments. A staff of experts was assembled, and a careful compilation made by field agents for the period of the last three years of revenues, expenditures and debts of the cities and counties of Tennessee.

In addition to this, the committee undertook to study the incidence of taxation in the various tax-paying groups in the state, and to compare the burden of taxes on these groups with the burden of similar groups in surrounding southern states. In the course of this study, the committee had made available to it statistics of the bureau of internal revenue of the treasury department at Washington, from an analysis of which illuminating figures were found, showing the comparable percentage of income paid by Tennessee bankers, railways, manufacturers, etc., in comparison with those paid in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, the Carolinas, and other southern states.

This analysis showed that over the five years, 1922-1927, the ratio of state and local taxes of corporation income tax payers in Tennessee to their total net income was 21.326 per cent. For this same period, the Georgia percentage was a trifle greater, 21.586 per cent. Other states' ratios were found as follows: Alabama, 20.306; Kentucky, 19.824; Arkansas, 29.810; North Carolina, 17.144; Virginia, 21.992. The average for these seven states for the five-year period was 21.684 per cent.

Ratio of Various States.

The attached table shows the specific ratios of the seven states, as follows:

The figures on Tennessee broken down for the five-year period showed quite a marked difference between various types of corporation pursuits. They were as follows: Agriculture and related industries, 65.932 per cent; transportation and other public utilities, 32.892; finance—banking, insurance and related business, 32.548; mining and quarrying, 32.532; public service—professional, amusements, hotels, etc., 24.544; trade, 22.960; construction, 13.938; manufacturing, 11.656.

A comparison of the 1922 figures and those for 1927 showed an average increase of 7.65 per cent in the various industries, mining having the greatest percentage of 16.62 per cent. The service at 12.01 per cent, trade, the third, at 10.41 per cent. Manufacturing companies' tax increase was only 3.19 per cent while transportation showed a net decrease of .02 per cent. The ratio of taxes of net income of corporations in seven southern states for 1927 likewise developed many interesting figures. The facts are shown in the sub-joined table:

Startling Findings.

The findings of the committee's staff as to the rising tide of local costs were even more startling in their nature. The report revealed that expenditures of the state departments did not assume very large proportions until about 1925, when the total reached $22,000,000. Since then, owing to an overstimulated highway program, expanded educational and institutional budgets, disbursements have increased with lightning-like rapidity. In 1902, state expenses totaled $2,500,000, or $1.22 per capita; in 1912 they were $4,128,000, or $1.84 per head; in 1929 they had climbed to $45,000,000, or $17.59 for every person. Our local governments have paralleled the state in its steadily enhanced costs. Twenty-eight years ago our counties, cities and special districts expended $8,835,309, or $4.37 per capita; in 1913 the amounts were $20,008,203 ($8.97 per capita); in 1927 these units absorbed $70,311,904 ($27.29 per capita); in 1928, totals were $72,136,006 ($27.93) and in 1929, $76,547,896, or $29.33 per head. The volume of combined state and local payments for government in Tennessee in the last-named year was $122,482,835 and $46.93 for every inhabitant of the state.

In terms of the tax dollar of 1927, 69.9 per cent was expended for city and county purposes, and 30.1 per cent for state functions. The proportion is approximately the same for the fiscal year, 1929-30.

After the collation of its data, and its careful analysis, the state tax committee adopted a detail body of recommendations to the legislature, directed both toward shifting the incidence of taxation in the state, discovering new sources of revenue for state support, and putting a stop to the rising tide of local costs.

Recommendations Submitted.

The outstanding governmental reforms recommended were as follows:

We recommend that the general assembly enact a thorough-going state income tax, both as means of equalizing the present faulty distribution of the burden of state support, and as a very necessary step toward replacing revenue which the state will lose through the elimination of all state ad valorem tax receipts, as contemplated under present legislation. In regard to Tennessee constitutional aspects, it is notable that in many states, the constitutions of which contain provisions insisting that all property be taxed at the same rate, income taxes have gone the less been successfully established, the supreme courts of those states holding that income is not property, so far as the taxation clauses of the constitutions of those states contemplate.

We recommend a franchise tax on the gross operating revenues of steam railways and public utilities, the amount derived from which shall at least equal the ad valorem taxes now paid by these companies toward state, as distinct from city and county support.

We recommended the abolition of the present system of privilege and license taxes upon merchants. As a revenue measure, this is a poorly devised makeshift, without relationship to the wealth or income of the taxpayer. It is the most unjust of the types of taxation now relied upon for state support. One cannot fail to be impressed with the unsatisfactory nature of the whole structure of license and privilege taxes. Such a system inevitably violates sound principles of proportioning tax burden so the wealth and income of, and the service rendered by government to, persons paying imposts so haphazardly imposed. Tennessee should abolish these license and privilege taxes, except in so far as their retention is considered desirable for regulatory or repressive purposes. Revenues thus eliminated from the state's budget should be replaced either by the receipts from a state income tax, or by a small mercantile excise tax.

Similarly, the administration of the merchants' ad valorem tax, on average stocks of goods on hand, is negligently designed and inefficiently administered. There is no sound reason why the assessment and collection of this tax should be in the hands of county court clerks. The agencies for ad valorem real estate taxation should also handle the merchants' ad valorem taxation task. The same recommendation is made with regard to the administration of the assessment and collection of privilege taxes, in so far as that system is retained. County tax assessors should assess all taxes not handled by the railway and public utilities commission. County trustees should receive and disburse, on proper warrant, all public funds. There is a great need for the concentration of tax administration and revenue collection throughout the counties of the state.

One of the outstanding needs of Tennessee is the establishment of a real state tax commission. Earnest and continued study and control of our tax problems by a public authority armed with rights of examination and subpeona is indispensible if Tennessee is ever to escape from her present lamentable state.

We recommend that the state tax commission, undertake among its early studies, and make recommendations upon the following phases of our tax problem:

(a) Methods of assessments and collection of the merchants' ad valorem taxes.

(b) The entire system of privilege taxes.

(c) The desirability of the segregation of sources of tax income for the various governmental entities and a thorough-going reclassification of property for taxation.

We recommend that the present state budget law be enforced upon the state highway department. At present this department, spending more than 63 per cent of the revenues of the state, does not include its estimates in the budget, and is in practice not controlled by the budget law. A competent study of highway finance is badly needed. Upon its creation, the state tax commission should undertake this study. More than this, standards need to be established for highway construction, under which ascertained economic need shall be the test of the type of highway built. The types of roads to be built should be classified in accordance with their traffic load.

Safeguard for Bonds.

We recommend the adoption of a general safeguard in regard to the issuance of bonds. Bond issuance, by cities and counties, except for refunding existing bond issues, should be illegal unless there has been a prior ratification of the proposed issue at a public election, of which notice has been duly given. No bond issue should be considered as having carried at such election unless the total number of those voting in this bond election should equal a definite percentage, to govern in all such bond elections, of the number voting in the last preceding regular general election for the political unit in question. The percentage necessary should be established by general statute.

We recommend that the issuance of long-term bonds on a sinking fund redemption plan by the state or any of its governmental subdivisions be henceforth and forever prohibited, substituting therefor the issuance of serial bonds, so that a proportionate amount of the total bond issue would become automatically due and payable each year. The adoption of such a system would eliminate the necessity for intricate actuarial calculations, as well as the possibility of overissue. We also recommend a thorough-going study by competent actuaries of the present condition of all state, county and city sinking funs, and of those of school and other special taxing districts, in order that their true condition may be at once determined, and measures promptly taken for their rehabilitation.

There is need for a thorough revision of the state's present assessment machinery. One of the early tasks of the state tax commission should be a careful study of our present assessment laws and practices, with the view to their modernization, simplification and increased efficiency. In the interim, we suggest the grading of the counties of the state, so that counties over 60,000 population can install a scientific system of urban property valuation, such as the lot and block system.

Repeal of the state land tax will not affect state revenue until the tax-receiving year of 1932. Relief of the farmer, the chief reason assigned for this repeal, amounts to but $1,000,000 out of a total of $3,500,000 of taxes thus to be released. While in theory agreeing that the ad valorem tax is a less desirable one for sustaining state costs than an income tax, we foresee that the farmer will not receive even this $1,000,000 reduction in his tax bill unless local taxing authorities are prevented from increasing their own local ad valorem rates upon him to such a point as to absorb the entire amount to be saved by state relief.

The facts revealed in our study of local governmental costs, coupled with striking instances of mal-administration and inefficiency on the part of some local officials, demand a definite program for relief. To secure economy and administrative efficiency and to conserve the time and energy of the taxpayer, we recommend a concentration of the county revenue agencies in the office of the county trustee.

We recommend legislation to secure uniformity in fiscal years for the state, counties and cities, preferably coinciding with the calendar year, so that budget estimates may be made upon comparable basis.

We recommend an act applying to all counties in the state, establishing county budget commissions, the duty of which should be annually to adopt a budget and to recommend the county tax rate. This budget should be submitted to the county court, which should have the power to approve it or reduce items therein, but not to increase it.

Further to implement the agencies of local control over local taxes, we recommend the enactment of a statute making it mandatory upon any local public authority, city or county, to give public notice by publication in a newspaper in its district, 30 days in advance to any contemplated increase in the tax rate for the local authority in question, of its intention. In addition to giving formal notice of a planned tax increase, the local authority should be required to hold a public session, at which the officials responsible will state reasons for the proposed tax increase, and afford opportunity for public discussion and protest. The statute should provide that certificates of compliance with these formalities must be dispatched to the secretary of the state tax commission, and that no tax rate representing an increase over the rate for the year before shall be valid or collectable unless this process of publication, hearing and certificate has been completed.

There is great need for reasonable uniformity of accounting practices in all counties in the state. We therefore recommend that a classification of counties be made on the basis of populations of 10,000 to 25,000; 25,000 to 50,000; 50,000 or more. After such classification, bookkeeping forms should be prescribed by the state tax commission for each of the three classes of counties, and the officials of these counties required to use the prescribed forms, under penalty for non-compliance. Such books and forms should be furnished to the counties at cost.

We recommend that the cities and counties be required to render complete and accurate reports on receipts, disbursements, debts, conditions of sinking funds and other relevant data to some central agency, preferably the state tax commission. Such reports, which should be published annually by the state, should furnish the factual basis for comparison of local government taxes and cost of operation.

State Audits of Counties.

We recommend a thorough-going reorganization of the present system of the state auditors of county accounts. To provide for the additional work that these auditors should perform, we would recommend a limited addition to the staff. To remove insofar as possible the pernicious political activities of some staff members of the state and county auditors, selection should be based upon character and fitness of the applicant. Such criteria might readily be established by the state tax commission, in collaboration with the state board of accountancy.

While the root cause of a large part of the county mal-administration is fiscal in its nature, many other stubborn problems are encountered by local officials. Some such agency as the North Carolina county advisory commission might well be established as an adjunct to the state tax commission, or one of its required services, to afford a central clearing house of information, to advise and improve procedural techniques in county administration and to act as "guide, philosopher and friend" to the frequently puzzled local officials.

One of the improvements which could be made in local government is the increase of the area of local administration. With the communication and transportation advantages of the past two decades, significantly increased areas can be administered with the same personnel and cost. Tennessee now has 95 counties, at least a third of these are of such small areas and small value that even the type of government they have is a fearful burden for their citizens to maintain. A thorough-going program of county consolidation might contribute as much toward reducing the cost of local government in Tennessee as probably any other one step that the state could take. We recommend, therefore, the enactment of general legislation looking toward voluntary county consolidations, with the ultimate hope of reducing the total number of counties in Tennessee to not more than 60.

We recommend the organization of a state taxpayers' association, representing all sections of the state, for the purpose of uniting taxpayers of Tennessee and directing their efforts toward the achievement of a common program. Such an organization would also be tremendous assistance to local taxpayer groups throughout the state, and would serve as a clearing house of information, and a needed source of sound advice and suggestion. The work which has been inaugurated by this committee should grow into a permanent, adequately financed organization to fulfill this responsibility.

Editorial Is Praised By Navy Commander

Editor Constitution: Your editorial, "Defense Service Pay," discusses a subject of vital importance to all members of the armed forces of our country and one which will probably come before the next congress for action.

It is indeed a gratification to know that such a paper as The Constitution sees fit to cover this question editorially, and I take this opportunity of thanking you for your efforts to bring this condition of service pay to the attention of the great number of readers of The Constitution.

I hope that every one of Georgia's senators and congressmen will have an opportunity to read this editorial.

The Village Poet

She knows not that some sonnets are Spenserian,
While others are Shakespearean, and such;
If odes consist of strophe, antistrophe,
And epode—to her it is all Dutch.

But when she walks out in the autumn wildwood,
And see the color God has painted there,
She feels as Homer when he wrote The Iliad;
For poetry's just a nature-lover's prayer.

24-County State Is Suggested by Atlantan As Way to More Economical Government

Plan of county consolidation suggested by T. P. Marshall, of Atlanta, under which the number of counties in Georgia would be reduced from 161 to 24. County seats of new counties are indicated by stars.

Consolidations that would reduce the number of counties in Georgia from 161 to 24 are suggested in a statement made Saturday by T. P. Marshall, well-known Atlantan, whose business takes him frequently into every section of the state.

In his statement, Mr. Marshall says:

"No business enterprise could possibly exist if operated under a haphazard, burdensome, top-heavy system as we are now laboring under in the state of Georgia. We are constantly falling behind year after year. The taxpayers are already burdened almost to the point of confiscation, our only means of raising revenue, yet we are unable to meet the running expenses of the counties and state.

"Our financial condition is out of date. It should be revised to meet the needs of 1931. We need a new charter, we must reduce the expenses of operating the state. We must face the issue sooner or later or go bankrupt.

"To bring about efficient economy we should go to the bottom of our troubles and see just why the great state of Georgia is making such a poor record. After we have found the trouble, we should be patriotic enough and have enough love for our beautiful state to correct the evil that is holding her so near the bottom of our sister states.

"We have 161 counties. In this day with good roads, automobiles and telephones we are burdening the state with unnecessary expense. It is not efficient economy.

"My business takes me by automobile throughout the state several times a year. From the observations I have made on these trips I have prepared a tentative map showing how easy it would be to reduce the counties of the state to 24 in number—and yet have each county site in easy reaching distance of every citizen in the county. There are only a few instances where the distance from a county seat exceeds 50 miles. There is no necessity in this day and time to have such small counties.

"Each county as a unit is an expensive proposition. Ninety-eight counties last year did not meet their running expenses. How long can we keep this up? If we consolidate we reduce operating expenses without losing efficiency.

"I have been told by men who are in position to know that in the event the counties are merged to 24 the saving to the state each year would be around $25,000,000. That would mean reduced taxes, school teachers paid monthly, more money for schools, sanitarium and a system of roads second to none. That would be efficient economy and Georgia could justly revel in peace, prosperity and progress.

"The following table shows the names of the counties under the suggested plan of consolidation and gives the number of counties as now which would be included in each of the new counties. It also gives the square miles, population, number of farms and taxable worth of each of the proposed new counties."

Is It Right To Deprive Birds of Their Freedom?

Editor Constitution: I recently heard of a lady who owned a pet bird who went one morning shopping in her car. She was injured in an accident and carried unconscious to the hospital where she died a few days later. When the house was entered the bird was found dead from starvation.

It sets one thinking whether it is right to deprive birds of their life in their own world in order to gratify a selfish pleasure in them. It is cruel. Many a little bird is very lonely. The care and kindness of a being of another order can never make up to the bird for the loss of freedom and the companionship of other birds. A caged bird does not live a natural life.

The Little Prisoner.

I am a bird in a gilded cage,
Warm is my home, and fair,
But I long for a flight in the sweet sunlight,
And the freedom of cold, pure air.

A bird deprived of its liberty,
Yearns with a passionate pain.
For the dear delight, of a morning flight,
Through clouds of mist and rain.

A bird remembers the open sky,
And ever its spirit grieves,
For the song of its mate, and the ecstasy
Of a nest between the leaves.

O, for a hand to let me go,
Free of these prison bars,
To dip and fly in the sun-bright sky,
And nest in the cool of stars.

Brewton, of Atlanta, in the realm of legal philosophy, became known here Saturday in the receipt by Mr. Brewton of an invitation from Dr. Raymund Schmidt, of Leipzig, to establish an Atlanta chapter of the International Philosophic Society. Dr. Schmidt is editor of the Forum Philosophicum, published in Leipzig, which will carry in an early issue Mr. Brewton's new doctrine relating for the first time the sciences of law and metaphysics. The only American chapter of this society so far is the one in New York with headquarters at 1440 Broadway.

W. W. BREWTON.

The treatise Mr. Brewton is to publish in Forum Philosophicum, which publishes all contributions in two languages, German and English, is entiled, "The Transcendental Unity of Legal Conceptions." It was declared by him Saturday that this doctrine is to form the concluding portion of his projected work to be entitled, "The Philosophic Limit of Law," and will be published at an early date.

The leading contribution in the December issue of the Forum Philosophicum was by Dr. Albert Einstein on "Space, Ether and Field in Physics." Dr. Schmidt's communication stated that he expected to publish an issue of the magazine specially devoted to the philosophy of law, due to Mr. Brewton's speculations in that field.

Simultaneously with the invitation to establish an Atlanta chapter of the society, the objective of which is more fundamental international understanding through the interchange of philosophical thought, Mr. Brewton received an invitation from Dr. Heinrich F. Wolf, secretary of the New York chapter, to address that chapter on the subject with which he is to deal in the periodical, or upon some other aspect of his general subject. He stated that it was his purpose to make this address at an early date upon his doctrine that the science of law contains axioms as undeniable as those of mathematics.

Mr. Brewton contends that there is just as definite a science of law as a science of anything else, and that this legal science is established only by the examination of mental principles; consequently, that there is a distinct metaphysic of law. It is upon the comparison of mathematical and legal axioms, as discussed above, that he expects to address the New York chapter of the International Philosophic Society. Possibility of a metaphysic of law is the topic he discusses in the forthcoming issue of the Forum Philosophicum. His defense of the technicality appeared in November, 1928, in the Philosophical Review, published by the Sage School of Philosophy of Cornell University.

A Silver Lining

When hearts are filled with sadness,
And our heads in sorrow bowed,
Best it is then to remember
(When hovers near a dark storm-cloud
And erstwhile our blue sky dimmeth,
While for us the sun's not shining)
That, we know that all clouds lowering
Have for each a silver lining.

And lo! we see the silver lining,
When the clouds have passed away,
And realize how weak and sinful
For us to murmur o'er the way;
That when dark skies hover o'er us,
Even then 'tis best to cease repining,
For we know that all clouds lowering
Have for each a silver lining.

Improve "Back Roads," Urges R. F. D. Carrier

Editor Constitution: Your editorial "Pepping Up Rural Mails" was read with a very great degree of satisfaction. It is very gratifying to see an outstanding daily newspaper such as yours recognize the importance of the rural delivery service, and its significance to the great mass of common people served by it.

This 25,000,000 people is composed mostly of good, common, hard-working country people—farmers who constitute the "backbone" of the nation, yet in all probability the most neglected. It is possible for the farmer to live independently of all other classes, but the banker, merchant, railroad president and all others are dependent upon the products of the soil for the sustentation of life. The rural dweller is, therefore, entitled to the best service the government can give and the rural delivery service is practically the only governmental service with which the farmer comes in direct personal contact.

He is vitally interested in the rural delivery service that furnishes, in many instances, his greatest contact with the outside world; the service that brings his papers, magazines and personal messages to his door daily; the service that is a factor in the improvement of his roads.

While we are about the road building business, in all justice and fairness to the man who walks behind the plow, why not further improve his rural mail services by improving his roads, which will result in the improvement of conditions in general? When you condition the "back roads" of the state so that an "ordinary load may be easily and safely transported over them," as contemplated by the law, thereby giving the farmer an economical means of transporting his products to market, you will have taken a long stride in the direction of the much needed prosperity.

Bruce Crawford Sees New Year as Adventure

Crawford's Weekly has wabbled along, at times hopping and skipping, despite the depression. It has by turns known sackcloth and clover, overdrafts and balances, during the year just gone—as it died even in times of prosperity. In fact, hard times don't hurt us like they do some people, because we had rough sledding during prosperity and are used to tight situations. We see folks losing their nerve all about us, some suiciding, others voluntarily bankrupting and still others merely graying and wrinkling, but we go along with our seeming distemper, while at heart philosophically sweet. Of course we let out a wow of pessimism now and then, regarding the country's political and economic plight, and our shriek is mistaken by the Roanoke Times for individual, white-eyeing in the face of difficulty, but personally we are gluttonous for trouble.

So, with a look over the shoulder to a year of some achievement and the happiest 12 months of our life, we turn to a new year that is pregnant with change and high enterprise and enthusiasm engendered by new challenges.

It recalls the time, 15 years ago, when as a boy I started down a tortuous river in a small boat. "Watch out for the shoals and the rocks!" old-timers warned from the banks. Instead of being frightened into giving up the venture, I was challenged, exhilarated and lured on by the danger ahead. Some mean shoals were passed through and some great boulders were dodged as I drifted down the raging stream in the ridiculously small bateau. But I did not come to the "impassable" places. The cautious old-timers on the shores had magnified the treachery of the river, and I was somewhat disappointed not to encounter a few superlative thrills.

Thus the New Year beckons. It is an unknown river plunging through perilous gorges and over thundering falls. Let's voyage it with high heart, my friends, courageously tackling the new problems encountered, daring to adopt radical tactics if need be, throwing precedent overboard when common sense counsels better measures, and maybe there will be fewer wrecks than there have been in all our past voyaging.—Crawford's Weekly, Norton, Va.

Rose Apart

From where did you come, O! Rose apart,
With the tint of dawn on your curled leaf,
And the glow of the sun in your heart!
In royal raiment, beautiful, . . . brief!
Did you fall from some celestial clime?
When sunset shades into evening gloam,
That nearest star—Which I see, sometime—
Beneath the moon, perhaps, is your home!
You're out of place in this world of ours,
Where earth-worms burrow, and cut, and sting,
Where weeds close over the fragile flowers,
And the subtle spiders weave and swing.

Your mission is holy,—Rose of dawn!
Were you sent by a sailor, lost at sea?
A boy "gone west" near the bleeding Marne?
An immortal lad of infantry,
For I catch their message on your breath,
And your silent words are clearer still—
I feel in your fragrance, there is no death,
And I see in your beauty, God's will.

Old Houses

They are not dead, these decrepit old houses
Standing dismal and gray against the years;
They reach out gaunt hands through the silence,
Grasping, eager for laughter, for tears.
They are not dead! They go through bleak winters,
Dreaming softly of summer's warm sky;
Ah, no chilly white hand of the winter
Can intrude where those dream shadows lie.
They are not dead, and forever and ever,
Though no homefires will burn there again,
They'll bring glimpses of childhood and laughter
To revive the tired hearts of old men.

DR. GEORGE KAHN OPENS IN NEW SHOP

Dr. George S. Kahn, eyesight specialist, who has been located in Jacobs' Pharmacy Company's main store for the past five years, has opened a modern and up-to-date exclusive optical shop at 1-2 Peachtree street on the viaduct. Attracting much attention to the shop is a huge electric sign in the shape of a pair of glasses which extends all the way across the sidewalk. Dr. Kahn has been located in Atlanta for 18 years and has fitted more than 100,000 pairs of eyes.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

JANNINGS, DIETRICH IN "THE BLUE ANGEL" AT GEORGIA

All-Star Vaudeville Program Is Stage Offering This Week

Atlanta is to see this week, at the Georgia theater, Emil Jannings and Marlene Dietrich in the talking picture that has caused more favorable comment than anything produced this season, "The Blue Angel." This is Jannings' first picture in sound and the great star is said to be even more impressive now than he was in the days of the silent screen. Marlene Dietrich made her American debut recently in "Morocco" in which she scored perhaps the greatest personal triumph ever achieved on a first picture appearance.

On the stage the Georgia offers four acts of RKO vaudeville any one of which can reasonably bid for headline honors.

A brilliant satire on life in the movie colony at Hollywood is given in the musical comedy "The Hollywood Rush," presented by Casa and Lehn and assisted by Miss Georgette, Yvonne Monoff and the Co-ed Sisters.

Then there is Harry Ward and Joe Van, one of the greatest comedy and music teams on the stage today. They enact the role of strolling players and it is said that they would be acclaimed as two of the greatest of character comedians if the genius of their musicianship didn't even transcend their humor abilities.

Alice and Sonny Lamont, assisted by Pa and Ma Lamont, present an act that includes a little of most everything that is popular on the variety stage. They walk the wire, dance, do acrobatics and tumbling and with it all present a brand of comedy that is peculiarly their own. Incidentally, Alice weighs something less than 100 pounds while Sonny tips the scales at 250. Despite this he is a really graceful dancer.

The vaudeville program is completed by Fleurette Joeffric, perhaps the most popular coloratura sporano now before the theatergoing public. She will be remembered for her songs when she was with Harry Lauder in his most recent American tour. Her voice is notable not only for range and power but for the human richness of her tone also.

"The Blue Angel" tells the story of a respected college professor who becomes infatuated with an irresponsible cabaret and carnival singer and the degradation that follows his marriage to the woman. He finally reaches the lowest depths when he comes back to the college town, nothing but a despised, stupid clown with the traveling troupe.

Of this story Jannings, by the inimitable power of his acting, makes one of the most intensely emotional dramas the screen has yet produced. He builds up the sheer, compelling drama of the character's descent into ignominy with a power that holds the audience breathless and entranced to the final inevitable finish.

Conductor Joe Bell has a specially arranged overture number for the Georgia grand orchestra while Winton Dobbs has a couple of new song hits on which to exercise his popular tenor crooner. Selected short screen subjects, including a cartoon comedy and the latest airplane edition of Paramount Sound News complete the program.

Some Important Offerings of the Week on Local Screens

In the upper left of the above layout of pictures you see a scene from one of the greatest of recent talking pictures, D. W. Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln." Walter Huston, as Lincoln, and Una Merkel, as Ann Rutledge, are shown. Upper right ought to bring a grin of delight to your lips. It signalizes the reuniting of Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell as co-stars in "The Man Who Came Back" at the Fox. Lower left shows Bob Woolsey and Bert Wheeler in "Hook, Line and Sinker," billed for the Capitol. The saucy lady in the center is Marlene Dietrich, who is with Emil Jannings at the Georgia in "The Blue Angel." Lower right is a scene from "The Office Wife," first picture under the new management and policy at the Rialto. At the bottom, at left, Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery are shown in "Min and Bill," which is at the Grand, and at the right is Walter Huston in "The Virtuous Sin," coming to the Cameo.

Capitol Offers BoudoirDiplomat With Ian Keith

"Hook, Line and Sinker" Will Open Thursday at Local Playhouse.

Betty Compson, who appears in a leading role of "The Boudoir Diplomat," the sparkling Universal comedy drama of the love affairs of a gay nobleman, which is now playing at the R. K. O.-Capitol theater, was born far from the studio lights of Hollywood—to be exact, in the little village of Beaver, Utah.

When Betty was 15 years old she started out from Salt Lake City on a vaudeville tour as a violinist, and as soon as she reached Los Angeles was promptly engaged by Universal to appear in one-reel comedies. Her first great success was in "The Miracle Man," and after the release of this picture she was firmly established as a star, appearing in "Kick In," "The Little Minister," "To Have and To Hold" and other important productions.

She has been highly successful in talking pictures, and has recently been seen in "Wenny River," "The Barker," "Street Girl," "Isle of Escape," "The Case of Sergeant Grischa" and others.

Radio Pictures' "Hook, Line and Sinker," starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, which opens at the Capitol theater, aims to please!

For the romantic-minded there is the tender love affair between Bert Wheeler and petite Dorothy Lee.

Amos 'n' Andy Film On Empire Program

"Check and Double Check," presenting Amos 'n' Andy, radio stars, comes to the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, Monday and Tuesday. The stars are supported by a "white face" cast, including Sue Carol, Irene Rich, Charles Morton and Rita LaRoy. Another chapter of the western serial, "The Phantom of the West," will be an added feature.

Wednesday brings the Movietone musical romance, "Women Everywhere," with J. Harold Murray and Fifi Dorsay. It is a musical romance of Morocco and the Foreign Legion.

United States marines on a rampage in the grass skirt belt, or "Leather-Necking," will be the attraction on Thursday. Featuring Irene Dunn, Ken Murray, Louise Fazenda, Lilyan Tashman, Ned Sparks, Benny Rubin, Eddie Foy, Jr., and Rita LaRoy, this film deals with the activities of four fighting fools of the "Soldiers of the Sea." The romantic comedy, "Head's Up," with Charles Rogers, Helen Kane and Victor Moore will be the offering on Friday. "Amateur Nite" contest will be staged at 8 o'clock. Saturday's feature will be Hoot Gibson in "Trigger Tricks," also "The Indians Are Coming."

Cameo Program For Week Lists Big Attractions

"Men of the North," "The Virtuous Sin" and "Billy the Kid," on the Cameo program for this week, give this popular little theater another week of strong attractions.

"Men of the North," which shows Monday and Tuesday, takes all the elements of a mystery play and unfolds them in the French Canadian wilds, in gorgeous settings of snow-clad mountains. Gilbert Roland and Barbara Leonard are seen in the leading roles.

One of the most powerful pieces of character study ever seen on the talking screen is to be found in the work of Walter Huston, as General Gregori Platoff, central character in "The Virtuous Sin," the Wednesday and Thursday offering. This picture is one of the most daring and original stories ever played before the cameras. Playing opposite Mr. Huston is Kay Francis, with her calm and deep-running type of sex appeal.

"Billy the Kid," which shows Friday and Saturday, relates the stirring happenings at Lincoln, New Mexico, during the famous "cattlemen's war" of 1878, 1879 and 1880. John Mack Brown plays "The Kid" and Wallace Beery gives another of his inimitable characterizations as Sheriff Garrett. Kay Johnson has the feminine lead. Karl Dane is seen as the comic cowboy Swenson.

"The Spoilers" Opens Week at DeKalb

Monday and Tuesday, at the DeKalb, Gary Cooper will open the week's entertainment in "The Spoilers," one of Rex Beach's mightiest outdoor dramas that is filled with action and entertainment.

Wednesday, John Boles will be seen and heard again in "Captain of the Guard." Those who heard him in "The Desert Song" will acclaim him this time as even greater than before.

Thursday and Friday, mystery, spooky and thrilling times will be had when "The Cat Creeps" will be shown.

Saturday, William Haines, the screen's greatest cutup, will be shown in "Way Out West." Don't fail to see William as a rough and tough cowboy.

There are now four women, who, though shunned by the commercial theater managers of Broadway as lacking in ability to be starred, have nevertheless climbed to the top of their profession single-handed. They are Ruth Draper, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Diana Gordon and Miriam Marmein. These women have frequently played to capacity audiences, with themselves in single-role plays, Imitations and pantomimes.

EVIDENTLY HAIR-MINDED.

It may have been Clara Bow's copper-colored hair that inspired the press agent of "Hell's Angels" to designate Jean Harlow as a platinum blonde.

"Tonight and You" is a heavy date for the boy friend and his girl at the movies.

"Madame Satan" delayed her advent until she could talk.

Lew Cody Stages 'Come-Back' Because He Is Sincere Soul

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 17.—(NANA)—When the comebacks of 1930 are all sorted out and pigeonholed, Lew Cody's will remain the most sensational:

He came back out of silence—out of sickness—out of the sort of jinx which seemed to have fallen on his vintage of players. He came back to play opposite Gloria Swanson when that artist reached the dizziest height she had yet attained. And his performance stands out as the best one in that picture. I refer to "What a Widow."

Since then Lew Cody has made four or five talkies. He is constantly in demand and for the best pictures that are being turned out of Hollywood. Few of them have been released as yet. It takes a long time for the gelatine mills to release their grist.

But talking to Lew Cody about pictures then and now—about stories and players and all the detail that goes to the making of a good picture—you understand how it is that he came back and how it is that he will remain in the place he has resumed as long as he is willing to continue in professional life.

Balanced Art.

Lew Cody belongs to what we call the "standard product" of the movies. Neither bad stories, nor stupid direction, nor hopeless dialogue can destroy him. He has a thoroughly balanced art which rises superior to such things and which always gives us a satisfying performance.

A man makes his name doing a certain type of work and it is difficult for him to essay other roles, for the simple reason that he doesn't get a chance to do so. In "What a Widow" Lew Cody had the lovableness which is his outstanding characteristic: The role hit nearer to the core of the man than most of the things he has done through the years.

Talk to him as twilight gathers along the hills. The names of the people he cares for most are an interesting index to his own personality. On the table a funny, ugly postcard with Christmas greetings. Odd O. McIntyre's idea of a greeting for Lew Cody. His reminiscences of travel include priceless days in Paris with the McIntyres, fascinating recollections of London in which Ray Long, Frazier Hunt, Jim Quirk and a long list of journalists, authors, actors and artists of various sorts all form part of the fabric of his adventures.

Same Old Friends.

The same nine or ten people who stood before the camera of the funny little Hollywood which was destined to spawn one of the world's three most tremendous industries—still gather at his house. Roscoe Arbuckle is among them. They seldom have a civil word to say to one another, but they have fed on abuse for many years—and they come back for more.

Lew Cody deplores the sharp differentiation between the stage and the screen. He points out that from Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford down to the most recent players, with the exception of the Talmadge girls and a few others, the people of the screen are originally of the stage. The two are so interrelated, in his opinion, that there is no need for this comparison. Movies always used lines, but those lines were not recorded—hence the players had no reason to consider their tones—merely their facial expressions.

Lew Cody believes that it is almost impossible to make a talkie which will please your banker and your cook. And yet that is exactly what producers are trying to do today. He thinks that in trying to please one you possibly create an offense for the other. And he looks toward a time when there will be varying types of pictures made, exactly as there are differing types of plays, with each catering to its own particular group audiences. When this comes theaters for talking pictures will be smaller. And actors and actresses, directors, authors and supervisors will be free of the horrible strain of trying to achieve the impossible.

"You can't fool all the people all the time" as an astute American once said. And there will be better pictures when we stop trying to do just that and proceed on the basis of the story—not with the theory of intriguing every sex and type and class that may wander into a theater holding three or four thousand souls or more.

There is always a reason for continued success. Anyone may flash into a position of greatness through a fluke. But when a player keeps his head above water and swims steadily on through all the changes and adverse conditions which may beset an artistic life, it comes down to this:

GAYNOR AND FARRELL TOGETHER AGAIN ON FOX SCREEN

Greatest Lovers of Filmdom Stars in 'Man Who Came Back'

The talking screen's greatest pair of lovers are reunited in "The Man Who Came Back," tremendous thriller which is the chief attraction at the Fox theater this week. Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor play the leading roles and in this, their first picture together since "Sunnyside Up" and "High Society Blues," they do without doubt the finest work of their respective careers. The picture is an intensely human story of degradation and regeneration and it offers the two stars opportunity to show that they are capable of brilliant work in highly emotional roles. An opportunity which they seize to the full.

On the stage the Fox offering is Fanchon and Marco's "Idea in Blue." It is probably the most colorful and scintillating thing the famous producing team has done in regard to stage settings and costumes. The Sunkist ballet wears designs in dress and costume that are nothing short of dazzling in their beauty, while the scenery is literally gorgeous in its brilliance.

The "Idea in Blue" is also well supplied with principals. These include Renoff and Renova, America's premiere dancing team, who are co-featured with Mitzi Mayfair, a little girl still in her 'teens, whose charm and vivacity make of her dances literal dreams of delight. It is especially fitting that she should be on the same program with the dainty and lovable Janet Gaynor.

Harry Savoy in his famous "So What" act and Alex Callam, the musical comedy star, are other outstanding figures on the stage. Webster and Marino are also in the company with their sensational ballet comique.

Thee story of "The Man Who Came Back" tells of a young son of wealth who sinks to the utmost depths of degradation. He is banished from New York by his father and sent to San Francisco, where he continues his career of dissipation. Faced with arrest for forging $12,000 in checks on his father, he is offered a last chance to come back by going to Shanghai. He has, in San Francisco, met a little cabaret singer who has brought to him his first glimpse of true love and he is on the verge of marrying her, after refusing to go to Shanghai, when he is kidnaped and taken there against his will.

He sinks still lower in life and finally meets Angie, the cabaret singer, in one of the vilest imaginable of opium dens. He is saved from strangling her at the critical moment and the two together start out to climb back to decency. A plantation in Honolulu is their first step forward and here they almost crash again, but learn the true depth of their love. The boy goes back to New York to test his manhood by six months alone and the picture thenceforward moves rapidly to a smashing and moving climax that leaves every audience happy and delighted with the production.

Conductor Enrico Leide has another of his special arrangements of light opera favorites for the Fox orchestra while Al Evans at the organ and Mel Ruick and his Mad Musicians have offerings that will enhance their already tremendous reputations as purveyors of popular music. Carefully selected short subjects, including the latest Movietone News, complete the program.

Ruth Chatterton Seen In Alamo 2 Feature

Ruth Chatterton, whose dramatic roles such as those in "Madame X," are famous on the screen, veers to comedy in "The Lady of Scandal," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Frederick Lonsdale stage hit, "The High Road," which will appear Monday at the Alamo No. 2 theater. She plays a musical comedy actress who upsets staid London society. Basil Rathbone plays the hero and Ralph Forbes, Nance O'Neil, Herbert Bunston, Fred Kerr, MacKenzie Ward and others of note are in the cast. Sidney Franklin directed.

Buckhead Offers Excellent Program

"The Dancers," a Fox Movietone drama of youth, with Lois Moran and Phillips Holmes, will be shown at the Buckhead theater Monday and Tuesday. Dolores Del Rio and Edmund Lowe are co-starred in "The Bad One," a thrilling story of an American sailor in foreign ports. This picture will show Wednesday.

"Under a Texas Moon," a Technicolor picture, with a cast headed by Frank Fay and Raquel Torres, is the attraction for Thursday and Friday. Victor McLaglen and Lilyan Tashman will be the feature players in "On the Level," screen feature which shows Saturday. Other features complete an excellent bill.

Few exceed the speed limit on "The Road Called Straight."

'The Office Wife' Opening Picture At Rialto Theater

Playhouse Also Offers Stage Shows Under New Policy.

Its new opening successfully received, the Rialto theater enters its second phase of novel attractions with a gala midnight show slated for one minute past midnight tonight.

Audiences viewing the Saturday opening shows hailed with heartening applause the efforts of the "Style Shoppe," stage artists, as well as the featured screen offering, "The Office Wife," with Lewis Stone and Dorothy Mackaill. Under the management of I. P. Allen a new policy has been adopted calling for featured films and regular stage shows of the musical comedy type each week with low prices prevailing day and evening.

Paul Reno, widely known in theatrical circles, has assembled a group of 25 talented artists who will unfurl a new theatrical sketch replete with variety and humor each week.

The story of "The Office Wife," the Warner Brothers' talking picture now playing on the Rialto screen, is one that should interest every wife and husband, as well as the younger element. Lewis Stone, as president of a large publishing company, believed that every wife is jealous of her husband's secretary, and every secretary jealous of the wife. He marries and finds out many peculiar facts. While he is experimenting with his secretary his wife is carrying on a flirtation with someone else and naturally many amusing situations arise. It is an intricate situation that finally is solved after many delightful feet of talking film.

Coleman Picture Tops Tenth Street Program

"Raffles," a thrilling story of life and love in the underworld, with Ronald Colman and Kay Francis, is the feature attraction offered at the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday. A comedy of whirlwinds and wows, entitled "Soup to Nuts," with Stanly Smith, is the feature for Wednesday.

Milton Sills, Janet Keith and Raymond Hackett will be seen and heard in "The Sea Wolf" Thursday and Friday. A carnival barker trying to cheat a group of cowboys is the story in "Way Out West," which will be shown Saturday. William Haines and Leila Hyams are the stars in this picture.

"Min and Bill" Here All Week At the Grand

"Min and Bill," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer laugh sensation, will be the feature attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week. On its initial showing in Atlanta the picture met with such success that the management at the Grand has decided to play the production for six full days.

Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery, two of the best-known comedians of the stage and screen, are the feature players in the comedy which was taken from the sensational story, "Dark Star." Dorothy Jordan and Marjorie Rambeau are seen in the supporting cast.

"Min and Bill" is a very natural tale of a callous middle-age woman and a swearing, beer-drinking, rollicking sailor, who are naturally attracted to one another. Min runs a wharf boarding house and Bill sails a fish boat. At the seaside hotel is found Nancy, a surprisingly beautiful young girl, who has been raised to young womanhood by the apparently hard-hearted Min.

At the age when most girls attract and are similarly attracted by young men, Nancy falls in love with the first sailor who kisses her. Realizing that the naive girl is about to go the way of most of the women who inhabit her hotel, Min dispatches her ward off to the superintendent of the city school's home, much against the girl's wishes.

An old desire to return to the rough scenes of the seaside hotel nearly causes Nancy to give up a chance to go away to an eastern school, but the ever-sagacious Min, in one of the most impressive parts of the picture, sees to it that Nancy takes no such step.

Marjorie Rambeau, long known as one of the most talented character actresses of the legitimate screen, makes her talkie debut in "Min and Bill." She plays the part of an old sailor's sweetheart, who breezes into the climax of the play and interrupts things in violent manner.

Passion, hate and jealousy infuse themselves in the closing scenes and establish the melodramatic success of "Min and Bill."

Jack Oakie Star For First Half Paramount Week

Griffith's Classic, "Abraham Lincoln," With Walter Huston, Opens Run on Thursday.

With D. W. Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln," in which Walter Huston wins undying fame by his delineation of the title role, and with Jack Oakie's new—and best—feature comedy, billed for their two main attractions this week, patrons of the Paramount theater are promised exceptional and widely divergent pieces of entertainment.

The "Abraham Lincoln" picture comes for the last three days of the week, opening its run on Thursday while "The Gang Buster," the Oakie offering, will be on the screen for the three days beginning Monday.

The Oakie attraction deals with the experiences of a young insurance salesman from Arkansas who goes to New York to try and get into big-time insurance selling. He proceeds to get tangled up with one of the big city's worst gangs and tries to sell life insurance to gangsters and liquor runners, each of his prospects being quickly "taken for a ride."

How he meets "the girl" and how he eventually foils the bloodthirsty and ruthless gang leader provides unlimited opportunity for Oakie's unique brand of humor. It is rated by critics as a better picture than any of the last half dozen in which Oakie has starred. The supporting cast includes Jean Arthur, William Boyd, Albert Conti, Tom Kennedy, Constantin Romanoff, Eddie Dunn and other well-known players.

"Abraham Lincoln" has already been acclaimed by all national critics as one of the few classic pictures of the year. Made with the directorial genius of Griffith, it is a vivid picturization of the life story of great president. It opens with brief sequences showing the growing enmity between north and south before the birth of Lincoln. It shows the little log home on the night of his birth and deals wonderfully with his early life and gradual rise to prominence.

Ann Rutledge, the girl Lincoln loved but who died before they could marry, is delightfully portrayed by Una Merkel, while the character of Mary Todd, who he eventually married, is vividly drawn by Kay Hammond.

Never has the advantage of sound and dialogue been more convincingly demoustrated than in the debate scenes between Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, played by E. Alyn Warren. These debates are vivid, dramatic moments in the film, which would have been utterly impossible, even for Griffith, in the days of silent pictures.

Prominent in the cast are Lucille LaVerne, Jason Robards, Ian Keith, Fred Warren, Frank Campeau, Hobart Bosworth, Henry B. Walthall, etc. But it is primarily the inspired work of Walter Huston in the title role and the marvelous directing of Griffith that make the picture so great.

In addition to the feature attractions the two programs at the Paramount for the week will include selected short subjects, with cartoon comedies, novel ideas and Paramount Sound News releases.

Atlanta's theaters seem to be undergoing one of the all-too-frequent series of managerial changes this week.

Emmett Rogers, Publix city manager for several months, has been transferred to the post of district manager for Tennessee. One of the best and most likeable theater men Atlanta ever knew goes from us when Emmett leaves.

"Doc" Wadkins, who has been manager at the Paramount, also goes to Tennessee, taking charge of the Publix houses in Chattanooga. "Doc" is another man Atlanta hates to lose but he and Emmett like each other so well they are delighted to go to Tennessee together.

Ed Beck, manager of the Georgia, moves over to the Paramount and a new manager, of the well known name of Smith, comes to the city to direct the destinies of the former house.

Also note a change in management at the Capitol. John Thoma has already left for a new job with Universal at their California studios through his successor here has not yet been announced.

And the new proprietor of the Rialto, I. P. Allen, was announced last Sunday. Mr. Allen launched the first of his combination screen and stage programs Saturday and, while it is too early when this is written to have received reports on the show, here's wishing him all kinds and quantities of success.

During the week passed a most delightful young lady visited the corner from which this department is conducted. She is Miss Mabel Francis Butner, of Atlanta, daughter of Mrs. Cleo V. Butner. Miss Butner has been in Hollywood for the past four years and has appeared in small roles in many pictures. She was in the Talmadge production of "DuBarry" that played the Paramount last week, by the way.

Miss Butner is known as "Jeanne Butner" around the studios, having adopted a one-syllable Christian name for her stage work.

She confessed that she had intended, when she left Hollywood before Christmas, to come back to Atlanta to stay, but says now she is so homesick for the studios that she has decided to go back to the coast. She will leave about February 1.

Must give a paragraph to tell Manager Carter Barron just how much this column appreciates the unusual group of screen attractions he has given Atlanta during Loew's January Festival. It is doubtful if local theatergoers have ever been blessed with a greater or more entertaining group of screen features.

Even the huge seating capacity of the Fox will undoubtedly be taxed to its utmost this week for "The Man Who Came Back." This feature can be recommended without qualification to everybody. And the fact that it brings Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell together again as co-stars is enough to make it a magnet to draw every movie fan in the city to the theater during the week.

There is what must be a unique situation occurring just at this time on the legitimate stage.

Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman are joint authors of "Once in a Lifetime," the stage satire on the talkies which has enjoyed phenomenal success on Broadway. Neither have had any acting experience to speak of. Yet Kaufman is playing the role of Lawrence Vail, the disgruntled playwright, in the Broadway productions and Hart is playing the same role in the Pacific coast production of the play.

Two authors gone stage struck, probably.

Manager Alpha Fowler, of the Empire theater at the corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, is showing that epic of the U. S. Marines, "Leather-Necking," on Thursday. He has issued a general invitation to all ex-marines and all members of the Marcus W. Beck Jr. detachment of the U. S. Marine Corps League of Atlanta to be his guests at the theater that day.

If you will take a piece of sincere advice, reserve Wednesday night this week. Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi will dance that night at the Woman's Club auditorium. Whether or not you enjoy the world's greatest and most sensational exponents of dancing or not, you should without question see the recital. There is only one adjective to describe its inevitable effect. You'll be astounded.

This pair played fifteen recitals in New York last season and the theater there was sold out for every performance of the fifteen. They aroused the wildest enthusiasm ever accredited to their art. If Atlanta doesn't go en masse to this performance, in so far as the Woman's Club capacity will permit, Atlanta is missing something marvelous through her own fault.

World's Greatest Dancers Will Appear In Recital Here on Wednesday Evening

Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, greatest exponents of the modern dance, who appear in recital at the Woman's Club auditorium next Wednesday evening.

Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, who have just completed a series of dance recitals, numbering almost a score, in New York, which were marked by capacity audiences throughout, will appear in a selection of their finest dances at the Woman's Club auditorium next Wednesday night at 8:30.

Described by all critics of the terpsichorean art as the greatest dancers in the world today, this pair bring to Atlanta something entirely new and startling in their art. Their creations are utterly, startlingly modern and they have proven the sensation of every capital city in which they have appeared.

The New York Herald-Tribune, speaking of their recital in New York last January 20, said:

"For Mr. Kreutzberg, like all supreme artists, there is little to be said beyond the trite phases of unmodified enthusiasm. It is more inspiring to see him merely walk upon the stage than to witness a whole evening's performance by the average male dancer. He combines a grave and incisive intelligence with a powerful gift of projection, a clear vision with a lively imagination and all of these with a splendid physique and a technical facility which is actually lustrous.

"Miss Georgi is both talented and stimulating. Hers is a dynamic style of almost fierce intentness, a brusque, whole-hearted, downright method associated with a personality which is ardent and frank. There is a ruthless, steely suggestion in some of her work, of the machine, of the relentless modern pace and tempo."

The Atlanta engagement, which is for one performance only, is under the auspices of the Southern Musical Bureau. Seats go on sale Monday morning at the Cable Piano Company.

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

BELL TELEPHONE BUILDING PLANS FEATURE ACTIVITY

Expenditure of $300,000 To Be Made on Four Construction Projects. Structural Beauty Noted

Featured among building activities in Atlanta and vicinity announced early this year are four projects by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, involving an expenditure of approximately $300,000.

This building program includes three new buildings and a substantial addition to a present telephone building.

Dial System Featured.

The new buildings are the Raymond dial office, to be constructed at the corner of Gordon and Holderness streets; the Cherokee dial office to be located on Peachtree road, in Buckhead, and the Calhoun dial office at Main and Williams streets, East Point. The addition will be made to the Hemlock office on Crescent avenue, at Tenth street.

The new Raymond dial office building will replace the present manual office formerly known as West. The initial building will consist of basement and ground floor with a frontage of 78 feet on Gordon street and 85 feet on Holderness street. Provision is made for two additional floors of approximately twice the area of the initial building.

The treatment of this building is typically Georgian in design and has been patterned after the manor type houses of Virginia and Maryland. The base course on the Gordon street elevation is of Indiana buff limestone, followed by face brick of a rough texture in varying shades of red from light to dark, laid up in English crossbond, which gives the attractive effect of irregulartiy typical of colonial type architecture.

Provide Future Enlargement.

The new Cherokee dial office building in Buckhead will consist of ground floor and basement with a frontage of 80 feet on Peachtree road and a depth of 53 feet. It is so constructed that two more floors may be added to care for future growth.

The design of the building will be similar to that of the Raymond office, but special effort has been made to harmonize it with the suburban surroundings, by placing it well back from the street and combining buff colored stone with variegated rough brick to secure a pleasing as well as dignified appearance.

The new Calhoun dial office building in East Point will consist of basement and ground floor fronting 80 feet on Main street and extending a depth of 52 feet on Williams street. This structure will also be designed to carry two additional floors in the future.

Ornamental Beauty Shown.

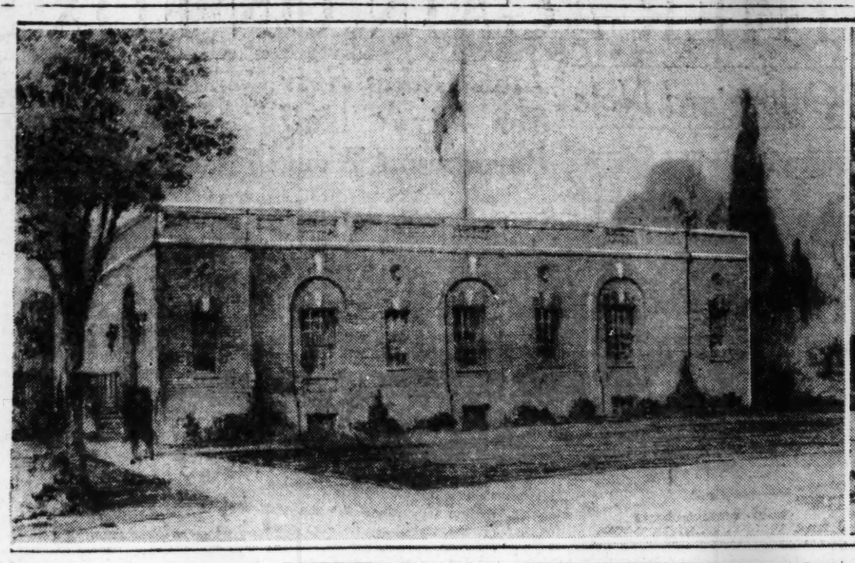

The treatment of this building is in the modernistic type, with accentuation of vertical lines by means of brick pilasters between the windows which terminate in ornamental caps of Indiana limestone. The two street levels are to be faced with rough textured brick in variable shades of reds and browns. Ornamentation is obtained through pattern brickwork coupled with the judicious use of limestone, all of which is in keeping with the general business location of the structure.

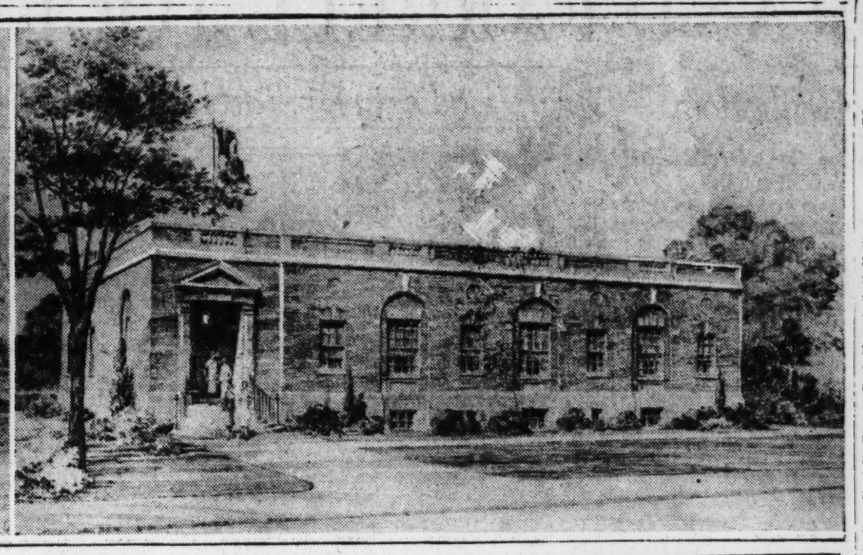

The addition to the Hemlock building will be a two-story and basement L-shaped structure, 30 feet in width and 96-feet in depth. It will be a continuation of the present building, which is in the Renaissance style of architecture.

The enlarged basement will house cable and transformer vaults, battery and power rooms, boiler and fuel rooms and recreation quarters for male employes.

The first floor provides for increased terminal room space, dial equipment, enlarged women's recreation room, locker rooms and cafeteria. The second floor will house the remainder of the Vernon office dial unit scheduled for service about January 1, 1932.

Beauty Marks $300,000 Building Program of Telephone Company

Attractive new dial exchange offices to be added to property of Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company in the city of Atlanta. Together with the proposed annex to the Hemlock exchange on Crescent avenue, at Tenth street, they form the 1931 improvements of the company announced thus far, representing a construction cost of $300,000. The architect's drawings pictured above are, to the left, Raymond exchange, to be erected at corner of Holderness and Gordon streets; and Cherokee exchange, to be built on Peachtree road, in Buckhead. Below is depicted the attractive Calhoun exchange, to go up in East Point, corner Main and Williams streets. Marye, Vinour, Marye & Armistead are the architects.

MORE HOUSE SEATS PROPOSED IN BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A measure was introduced today to add 40 members to the house.

It would swell the membership from 435 to 475 to prevent the loss of seats by some states under the new apportionment. The measure was the first such introduced since President Hoover announced a readjustment of representation to become effective for the 73d congress.

Representative Thurston, of Iowa, a republican member of the census committee, introduced the proposal.

It would allow nearly two-thirds of the states losing representation under the new law to regain some seats. Others would have corresponding increases according to population.

Under the new apportionment that becomes final March 4 unless a change is made, 21 states lose representation and 11 states gain.

Republican leaders are opposed to any increase. Majority Leader Tilson said if the house became so large it would be difficult to obtain a quorum. If the small increase were granted, he added, it would lead to further demands for additional seats in the future.

MINERS RESUME WORK AS LOOMS STAND IDLE

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—After more than two weeks of idleness 150,000 South Wales coal miners got their overalls out of their closets tonight in preparation for a resumption of work on Monday, but at the same time 250,000 Lancashire cotton weavers were hanging up their working clothes for an indefinite period.

These two industries have been torn by industrial strife for weeks. Since January 1 the South Wales pits have been empty and since noon today the Lancashire looms have been idle.

On the basis of a provisional agreement reached last Thursday in the mine dispute, the miners were expected to go back to work on Monday. But the weavers appeared in for a long period of idleness.

The coal dispute centered about wages and working hours but the differences in the textile industry concerned the mill owners right to make the weavers tend twice as many looms as they are accustomed to. The weavers met today after their employers had declared a lockout, but they took no action, saying nothing could be done until a vote among union workers is completed.

That will take at least a week and by that time it is possible that 250,000 spinners will have been forced into idleness because they cannot work at their jobs while the weavers are not working at theirs.

Heart Ailment Kills 5-Months Old Child

Heart ailment was officially ascribed as the cause of the death early Saturday morning of Calaway South, five-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. South, of 1350 Lakewood avenue. The infant was found dead in bed by Mrs. South Saturday morning. At first it was believed that suffocation had been responsible for the child's death, but a coroner's inquest decided that it died as the result of a heart attack.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of J. Austin Dillon. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Apartment Owners To Fight Tax, Water Rates Increase

S. A. Massell Re-elected President of Association at Annual Session; Expense Relief Sorely Needed.

In line with the general movement among property owners and agents for relief of the tax burden on real estate, the Atlanta Apartment House Owners' Association, at its annual meeting, went on record as opposed to any increase in taxes or water rates as "prohibitive to the operation of apartments."

The meeting was held Thursday in the Ansley hotel. Samuel A. Massell, well-known real estate developer, was re-elected president of the organization, which represents the ownership of a large portion of apartment property in Atlanta.

Other officers named to serve for 1931 were W. L. Hancock, vice president; John Low Zachry, secretary; W. A. Ward, treasurer, and the following executive committee: A. O. Davis, Britton Knox, George H. Holliday, W. H. Wynne, Joseph W. Hill, G. G. Shipp and C. A. Tappan.

While a review of the 1930 activities of the association was presented and reports of committees and officers read, the discussion on taxes and other operation costs for apartment owners featured the session.

According to records of the meeting, the members took action "opposing any other changes that would add more expense to the present high cost of apartment operation."

Elimination of the discount now allowed on water, or adoption of any of the proposed water rate changes, it was asserted, "would serve to increase operating costs of apartments to an amount that would be prohibitive and lead to confiscation."

"Real estate having shouldered the burden of taxation for many years, measures of relief, rather than enactments that will create added expense, are sorely needed," the reports of the session set forth.

MILLER CUTS POMP OUT OF INAUGURATION

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Simplicity that has marked his private life will prevail at the inauguration of Benjamin Meek Miller on Monday as the fortieth governor of Alabama.

The long parade in which civic, military and other organizations have participated in the past has been discontinued.

Only the cars carrying the new chief executive and the retiring governor, Bibb Graves, and their two military aides, will pass between the throngs who will gather here from every corner of the state.

ONLY 8 UNIVERSITIES IN AMERICA—BUTLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—In the opinion of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler only eight institutions of learning in the United States are justified in calling themselves universities.

In addition to the eight institutions, he declared there are only eight others which have the aspects or standards of universities. He did not name any institutions.

Harris Offers Bill.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP) Representative Grover C. Harris, of Dayton, today said that Monday he will introduce a measure to repeal chapter 118, public acts of 1917, the act providing for compulsory primary elections. Representative Harris said that repeal of the act would automatically make conventions the means by which nominees would be chosen.

APARTMENT RENTALS CHARGE GIVEN BROWN

Downing Brown Joins J. H. Ewing & Sons' Organization.

Downing Brown, well-known real estate figure in the local renting market, has become affiliated with this branch of the J. H. Ewing & Sons organization, it was announced Saturday by Morris Ewing, head of the renting department.

Mr. Brown will have charge of apartment rentals and supervision, in which capacity he is known to hundreds of apartment house dwellers.

For more than six years, Mr. Brown has been active in the local real estate business, specializing practically entirely in rental work. He has been connected with several of the leading firms in this field and is regarded as expert on apartment supervision.

During his long experience in the renting of apartments, he has built up a large clientele. In addition to being a popular member of the real estate fraternity, Mr. Brown is widely known in social circles.

MEETING PLANNED BY REALTY BOARD

The Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold its first luncheon of the year next Wednesday at the Henry Grady hotel in the Georgia ballroom at 12:30 o'clock.

R. W. Evans, newly-elected president for 1931, will preside and plans for this year will be discussed. A. B. Cates, newly-appointed chairman of the membership committee, will make a report for his committee.

A large attendance is expected.

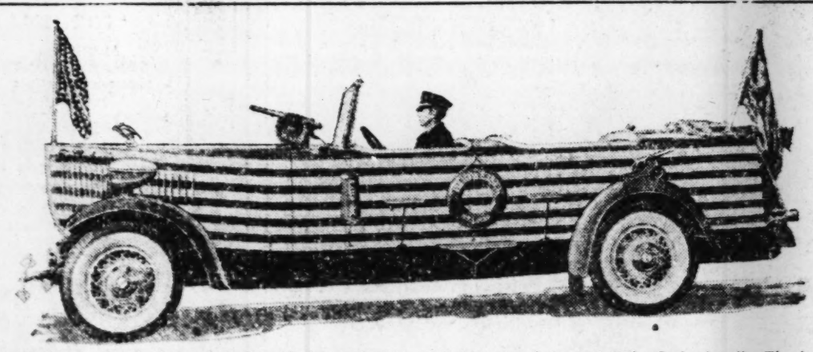

AGED FLORIDA EDITOR MISSING SINCE OCTOBER

OCALA, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Friends of J. H. Benjamin, pioneer newspaperman of Florida, today asked authorities to aid in a search for him.

Benjamin presumably left here last October 30 for Jacksonville but has not been seen or heard from by his family and friends since that date.

Alarm for his safety was felt about two weeks ago when L. E. Benjamin, a son, who resides in Tampa, telephoned that his father had not been heard from since writing a letter shortly before he was to leave Ocala. The letter related that Benjamin was leaving his suitcase at a hotel.

New Novel Car Christened "The Budweiser"

Anheuser-Busch have just launched another remarkable car, christened "The Budweiser." The body is 19 feet long and mounted on a Pierce-Arrow chassis. It is beautifully finished in white and red on a mahogany background. The seating capacity accommodates five and it also embodies a radio compartment. This car is now being used by one of Anheuser-Busch's rapresentatives in their trade territories. This unsually attractive car is much like the Victory Boat which was placed at the disposal of the United States government by Anheuser-Busch, of St. Louis, during the World War, touring the country for two years aiding the recruiting service for the army and navy.

FROZEN FOODS GROUP PICKS RULING COUNCIL

Formation of a skeleton executive council to govern present activities of the Frozen Foods Association of America was announced Saturday as a preliminary step toward the ultimate selection of the most representative men in the industry to direct operations for one year, these men to be chosen with reference to geographical distribution as well as to individual ability, according to stipulations laid down in the newly promulgated constitution of the association.

Members of the present council are empowered to name seven additional vice presidents and eight directors who, together with themselves, will form the first executive council.

H. P. Stuckey, director of the Georgia Experiment Station, was named president of the new council, with the following vice presidents: A. W. Luhrs, chief engineer of the Paperboard Industries Association, of New York city; W. T. Comer, of the Crystal Carbonic Company, and W. R. Tucker, who will represent Georgia peach-freezing interests and the railroads. The number of vice presidents will later be increased to ten.

The present board of directors, later to be expanded to sixteen members, is made up of the following: Professor J. G. Woodroof, associate director of the Georgia Experiment Station; E. L. Rhoades, associate professor of marketing at the University of Chicago, and publisher of national food periodicals; O. O. Mills, general superintendent of the Fruit Growers Express, and the Western Fruit Express; A. D. Jones, marketing expert of the Georgia Department of Agriculture; Dr. E. G. Ballenger, bacteriologist of Polar Products, Inc.; C. P. Goree, Jr., assistant sales manager of the Frick Company, Waynesboro, Pa.; Clark Howell, Jr., business manager of The Constitution and the Southern Cultivator; R. G. Geeslin, of Armour & Company, Chicago; R. D. Ballentyne, of United Cork Companies, Lynhurst, N. J.; C. C. Street, manager Frozen Foods, Inc., of Columbus; Fred A. Woleben, of the Georgia Freezing Interests; R. G. Gordon, of the Atlantic Ice & Coal Company, and W. H. Caldwell, of the Georgia Ice Manufacturers' Association. C. T. Baker was made secretary and treasurer.

Straus Building Report Indicates Improvement

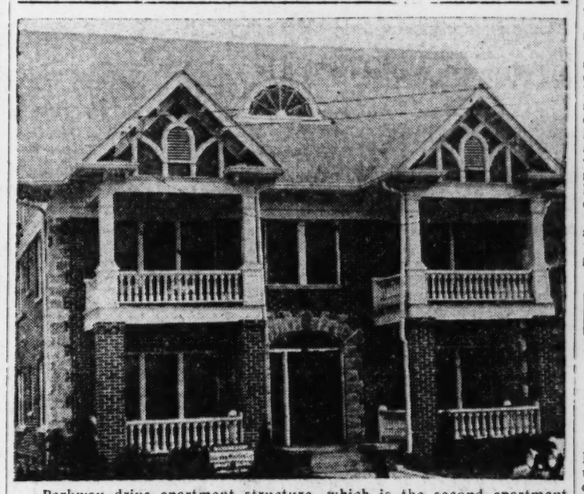

Prospective building activities throughout the United States took on a better tone during the month of December, 1930, as indicated by building permits issued in 573 cities and towns, S. W. Straus & Co. reported Saturday. The volume of permits for the final month of 1930 was $131,517,705, a gain of 1 per cent over November, when the total was $130,539,595.

Although for the country as a whole December showed a decline of 14 per cent from December, 1929, the 25 cities reporting the heaviest volume of permits registered a collective gain of 22 per cent over December, 1929, and a gain of 14 per cent over November, 1930.

New York made an increase of $5,000,000 in permits over December of the previous year. Other leading cities making individual increases over the same month a year ago included Detroit, Rochester, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Dayton, Dallas, New Haven, Cambridge, Mass.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Niagara Falls, Seattle, St. Louis and Oklahoma City.

New York led the states with a volume of $41,060,399 permits issued during December in 46 cities and towns. California, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan and Ohio follow in the order named.

Latest Parkway Sale

Parkway drive apartment structure, which is the second apartment building in this vicinity to be sold this month through the John J. Thompson real estate agency. The structure was sold for J. R. and W. S. Williams to the Bailey Development Company for a consideration in excess of $100,000. The building is located at 869 Parkway drive. The adjoining twin apartment was sold recently through the same agency. Herbert A. Cline and Lawson Thompson handled the sale to the Bailey Development Company.

NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

BY JESSE O. THOMAS.

An effort to fill in the gap made by the inadequate facilities and treatment of negro mothers and babies in the city is being made by the cradle roll department of the Greater Wheat Street Baptist church Sunday school in the clinic which is being held from 3 to 4 o'clock each Friday afternoon under the direction of Dr. E. L. Robinson. Already they have given away some 400 quarts of milk and treated more than 60 babies. The clinic will hold its dedicatory exercises and open house this afternoon at the Wheat Street Baptist church from 3 to 5 o'clock, at which time its services will be dedicated to the poor, undernourished negro babies. It is city-wide and interdenominational in its scope. Among the speakers on the program are Dr. Thomas H. Slater, one of the oldest and most widely known negro physicians in the state of Georgia, who seeks to keep himself abreast of the changing medical standards and technique from year to year, and Jesse O. Thomas, southern field director, National Urban League.

Marie Tinsley White is the trained nurse assisting Dr. Robinson in the clinic; Ann Traylor, the secretary. R. E. Thomas is superintendent of the Wheat Street Baptist Sunday school, and the Rev. J. Raymond Henderson is the pastor.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Atlanta Life Insurance Company was observed during the past week, held in conjunction with the Georgia-Alabama agents' conference. The managerial force of the cities and districts in the two above mentioned states, together with many of the agents from elsewhere, held a three-day conference, checking up on methods in an effort to increase the usefulness of this organization as it begins the second quarter of its development. Beginning 25 years ago with about $100 of insurance in force among a few policyholders, no capital stock or assets, the Atlanta Life Insurance Company has steadily grown until today its capital stock has increased to more than $250,000. It has over 200,000 policyholders with total assets of more than $1,500,000 and $26,000,000 of insurance in force. It began with an employed staff of one which has increased in the past 25 years to 75 employed in the home office and more than 800 men and women in the cities where there are branches of the company. The late A. F. Herndon was succeeded to the presidency of the concern by his son, N. B. Herndon, who has carried the work of the organization on with uninterrupted success. Under his executive administration the organization has continued to grow in the eight different states in which branches of the company are found. The company under the new administration has followed the sane and conservative method of expansion and investment inaugurated by the first president who was a business genius.

The inspirational public mass meeting commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary was held at the Wheat Street Baptist church, Thursday night, January 15. Lieutenant George W. Lee, World War veteran and district manager of the Atlanta Life at Memphis, Tenn., was the principal speaker. Others appearing on the program included the Rev. J. A. Hopkins, one of the co-founders, who gave a historic sketch of how the company was organized and of some of its early struggles. The Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist church, spoke briefly on "The Duty of the Negro Public in the Building of Negro Business Enterprises." Representatives of other insurance companies brought greetings, among whom were S. S. Abrams, W. C. Kelly, C. R. Williams, Harvey Gouldrock and greetings from the citizens at large were given by Jesse O. Thomas. Music was furnished by Dolly Latimer and the Morehouse College quartet.

PLAN CONFERENCE FOR NINE STATES

Southern Building Owners and Managers To Convene Here.

The Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers, as hosts, Saturday announced completion of arrangements for entertainment of the southern conference of building owners and managers, which convenes at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, January 25 and 27. The meeting will bring together representative owners and managers of office buildings and apartment houses of nine southern states.

The Atlanta meeting will constitute the ninth annual gathering of the organization and promises to be one of the most notable in history of the organizations. "From the many reservations already made throughout the south it looks now as if we will have a record attendance at the meeting," Fred Shaefer, secretary of the Atlanta association, stated.

The program committee is composed of C. F. Wilkinson, Atlanta, chairman; S. C. Wortham, Greensboro, N. C., and E. K. Brush, Nashville.

William J. Netherton, of Louisville, is president of the southern conference.

Prominent among Atlantans on the program will be Bobby Jones, who will make the welcome address; P. S. Arkwright, president Georgia Power Company; W. D. Thomson, well-known Atlanta attorney; Charles F. Palmer, of Palmer properties, who is president National Association of Building Owners and Managers.

Mr. Thomson will deliver a paper on "Legal Relations of Landlord and Tenant."

William H. Ballard, prominent realtor and renting agent of Boston, will be in charge of renting problems conference. Key men and subjects for discussion during this conference will be:

"Building Manager—Building Ownership," J. W. Michel, Jackson, Miss.

"Site of, and Tenants for the Building," K. S. McAllister, Atlanta.

"Rental Policies," S. C. Wortham, Greensboro, N. C.

"Selling Space," H. R. Kampen, Birmingham.

"Rental Value of Office Space," S. S. Stouffer, Louisville.

PATMAN DEFENDS LEGION SOBRIETY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Demands for consideration of measures to cash World War veterans' compensation certificates as a relief move were sounded in the house today by Representative Patman, of Texas, who denied legionnaires at the Boston convention had been drunk.

Failing to obtain privilege from Speaker Longworth to present his request for unanimous consent to discharge the ways and means committee from handling the bills, the Texas democrat called for hearings on them. If the certificates were cashed at their face value, he predicted $3,400,000,000 would be put into circulation and the prosperity of the country restored.

Regarding the Boston convention, Patman said.

"Much has been said in the newspapers about so many veterans being there drunk and not paying any attention to what they were doing. That report is absolutely false. I have never attended a convention where there were more serious-minded men.

"I did not see any more evidence of drunkenness on the floor than I have seen here as a member of this house, and I have never seen a member of this house on the floor under the influence of liquor."

7 COUNTRIES AGREE ON SUGAR PRODUCTION

PARIS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Representatives of producers in seven great sugar producing countries today concluded an agreement for what amounts to virtual world restriction of production.

The signatory nations were Cuba, The Netherlands, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Germany and Belgium. Thomas L. Chadbourne, representing Cuban and American interests, who negotiated the agreement, said that discussions with producers in Russia, Japan, Great Britain and the Argentine soon would be initiated. He declared the accord would help to solve the problems of the planter without increasing the price of sugar to the consumer.

Chadbourne received a cablegram from the Cuban government conveying the congratulations of President Machado and declaring that the conclusion of an accord was the most important event for Cuba since that nation had acquired independence.

The task of drafting the final text of the agreement will involve the enactment of special legal measures which will be necessary in some instances to carry it into effect.

The agreement is to run for five years.

DeKalb County Board Will Help Weaker Associations in District

DeKalb County P.-T. A. council executive board met at Decatur Junior High school Friday. Miss Fidelle Miller, president, presided. Miss Miller stated that a careful study of conditions and the national congress materials with which she has been provided, has led to the conviction that what the P.-T. A. needs is not so much money, but more love, one toward another, and a deeper desire to render service to others; especially the children. She requested careful consideration of the thought of mothering the smaller schools of the county not so much with money but love. She emphasized the welcome she has received upon visiting these schools, and expressed the desire that the stronger organizations assist the weaker. The five schools and the P.-T. A's who agreed to assist by furnishing speakers for their meetings, by visiting, or encouragement, or in such way as may seem most desirable, are Shady Grove, Glenwood School P.-T. A., Mrs. W. S. Kell, president; Mountain View, Winnona Park P.-T. A., Mrs. C. A. Honiker, president; Pleasant Hill, Decatur Senior High P.-T. A., Mrs. Henry Earthman, president; Bethel, Clarkston P.-T. A., Mrs. Ernest Williams, president; Belmont, probably Druid Hills P.-T. A., Mrs. J. H. Gilmore, president.

P.-T. A. workers were urged to attend the P.-T. A. school of instruction to be conducted by a representative of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, in Rich's school room, February 8, 9 and 10th; certificates to be awarded for 15 hours of study in connection with the school.

The cleanup campaign was introduced by Miss Miller, and as plans could not be formulated at this meeting Mrs. Schley Howard, Mrs. Ernest Williams and Mrs. Paul White are to complete working plans to be presented at the regular council meeting.

Mrs. J. D. Evans told of the school of citizenship to be conducted early in February, under the sponsorship of the school of commerce at Emory University, insisting upon attendance, it being free and a splendid opportunity to learn of this subject. Definite dates will be announced at the council meeting.

Mrs. J. B. Richards was introduced as the new president of the DeKalb League of Women Voters, and informed the body that registration books at the county courthouse will be open early in the spring, and that living up to duty as citizens includes registration. She read a recommendation of the grand jury that the juvenile court be abolished and a resolution was passed deploring such action.

Mrs. C. E. Pattillo presented a letter from the health department indicating an extension of time for registration for the health cup to April first.

Mrs. C. A. Honiker, president of Winnona Park P.-T. A., extended an invitation for the county council to hold its January meeting at this school. This was accepted and the regular county P.-T. A. council meeting will be held at the Winnona Park school, on Avery street, Decatur, Friday afternoon, January 30, at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Pattillo stated that the hour will be given over to the hearing of reports from the various associations.

Spring St. Hears Willis A. Sutton

Fathers and mothers at the Spring Street School P.-T. A. meeting Tuesday afternoon were held to close attention when W. A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, spoke of the mother's responsibility in the training of the child.

Mrs. E. F. Yancey, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, announced that $5 had been added to the $10 a month donation that the Spring street association is giving to the council milk fund for undernourished children. Mrs. Yancey further stated that families are being aided in order that the children may be able to attend school. Mrs. Yancey announced that beginning Monday, January 19, the school will have a paper sale for the week, the plan being to have parents and children bring magazines and papers. Mrs. Ralph Reed, paper chairman, will direct the sale.

Liberty Hill Meets.

Liberty Hill P.-T. A. met at the school building Monday afternoon. The president, Mrs. T. G. Pritchett, being ill, Miss Emma Burnett presided. Announcement was made that there will be a Washington party at the school Saturday evening, February 21. Sandwiches, drinks, candy and other articles will be sold, also games and contests will be enjoyed. A negro minstrel will be another feature of the evening. Twenty-five cents was given each mother, and there will be a contest to see which mother can make the most money with her quarter. A silver ladle will be given by the principal, Miss Emma Burnett, to the mother making the most money.

Mrs. Fred Gray reported that she has purchased her scrap book and has a number of interesting items as a beginning.

Georgia Girl is Rewarded

WHEN children are weak and run-down, they are easy prey to colds or children's diseases. So it is never wise to neglect those weakening and depressing symptoms, such as bad breath, coated tongue, fretfulness, feverishness, biliousness, lack of energy and appetite, etc.

Nine times out of ten these things point to one trouble—constipation. Mothers all around you are coming right out in public to tell how their children are being relieved of this trouble by California Fig Syrup.

Mrs. Paul Gurley, of 775 Brookline Street, Atlanta, says: "My mother used California Fig Syrup with me so I knew what to give Doris when she became bilious, cross and upset; began to complain of sick stomach.

"She has been more than rewarded for taking Fig Syrup. It made her a well, happy girl promptly. She never complains of any symptoms of biliousness now."

The genuine, endorsed by doctors for 50 years, always bears the word, California. All drugstores.

Classes Announced For Parent Problems.

Atlanta Council of Parent-Teachers in Churches Protestant urges leaders interested in parent problem classes for parents of young children stressing the spiritual development of the child from the beginning, to attend the second of a series of ten classes Sunday, January 18, to be held for 10 consecutive Sundays during the Sunday school hour from 10 to 11 o'clock at the First Baptist church. Dr. Ralph Wager and Mrs. Clifford Walker have given much thought and time to the outlines for these classes. The group discussions will be helpful to all.

Fulton High Plans Cooking School

Fulton High P.-T. A. met in the auditorium of Fulton High school Thursday with Mrs. Homer Wilson, president, presiding. The finance chairman, Mrs. Thomas Callaway, announced that a cooking school under Mrs. Boardman would be held the latter part of February in the school auditorium, tickets for which were on sale. All patrons and friends of the schools are urged to support this project as the proceeds will be used for the library.

The school faculty provided the numbers on the program. R. L. Ramsey, principal, delivered an address on the problems of youth and the guidance of youth. Douglas MacCray and Miss Margaret Allen were also on the program. Twelve dollars was directed to the Fulton High annual. Bolton won the community count of patrons and Miss Ewings the class count.

Maddox Junior High.

Last Monday afternoon James W. Maddox Junior High P.-T. A. met in the girls' gymnasium. Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, of the Georgia state board of health, made a talk on health in which he sttaed that 70 per cent of all diseases are preventable. The school orchestra made its initial appearance in a number of selections and Lovella Heddon rendered a cornet solo.

Mrs. L. H. Bolson, treasurer, reported that the association has completely furnished the school clinic. The February meeting will have as its speaker W. J. Rountree, who will discuss "Safety." Miss Wright's High 7-II won the attendance prize.

Smillie P.-T. A. Meets.

Ella W. Smillie P.-T. A. met in the school auditorium Tuesday. After reports and business Mrs. H. G. Parks gave a talk on "The Art of Living;" first paying glowing tributes to the school. Miss Smillie and Mrs. Cheshire, past president of Smillie P.-T. A., and now president of the Atlanta council, Mrs. Parks stressed the point that the foundation of character is formed in the early years at home and primarily by the mothers and that parents should recognize this responsibility since children are the builders of future homes.

At attractive song and dance and saxophone solo by Tootsie Dunbar completed the program after which the attendance prizes were announced. Miss Guy, low fourth, and Miss Lovett, low first, were the winners and Mrs. M. W. Morris won the draw prize, a P.-T. A. pin.

Mothers' Club.

Dr. Joseph Yampolsky, member of the medical faculty of Emory University and specialist in diseases of children, will lecture next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Misses Van Hook's studios, 52 Inman circle. Members of the Mothers' Club of the studios and their guests will be present. Dr. Yampolsky will give a talk especially for mothers of small children, and the club has extended an invitation to any mother who is interested in the care of little folk. The business meeting of the club will follow the lecture. Plans for the next lecture of the series will be made and a welcome extended new members. Miss Lane Van Hook will entertain the members at tea at the close of the meeting.

Fulton Council Meets Wednesday.

Fulton County Council Parent-Teacher Association meets Wednesday, January 21, at 3 o'clock at the courthouse. Mrs. Charles Center, fifth district president, will be the speaker.

Mrs. Alden Speaks To Pryor St. P.-T. A.

Pryor Street school P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon at the school, with Mrs. J. M. Morris, first vice president, in charge. Rev. V. L. Bray gave a brief talk on spiritual training. Miss Kathleen Nabors led the audience in singing. Mrs. Herbert Alden, a past state president, gave an interesting talk on "The Importance of Thrift and Duties of Parents." Mrs. June C. Dennard announced a concert by the Electrical Workers' Quartet under the auspices of the association, to be held early in February, exact date to be announced later.

Miss Dorothy Orr read the national president's message, and explained the playlet given by the second grade. Miss Vera Milner, teacher, presented her pupils in an original program of Indian songs, music and dances. The children's costumes were made of burlap and trimmed with different colors and made by the second grade pupils. Little Laurie Lasseter gave a tap dance. The attendance prize was won by the second grade, Miss Vera Milner, teacher.

Knox Walker Speaks at Meeting Humphries P.-T. A.

At the meeting of Joseph W. Humphries P.-T. A., held Friday afternoon in the school auditorium, Knox Walker, supervisor of the elementary schools of Fulton county, spoke on "Books in General and Their Influence on Character Building." Mrs. Knox Walker gave an interesting talk on "Reading" to the children of the school, ending her talk with a recital of an Indian legend.

The association will attend the P.-T. A. meeting of Perkerson school the second Friday in February to hear the state president, Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, speak, and will sing the national P.-T. A. song, "The Tree of the P.-T. A."

The grade mothers are accomplishing much for the school this year and reported plans to meet Tuesday afternoon to make stockings to be filled by the members to help with the library fund.

Mrs. R. O. Walters, magazine chairman, gave an interesting report on magazine subscriptions and success in selling the P.-T. A food book.

A goodly sum was made on the paper sale held recently and will be added to the playground equipment fund. Two piano selections played by Mrs. A. A. McGiboney were enjoyed.

The seventh grade, Miss Pauline Cash's room, won the attendance prize, making a total of $4 in attendance prizes, which will be used to secure books needed by this room.

O'Keefe Junior High Hears Rev. Risley

Taking the word "peace," and using the letters of the word to indicate the five qualities that effect it—principle, equality, amiability, charity and eternal value—Rev. Ernest Risley, assistant rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, speaking before the O'Keefe Junior High School P.-T. A. on Wednesday afternoon, made a plea for peace as the foundation of the American home, saying that its influence would extend through the community, the state, the nation and the world.

S. M. Hastings, principal of the school, announced that the midyear graduation exercises would be held on Thursday, January 29, and that Friday, January 30, would be Students' Day, with the students in charge of the school.

The attendance prize was won for the second time by Mrs. Maddox's Low 7-II grade.

Winona Park.

Winona Park P.-T. A. met Wednesday in the school auditorium, and the president, Mrs. C. D. Honiker, presided. Mrs. Wellington Stevenson spoke on "Practical Suggestions for Women Citizens." Mrs. Honiker read announcements of meetings to be held on Thursday, one at home of Mrs. S. R. Christie, Jr., for the purpose of organizing and federating a senior music club, also one at Decatur Junior High School on parental education and she asked members of the association to attend these meetings. The Winona Park P.-T. A. also indorsed the juvenile court work in DeKalb county.

Benteen Meets.

Benteen P.-T. A. met Tuesday, Knox Walker, elementary supervisor of Fulton county schools, gave an interesting talk on the criteria of education. Mrs. Gene Mills sang "Mighty Lak a Rose," accompanied by Mrs. P. C. Randall at the piano. The meeting was enjoyed by approximately 50 per cent of the mothers of the school. Mrs. G. H. Slappy, chairman of fifth district reading, gave an interesting talk on the joy and profit gained by the children's reading circles. The count of mothers gave Miss Elizabeth Lisle, teacher of the third and fourth grades, the prize.

Decatur Board Meets.

The executive board of the Decatur Junior High school met Thursday at the school. This meeting was followed by the P.-T. A. study class conducted by Mrs. John Ridley. "Parent Education" is the subject being studied and Mrs. Ridley gave a splendid talk on "Complete Living."

Scrap Book Information Issued By State Publicity Office

Important information to local Parent-Teacher Associations will be found in the following article issued from the state publicity office of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers:

"Many inquiries concerning publicity record books are coming into the state publicity office. The state publicity chairman again points the way to obtain full details regarding the making of these interesting and necessary records of local association work. Write Mrs. W. A. Reiser, state recordbook chairman, 244 Broad street, Augusta, for an outline of correct plans. Do not attempt to compile the book without the plans. Publicity given an association's work in the state or council's articles and in the state or council's bulletins is legitimate outside material for the recordbooks, as well as that mentioned in the mimeographed plans under Point 7. School activities, unless definitely tied up with the work of the association, is not association news, and will bar proper recognition of a recordbook, if used. Study the plans well before starting the book in order to make a recordbook worthy of the work accomplished by the association and a credit to the entire organization. Recordbooks are going to have a conspicuous place and part at the state convention this spring, eight to be selected from among those sent to the state convention and forwarded to the national convention in Hot Springs in May for classification and publicity exhibiting purposes. The selection to be made will be based upon several requirements in conformity with those included in the plans sent out by Mrs. Reiser.

Recognition will also be given the district at the state convention having the largest number of publicity chairmen attending. So in selecting delegates to the state convention be sure the publicity chairman is given an opportunity to attend.

Scotland Progresses.

Scotland association in the twelfth district is one of the most progressive in the state. It has added 120 books to the school library the past two months, a parent-teacher food book has been purchased and a state and a national flag has been purchased and presented to each class room. Distributing literature pertaining to the work, by different chairmen, at each meeting, is another type of service being given by this association; the object being, an informed membership.

A letter from Mrs. Howard Graves, president of East Lake association in the fifth district gives an outline of the work which that group is doing, among which are the following noteworthy efforts and achievements: A parent education group is being promoted for the first time and much interest is being manifested; food, clothing and milk to the undernourished at school are being provided the needy of the community; a donation has been made for the purpose of adding books to the school library; the parent-teacher "Interpretation of Food" book has been presented each grade through participation in "appreciation day;" an effort has been made, in co-operation with other interested groups, to secure a branch of the Carnegie library for the community, and at present the Child Welfare magazine drive is being promoted.

National Notes.

A national correspondence course for local leaders is available through the educational division, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, secretary, of the national congress. This course contains material necessary for an informed president, or officer and chairman. The registration fee is $1 and the necessary material will accompany each lesson. For full information write Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, 1201 Sixteenth street, N. W., Washington, District of Columbia.

The subject for the afternoon will be "Thrift," with Mrs. Leonard Martin, chairman. A feature of the program will be songs and recitations by the children of the different grades.

Hoke Smith Junior High P.-T. A. meets Wednesday, January 21, at 3 p. m. in the school auditorium. Pupils from Mrs. B. P. Hunter's classes and an interesting speaker are on the program.

Girls' High school P.-T. A. meets Tuesday evening, January 20, at 8 o'clock, at the school. Judge Garland Watkins, of the juvenile court, will be the speaker.

Whitefoord P.-T. A. meets in the school auditorium Tuesday, January 20, at 2:45 p. m. A thrift program has been arranged and Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, past president of the Georgia P.-T. A., will be the speaker.

Fair Street P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, January 20, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium.

George W. Adair P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, January 20, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium.

Mrs. George McLaughlin, ways and means chairman of the O'Keefe Junior High school P.-T. A., has called a meeting of the grade chairmen, to be held in Room 20 at 10 o'clock Wednesday, January 21.

Tech High P.-T. A. meets in the military building, January 21, at 3 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged.

Hammond P.-T. A. meets at the clubhouse, Monday, January 19, at 2:15 o'clock.

R. L. Hope P.-T. A. meets Tuesday afternoon, January 20, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. Mrs. Arthur Burdett will give a reading of the one-act play, "Minuet." Parents and friends of the school are invited.

Hellenic P.-T. A. meets Wednesday, January 21, at 10 o'clock in the school auditorium. An interesting program has been arranged. Refreshments will be served. All interested are invited.

Hellenic P.-T. A. executive board meets Monday morning, January 19, at 11 o'clock in the school auditorium.

J. C. Harris P.-T. A. Features Health

Patrons of J. C. Harris P.-T. A. were interested in a talk on "Physical Education in the Elementary Schools," at the meeting held Tuesday. The importance of physical training as one of the most helpful parts of school work was emphasized. The co-operation of the parents as well as the children to attain the highest standard of health by physical education was stressed. The folk dances presented by pupils of Miss Ruth Hill, second grade teacher, and Miss Eileen Page, fourth grade teacher, were enjoyed. The fourth grade children made the Dutch costumes worn in their dance. Little Betty O'Kelly and Grace White gave dance numbers. The attendance prizes were won by Miss Ruth Hill's class and Miss Eileen Page's class.

Decatur Junior High.

Decatur Junior High School P.-T. A. meets Wednesday, January 21, at 2:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium. After a brief business meeting Mrs. M. W. Cowan will present an interesting and unique program. Mrs. D. C. Adams will give several vocal selections. A thrift play will be presented by Miss Pitman's class. The highlight of the program will be a thrift exhibit contributed by the mothers. All made-over or self-devised articles will be accepted. Many interesting contributions have already been sent in from antiques and hook rugs to wearing apparel. Three prizes will be given to the rooms which have the largest percentage of mothers contributing. The meeting will adjourn at 3:30 o'clock.

Georgia Avenue.

Preschool Association of Georgia Avenue School met Tuesday, with Mrs. J. W. McLendon presiding. Mrs. T. H. Jackson gave a splendid talk on "The Spiritual Training of the Child," saying it was the duty of the parent to train our young spiritually by having the family altar daily. Mrs. Johnson was appointed reading chairman.

East Lake Meets.

East Lake P.-T.A. met Tuesday afternoon. R. R. Ritchie, business manager of Atlanta public schools, gave an outline of the plans for the East Lake school plant now being overhauled. Among the improvements are two new class rooms, new electric wiring, steam heating plant, kitchen, teachers' rest room, library and auditorium; all to be completed by February 1, 1931.

Mrs. Louise Young Robinson, teacher of third grade, and a bride of the season, was presented a handsome gift from the association. The grade prizes were won by second and sixth grades.

Carrollton Garden Club

CARROLLTON, Ga., Jan. 17.—Carrollton Garden Club, of which Mrs. A. Lyle is president, held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. I. S. Ingram, on the campus of the Fourth District A. & M. school, and the vice president, Mrs. W. J. Millican, presided. The following instructive program, arranged by Mrs. Ingram, was given: "The Value of a Garden to Civic Life," by Mrs. C. K. Henderson; "Wild Flowers and Shrubs in Home Landscaping," by Mrs. J. J. Thomasson, and "How to Make a Seed Bed," by Mrs. A. O. Stipe.

Magazine Chairmen Meet Jan. 23.

Mrs. J. Cecil Stanley, Fifth District P.-T. A. magazine chairman, announces a luncheon for the magazine chairmen of the district Friday, January 23, at 12 o'clock, at Rich's tea room. Luncheon will be served for 75 cents.

English Avenue Hears Mrs. Shumake

Mrs. Frank Shumake, chairman of child welfare in P.-T. A. council, spoke at the meeting of English Avenue P.-T. A. Miss Hogan, music chairman, led in the singing of P.-T. A. songs. She introduced Misses Burford and Milam, who gave two violin numbers. Mrs. R. E. Jones presided over the meeting. Mrs. Frazier, reading chairman, urged the organization of a class for the reading and discussion of articles that would be helpful to mothers. A number expressed a desire to join such a class, and Mrs. Frazier invited them to meet with her January 23, at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Martin explained a plan for placing the Child Welfare Magazine in a number of homes. Motion was made to advance money for this purpose.

Mrs. Jones announced that the class in "Parental Education" will meet on the second instead of third Wednesday. Miss Kingsbery spoke of the increasing number of undernourished children being given lunches at school. She also urged registration of all children who are to enter kindergarten or first grade in February.

The president appointed a program committee composed of Misses Beeland and Sims and Mrs. Moore. Attendance prizes were won by Miss Beeland and Miss Callaway.

Bass Association Features Thrift

"Thrift is nothing more than wise planning in the right home, for all comes from the home and goes back into it. Thrift also includes a budgeting of our time and strength as well as our money," asserted Mrs. Alonzo Richardson to the William A. Bass P.-T. A. at the meeting held Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium.

Mrs. A. J. Hollingsworth, president, called on Mr. Scott, who told of the progress made in some of the campaigns being conducted in the school. "The dental campaign is much further advanced than the one at this time last year," said Mr. Scott, who spoke briefly of the midyear graduation to be held January 29.

The attendance awards went to the following classes: Low 7-I, Mrs. H. W. Cantrell; Low 8-I, Misses Lorena Graham; Low 9-I, Mrs. R. H. McLean.

Ponce de Leon Reports Meeting

Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. in Decatur met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Guy Hudson, the president, presiding. Interesting reports were made by the chairmen. Mrs. Wilkes, chairman of the thrift committee, announced a thrift exhibit to be held in the school auditorium at an early date. She urged the mothers to encourage thrift among the children. Apropos of Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. celebrating its seventh birthday this month, Mrs. Hudson presented the teachers with a decorated birthday cake. Mrs. Walter C. Herbedt gave a talk on "Where Do We Stand as Home Makers in Our Profession?"

Pre-School Meets.

The Pre-School Association of the George W. Adair school met in the school auditorium Tuesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. C. D. Baldwin, presided, introducing to the members Mrs. H. G. Parks, who spoke on child welfare, stressing the health condition of the pre-school children. On the same program Mrs. T. A. Henson made an inspiring talk on spiritual training. Mrs. Baldwin urges all mothers and members to be present at the February meeting, at which time an interesting program will be presented.

Center Hill.

Center Hill P.-T. A. met at the school house last Tuesday afternoon. Entertainment features of the meeting included a Christmas selection, recited by Mary Jane Ogletree. Mrs. Garrett reported the early installation of footlights for the auditorium stage, and made a plea for supplies for the emergency medicine cabinet. Funds were voted to Mrs. Brown for purchase of books for the third grade library. A plea was also made for shoes, books and other articles for needy children.

State President Outlines Benefits of Training Classes

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of the Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers, writes of the benefits to be derived by those who attend the training classes and institute to begin February 2 in the following article:

"The outlook for the Georgia training classes and institute scheduled to be directed by Mrs. Charles E. Roe, of the national office, Washington, D. C., scheduled to begin February 2 and continue through February 14 and to include Augusta, Macon, Brunswick, Waycross, Fitzgerald, Atlanta, Columbus, Atlanta and Rome, is promising. If the Parent-Teacher information offered by Mrs. Roe is taken seriously and used later in the conduct of associations, and if the associations within driving distance send goodly delegations to get the instruction and information, the Congress of Parents and Teachers will make progress this year. The material Mrs. Roe will present represents the best thought of the nation's leaders in the field of child welfare. Such an opportunity should be grasped by everyone who has caught the vision of the organization. Teachers, mothers and fathers, neighbors and friends, who are concerned with the lives of children and with the nation as it will move forward under their leadership, particularly need that information.

Trained Leaders.

"It is coming to be recognized that the Parent-Teacher organization must have trained leaders, in order to avoid the rocks. This being true it must be counted a privilege when such a means as a national worker is with us, to give her full co-operation and attendance.

"Credit will be given for the work done. Members should plan ahead to give the full day to an intensive study of the structure and work of the organization. There has never before been opportunity for this study. The period necessarily is brief. That district presidents and presidents of councils carry the responsibility of the meetings, giving notice at least twice, by letter or card is the keynote of the success of the undertaking. Members will do well to bring their association problems with them for solution.

30,000 Members.

"During the last three months over 30,000 members were enrolled in the Georgia congress. The total number enrolled last year was something over 45,000. We will go far beyond that this year. The Atlanta institute February 9, 10 and 11 gives leaders an opportunity to go beyond the work of the one-day classes.

"The state executive board is invited by the Atlanta council and fifth district to meet on the day following the institute. Accordingly, the board meeting is called for Atlanta February 12, 9:30 o'clock, at the Georgian Terrace hotel. Mrs. Herbert Alden, aide to the president, is in charge of board meeting arrangements. Schools contemplating early organization would do well to send representatives to the several meetings. No cost is involved. The national congress is rendering valuable service to Georgia in making such classes of instruction available."

Now Whiten Teeth 3 Shades In Just 3 Days

remove Bacterial-Mouth

There's only one correct way to have sound, dazzling white teeth. Remove the true cause of stain, discoloration, decay and serious gum diseases. Authorities call it Bacterial-Mouth. You have it. This condition confronts everyone who breathes. Millions of germs swarm into the mouth and attack teeth and gums.

No ordinary dentifrice can cope with Bacterial-Mouth. But highly concentrated Kolynos quickly removes it by killing the germs that cause it.

Try this dental cream with its exclusive Dry-Brush Technique—a half-inch on a dry brush, morning and night.

Watch teeth whiten—fully a shade a day! See lazy gums firm up.

You can feel and see Kolynos work! As it enters the mouth it multiplies 25 times and becomes a penetrating antiseptic FOAM that gets into every pit, fissure and crevice.

Swiftly this FOAM kills germs and purifies the mouth. It neutralizes acids and dissolves unsightly tartar. Gently and without injury it cleans teeth down to the naked white enamel.

For 3 hours after each brushing this FOAM continues to clean teeth and destroy germs.

Make This Test

See for yourself what Kolynos can do. Within a few days you'll understand why this remarkable dental cream is winning thousands of new adherents. It will clean your teeth whiter and give your mouth the protection it must have to remain healthy. Get a tube of Kolynos from any druggist—today!

Book Reviews in Tabloid

"Angel Pavement," by J. B. Priestley (Harper's), is one of those books whose publication is an event to be red-penciled on the calendar of every lover of the charming in literature.

Mr. Priestley has won a great name for himself among contemporary writers, climaxed by his novel of a year ago, "The Good Companions." While "Angel Pavement," the later work, is not, in the estimation of this reviewer, quite as delightful as reading matter as its predecessor, it is yet a book to be counted among the four or five greatest novels of 1930.

It is the story of a tiny street in the heart of the city of London, a backwater in the city life. It tells of the trials, triumphs, tribulations and ultimate fate of a small business enterprise involving the lives of half a dozen fascinatingly human characters.

Mr. Priestley weaves his human web upon the warp of business chicanery and the outcome leaves the reader rather regretful. It is as though the pleasant, though perhaps not always sunshiny, road down which we have strolled so charmingly with Mr. Priestley, suddenly ends and leaves us hanging in space, with nowhere to go and nothing at all left except the memory of a good book read.

Perhaps it is Mr. Priestley's intention to write a sequel and let us meet again the characters he has created so masterfully. Perhaps, let us hope, his next panoramic picture will leave them in happier circumstances at the end than does "Angel Pavement."

In any event, sequel or not, "Angel Pavement" is an exquisitely written book, packed with clear-cut characterizations that will live forever in the gallery of beloved portraits of every discriminating taster of fine literature. —RALTH JONES.

J. B. PRIESTLEY.

NEW FICTION.

Hubert, the Happy. A story of XIIIth century of France. By Ella Shannon Bowles, author of "Children of the Border." Illustrations by Lyle Justis. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

The American Marquis. By George Watson. The story of a father, Judge Weston, and his two charming girls, who started out on a trip to see his new inheritance, an old English estate. It was a voyage of discovery—and it was a happy trio who returned to America. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The Canon of Lost Waters. By Hoffman Birney. When Richard Burton found a wonderful place between Arizona and Utah, he felt like he had found a place to shut out the cold world, and it was here that he reared his motherless daughter, Dolores. Years after when she had grown to girlhood, a Texas broncho trainer is found dying of thirst on the desert and is brought to the Canon of Lost Waters. From this time the story becomes quite interesting and it ends in one of the real romances of the west. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

The Sun Sets Red. By Stanley Hart Cauffman. A story painted against the background of the French revolution. The principal figures in the story are a young American, a beautiful girl, and a musical genius. It is a vivid picture of that period—during the days of the Reign of Terror—and during the time when "the deadly and un-understandable Robespierre's presence and influence was ever felt. It is full of exciting incidents. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

The Moon Mistress. Diane de Poitiers. By Jehanne D'Orliac. Translated by F. M. Atkinson. Twenty-seven illustrations. The story of a famous beauty set against a background of court life. (Lippincott's Books, Philadelphia. $3.)

The Revolt of the Fisherman. By Anna Sechers. Translated from the German by Margaret Goldsmith. This brief story of the struggles of the desperate fisherfolk of St. Barbara who strike, starve and work for a wage that is still to leave their children hungry, will find appeal in the American heart. Jacket design by Harold Butterfield. (Longmans-Green & Co., New York.)

Together Again. By Helen Grace Carlisle. The literary world finds great pleasure in wishing Miss Carlisle a successful New Year for in the year 1929 she contributed two novels—"See How They Run," and six months later "Mother's Cry." And in the year 1930 "Together Again" is her contribution. The scene of her last book is laid in France after the World War—the scene of many tragedies and romances during that time and since. Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith, New York city.

The Prairie Patrol. By Harold Bindloss, author of "Rancher Jim." Stories of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in pioneer days, with setting of wheat fields and evergreen forests, continue to thrill the reader no matter what his profession or age, to the little fellow who has just started to kindergarten. Riding the frozen trail is a thriller and when the police sergeant turns toward the north of Montana there is usually some excitement somewhere. The story is full of adventures, romance and courage. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

MYSTERY STORIES.

I Like a Good Murder. By Marcus Magill. Author of "Death-in-the-Box." This is a curious case, in fact, the detectives found it rather unusual, and it caused quite a good deal of excitement. It is called a "sophisticated story of dreadful suspense." (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

The Subway Murder. By Madeleine Buchanan. It was in a white-tiled subway exit that Barbara Parkinson was found dead. Two men—one a millionaire, the other a hosiery salesman—each claimed her as his wife. Who was guilty? Whose were the fingerprints? A baffling mystery story. (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

Mr. Pottermack's Oversight. A detective story. By Austin Freeman, author of "A Silent Witness." This is a new detective story by Mr. Freeman in which Dr. Thorndyke, most famous of medico-legal sleuths, again plays the leading role, and usually when he enters a case there is some excitement and plenty of thrills. Dodd Meade & Co., New York.

The Tabloid Murders. The book is a new departure in literature. Not only is it a new and natural method for murder mystery, but it marks the first sustained use of newspaper idiom and newspaper technique in creative writing. Remarkable new dramatic effects are obtained by the use of editorials, new stories, features, stunt reports, true life and confessions.

The author, Clement Wood, was born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and was educated at the University of Alabama and Yale University. He is the author of numerous novels and books of poetry. His most recently published works are "Amy Lowell—A Critical Life," and "The Outline of Man's Knowledge," also more than 50 books in the Haldeman-Julius "Little Blue Books" on literary and scientific themes. (Macaulay Company, New York.)

THE LIFE OF REMBRANDT.

R. v. R. The Life and Times of Rembrandt van Rijn. "This handsome volume contains an account of the last years and the death of one, Rembrandt Harmenszoom van Rijn, a painter and etcher of some renown who lived and worked in the town of Amsterdam (which is in Holland) and died of general neglect and diverse and other unfortunate circumstances in 1669, and who was attended in his afflictions by one Joannis van Loon, doctor medicinae and chirurgeon, and a vast number of citizens whose enduring gratitude has erected him a monument less perishable than granite and more enduring than porphyry, and who during a most busy life yet found time to write down these personal recollections of the greatest of his fellow citizens. By his great, great-grandson, nine times removed, Hendrik Willem van Loon, in 1930, in the town of Veere, Zeeland." There are 25 illustrations, the frontispiece being a picture of Rembrandt. It is not only the selection, but printed by the Literary Guild, of New York.

1914—1918.

There are more than 300 pages in this handsome book, the first page of which was written by the author June 25, 1914—this being the date of her taking possession of her new home, the Chateau of Pronleroy, near the Belgian frontier.

The story of her life while living on this estate is filled with many interesting facts and thrilling incidents. Madame de Foucalt was in the midst of everything during the war and, never at any time did she think of leaving the field to other hands than hers. Today a tablet on the old chateau commemorates a part of its service, and is as follows:

"Headquarters of General Mangin. It was from here that on the 11th of July, 1918, he launched the counter attack of Mery-Courcelles, the first victorious offensive of the French armies of 1918."

While during the war all classes of men came to this attractive chateau, none failed to pay due respect to its aristocratic French mistress. It can well be said that Madame de Foucalt has made a fascinating contribution to the literature of the World War. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston and New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Germany in the Post-War World. By Erich Koch-Weser, chairman of the democratic party of Germany, former German vice chancellor, minister of the interior, etc. Translated by A. Paul Maerker-Branden, with an introduction by Jacob Gould-Schurman, American ambassador to Germany 1925-1930.

Tintype Types. By Violet Short. Every family had a tintype family. Of course it was many years ago—away back in the 60's—for before that time it was daguerreotype—and in each period the pictures were most valuable and appreciated—the album period, with red-plush covers—followed and could always be found on the old marble-top centertable in the parlor or library.

Eat and Keep Fit. By Dr. Layman F. Kebler. The author writes most interesting on "Preventing and Controlling Overweight and Acidosis." He holds many prominent positions in the medical world. Introduction by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the great American food expert and the "friend of the common folks." (Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, Washington.)

Tempting Kosher Dishes. Prepared from the world-famous Manischewitz's Matzo products. This is the third edition. These choice recipes have been tested and approved by Miss F. O. Gahr, domestic science expert. (Published by the Manischewitz Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.)

Southern Baptists in Sunny Italy. By Dr. George Braxton Taylor, author of "Lives of Virginia Baptist Ministers." Introduction by Dr. J. C. Metcalf, Linden Kent, professor of English literature University of Virginia. This book was published in 1929, but it is still interesting and valuable to Baptists. (Walter Neale, publisher.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Angel Pavement Contest.

So many artists have written Harpers asking for more time to complete their drawings for the Angel Pavement contest that the closing date has been postponed. A prize of $50 will be awarded for the drawing which J. B. Priestley, the author, decides is the best likeness to any one of the characters in Angel Pavement.

Book League's Art Director.

The Book League of America announces the appointment of Frank Peers, the noted artist and designer, as its art director. The first Book League books to be designed by Mr. Peers will be the January selections, Sylvia Thompson's "Portrait by Caroline," and Cervantes' "Don Quixote."

New York in True Colors.

Orange, white and blue, which are the colors of the flag of the city of New York, have been used in the cover design of the Book League edition of Paul Morand's new book, "New York." "New York" is the December choice of the Book League of America.

Martha Ostenso as Reviewer and Citizen.

Martha Ostenso, whose "Waters Under the Earth" was the November choice of the Book League of America, reviews in enthusiastic vein Douglas Durkin's "Mr. Gumble Sits Up" (Dwright) in the December Book League Monthly. Martha Ostenso is now in the process of securing her citizenship papers. She tells us that she may expect to be a full-fledged citizen any moment—this in spite of the fact that she has lived in this country since she was seven years of age.

Roselle Mercier Montgomery.

The first prize of the Poetry Society of America in their 1930 competition has been awarded to Roselle Mercier Montgomery, author of "Many Devices." The winning poem by Mrs. Montgomery is entitled "The Captive Siren." The award was made by Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont at the meeting of the poetry society at Roosevelt House in New York. Another honor recently received by Roselle Mercier Montgomery was the reading of her poem, "A Modern to Virgil," at the Bimillennium Vergilianum Festival held at Carnegie Hall, New York, under the auspices of the American Classical League.

Miss Moses Gives Recital at Brenau

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—Miss Jean Moses, a senior and instructor in the school of speech, will be presented in her graduation recital by Miss Lois Gregg Secor Monday afternoon, January 19, in the Brenau auditorium at 4:30 o'clock when she will offer the play, "Caponsacchi," based on Browning's poem, "The Ring and the Book." Miss Moses is from Great Bend, Kan., and is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority and Zeta Phi Eta and Pi Gamma Mu, honor fraternities. The public is invited to her Brenau performance.

Alpha Delta, honorary journalism fraternity, will present Miss Joan Lowell, author of "Cradle of the Deep," at the auditorium Tuesday, February 3, at 8:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

Through the courtesy of Stewart Robertson, a well-known journalist, members of the Brenau journalism class and their instructor were received at the governor's mansion in Atlanta last Sunday afternoon and met Dr. and Mrs. Hardman, their son, Lamartine Hardman, and Mrs. Hardman's father, J. N. Griffin. The party visited by special invitation the offices of The Constitution and the Associated Press.

Jehan Warliker, or Prince Seesodia, as he is known in India, lectures at Breanau in the lyceum course Wednesday, January 21, at 8:30 o'clock, his subject being "A Panorama of India." Dr. Warliker is a linguist of note and speaks English, French, German, Russian and Hindustani. The public is invited.

Dr. W. E. Gordan, professor of chemistry at Brenau, has been invited by Johns Hopkins University to nominate students for the Coca-Cola Company $1,000 fellowship in chemistry. The award, which is open to sophomores, juniors and seniors, will be continued for four years, $1,000 each year, and 48 students will be chosen, one from each state in the Union. Application blanks must be filed before February 14, and appointments will be made by March 14.

Midyear examinations for the present semester at Brenau begin Monday, January 26, and will continue through Saturday, January 31.

West End Garden Division To Meet

Garden Division of the Civic Club of West End meets next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, January 20, at the club house. Mrs. Walter Lamb, chairman, has interesting plans outlined for the new year. Mrs. James R. Bachman will speak on "Framing the Garden Picture." Mrs. Bachman is one of the most enthusiastic gardeners in the state and much of her talent has been shared with others. She was organizer and first president of the Perennial Garden Club, and is garden chairman of the Fifth District Federated Woman Clubs. Invitation is extended to all flower lovers, whether club members or not, to hear this helpful and interesting lecture.

HOUSEWIFE'S AID ASKED AS EMPLOYMENT AID

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 17.—"The American housewife is in a position to be of invaluable aid in helping to stop unemployment and to aid in returning to work those who have been laid off," said B. O. Sprague, president of the Savannah Sugar Refining Corporation, in commenting on the inroads being made into American sugar throughout the United States, through the purchase in this country of sugar refined in Cuba, and sold in this country at approximately 3 cents per 100 pounds less than it can be produced by American labor.

In commenting on this economic condition, in which the housewife can be of such invaluable aid, Mr. Sprague further said: "The American housewife is the largest collective purchasing power in this country. Through her demand for products manufactured under sanitary conditions, guaranteed by the pure food and drug laws of the United States department of agriculture and made by American labor, she will be insured the best quality, at no increased cost to her, and, at the same time, keep American labor employed at the sugar refineries throughout the United States."

"It is estimated that 350,000 people are directly affected in the refining of sugar in this country and any curtailment of this production will be followed either by the reduction of wages to American labor, or, what is worse, add to the already large army of unemployed.

"This condition has been brought about by the recent tariff bill, which permits Cuban sugar, when refined, to be brought into this country with a tariff of $2.12 per 100 pounds, whereas the American refiner has to buy 107 1-2 pounds Cuban raw sugar to refine 100 pounds in this country and pay on that amount $2.15 per 100 pounds.

"Three cents on 100 pounds, when reduced to five and ten-pound quantities, such as is usually bought by the American housewife, is so small that she does not get any benefit, but when Cuban sugar is bought in lots of thousands of tons, the difference amounts to a great deal and for every pound that is imported with a reduction of 3 cents per 100 pounds under the American price, it means that just that much less is to be refined in this country.

"It is estimated that unless this injustice to the refiners in America is corrected, approximately 1,000,000 tons of Cuban sugar will be sold in the United States to the detriment of the industry in the United States and the consequent unemployment of those connected with that industry.

"We feel sure that the American housewife will see that here is a chance for her to do her bit in stopping unemployment, and restoring to employment those now out of work."

Mrs. Robinson Issues Letter Regarding Work at Hospital 48

BY MRS. ED FISH, of Gainesville, Publicity Chairman.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 17.—Mrs. D. M. Robinson, of Atlanta, director of Red Cross service for Base Hospital No. 48, located in Atlanta, issued a splendid message to the members of the Georgia auxiliary. Mrs. Robinson sent this as a request from the publicity department so that each member might know the wonderful work being done by the auxiliary at the hospital, and the work that Mrs. Robinson wants the units to undertake. She says:

"Although all organizations laboring faithfully for disabled ex-service men at the United States Veterans' hospital, Atlanta, Ga., deserve encomiums of praise, I am writing at this time of special efforts of the American Legion Auxiliary of Georgia. I shall begin with our own Atlanta unit which is ever watchful of the needs of the ill men in their midst. A loyal band from the unit has visited the wards every week and disseminated cheer and treats ever since there has been a government hospital in Atlanta. The right of their membership entitles them to greet the patients as 'buddies.' Barriers are soon broken down when new patients realize that they are in the presence of the women of the 'auxiliary,' and quick friendships are formed. Through the sympathetic attitudes of the visitors, worries are banished and true constructive guidance is given. Often letters are written back home for patients—a telegram is sent to a loved one—a visit is paid the family and relief is often supplied. Ill members of a patients' family may be steered toward proper medical relief and the home kept intact while the breadwinner is receiving the marvelous treatment the government is so willing and ready to give to those entitled to its benefits. At times of great sorrow, wherever possible, the family is visited—flowers are placed on the bier of one who has passed and encouragement is given when needed most.

"Women of the auxiliary seem to have a rich and wonderful realization of 'How can I make one happy?' A deep and abiding interest in the disabled ex-service men opens up glorious avenues of expression and manifestations of that interest, and they are ever busy in behalf of the veteran—enjoying nothing more than helping those who are unfortunate and nobody, possibly, understands the veteran better than they do. The women of the auxiliary know the hardships and the glories of war through the men of their own family and can give a handclasp which makes the men realize that they are comrades. They can help put to rout disappointed hopes and growing bitterness. They feel that this is their bounden duty to every man who has ever worn his country's uniform. The giving that is done by this organization is not called giving—it is a solemn duty and privilege. Owing to the intangible nature of the work accomplished by this large organization, it is impossible to cover the ground adequately. However, I will attempt to cover some of its scope at the Atlanta government hospital. Besides the Atlanta unit intensifying on work for the veterans, all units of the Georgia department have a definite part to play—mapped out by their own officers together with the state officers.

Hostess Units.

"The following units acted as hostesses at the Atlanta Government hospital since it was opened in July, 1930: August, the Atlanta unit. A merry party was given and prizes were presented as reward for winners at games. Refreshments were served. A large representation of the membership visited on the night of the party and cheered by their personal contacts with the patients. September: The Columbus unit acted as hostess. October: Canton (Ga.) unit sent a check to purchase prizes for a bingo party. November: Thomaston, Ga., sent a handsome check to give a large party for them. It is always a matter of regret that the members of all units playing hostess monthly cannot be present and give the pleasure that they could if at the hospital in person, and that they cannot receive the inspiration that such visits never fail to give. The Cartersville unit was supposed to have acted as hostess in December.

"Units that are scheduled to act as hostesses in 1931 are as follows: January, Rome, Ga.; February, Cedartown, Ga.; March, Barnesville, Ga.; April, LaFayette, Ga.; May, Griffin, Ga.; June, Summerville, Ga.; July, Winder, Ga.

"Whenever it is at all practicable for the units to form motorcades to the hospital at time they are to have parties during each month, it is much better for them to make the effort as nothing can be of as much encouragement to the workers in each unit as to come into direct contact with the ill men and see for themselves ways they can make their lives a little brighter. On these occasions, parties of almost any nature may be had—card parties, or any progressive game, with a little music interspersed and any entertainment from the stage that can be obtained by the various units. Delicacies may be brought by the units for these parties—cigarets are the favorites desired, but a few sweets are always welcomed by the men. Various units have been providing comfort articles which have been requested by the hospital and sometimes nuts are sent from south Georgia. Prizes for bingo games—approximately 30 in number, preferably cigarets, are needed for evenings when we have no other entertainment and the men like this game ever so much. If Sunday afternoons seem more convenient for legion posts and auxiliaries of Georgia to visit the Atlanta hospital, dates may be arranged up to 6 o'clock of that day of week.

"Christmas boxes made possible by the great forces of all units of the Georgia department, American Legion auxiliary, made a tremendous appeal to all ill men in Georgia hospitals, and much appreciation has been expressed for such gifts at Hospital No. 48. Much thought and effort were combined in the wrapping and purchasing of materials to compose the beautiful Christmassy boxes which were presented by Mrs. A. L. Henson to each patient in this hospital on December 23. The unseen things of life are the most potent after all and it is the underlying principles involved in every deed rendered by the understanding women of the auxiliary that counts for so much in the lives of patients in a hospital. If any member of a unit ever visits a veterans' hospital, she will renew her efforts along lines of endeavor for the disabled men in hospitals. Every patient in United States Veterans' hospital, Atlanta, Ga., joins me in many thanks for the invaluable aid that has been rendered by the Georgia department, American Legion auxiliary, ever since the hospital reopened in July, 1930, and extend happy new year greetings to all and wish all units unbounded success in their every undertaking."

Tour State.

Mrs. Ernest Travis, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Mrs. Harvey Kennedy, of Barnesville, department secretary, are making an extended tour of the units throughout the state. Thursday, January 15, they attended the district meeting in Quitman. Mrs. J. R. Davis is president of the hostess unit, the Wilbur Oglesby, of Quitman, and Mrs. Verne McLarty, of Valdosta, is eleventh district committeewoman. The meeting was held at the Country Club, where a luncheon was served preceding the meeting. On this trip Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Travis will visit Adel, Valdosta, Albany and Americus. Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Travis attended the meeting of the second district convention Friday, January 16, held in Thomasville, with the T. L. Spence as hostess. Mrs. T. L. Spence is president of this unit, and Mrs. T. C. Gandy, of Thomasville, second district committeewoman.

Mrs. James Maddox, national executive committeewoman for the Georgia department, will attend the national executive board meeting on January 26-27. This will be held in Indianapolis, and Mrs. Travis is planning also to attend this. Mrs. Maddox is on the national committee on trophies and awards. She will attend the national defense convention and the rehabilitation conference in Washington while on this trip. The purpose of the national defense conference convention is to bring concise facts concerning communism and other forces working to break down the American government; to teach national defense as a means of national protection and security, and to strengthen belief in the national government. Council of national defense, originating in the American Legion Auxiliary and sponsored by the D. A. R., numbers 40 women's patriotic organizations.

Unit Activities.

Macon unit, Joseph N. Neel, Jr., No. 13. One of the outstanding activities in this unit is the child welfare work. A survey has been made of the ex-service men and their families, and help is being given the needy ones. Fifty-five children are on the list to be helped. Mrs. Flu Holt is president of the auxiliary. A silver cup is given by the unit to the winning team in volleyball. This cup was presented to the Fort Hawkins team. This team played six games against other teams and was undefeated. Mrs. W. C. Turlington and her co-workers recently served a supper to 135, in a joint meeting, of the post and unit.

Washington Unit: Mrs. Boyce Ficklin was the principal speaker at the last meeting of the Wilkes county unit. Her talk centered around the disabled veterans, their needs, and legislation regarding hospital provision for men disabled in war service. The Wilkes county unit voted $5 to aid in the welfare work of the county, and contributed $25 for hospital work at base hospital No. 48. The unit will be hostess to the Augusta Hospital No. 62 in January. They will go over to the hospital from Washington, Ga., and will also give $15 for their aid. Plans were completed at the last meeting for a society circus. Mrs. Ben Cade, chairman of membership, has reported 72 members of the unit paid for 1931.

Athens, Allen R. Fleming Unit: Tribute was paid to Mrs. Horace Holden, formerly of Athens, at the last meeting of this unit. She was referred to as "Athens' most distinguished auxiliary member." She has served as department past president and national executive committeewoman. She has served in many other capacities in the local unit and the Georgia department. Mrs. Holden has moved from Athens, her husband having entered the law profession in Atlanta. Among those paying fitting tribute to the unselfish work of Mrs. Holden were Mrs. Julius D. Dudley, regent of the Elijah Clarke D. A. R.; Mrs. T. W. Reed, president of the Laura Rutherford U. D. C.; Mrs. M. R. Rhodes, president of the Georgia department of the Spanish War Auxiliary; Miss Moina Michael, "the poppy lady."

Mrs. John Howard has been elected president of the Leon Martin unit of Barnesville. She succeeds Mrs. Charles P. Graddick, who has been ill in the hospital in Macon for several months. Mrs. Graddick is, as all auxiliarians know, the wife of the immediate past commander of the Georgia Legion, and also past executive committeeman. Mr. Graddick resigned this post recently when he was promoted in his government work and was moved to Philadelphia. Colonel Ed Dunlap was appointed in his place. The entire department sympathizes with Mrs. Graddick in her illness.

Barnesville: Leon Martin unit, of Barnesville, have actively engaged in a number of projects during the last few weeks. They have sponsored an oyster supper, and donated a flag to the grammar school. Colonel Claud Chistopher made the address, and Mrs. R. P. Collier, chairman of Americanism, was in charge of the exercises. Mrs. Collier has also announced that the school children of Gordon are working for the Americanism medal, which is given by the unit each year on historic lines.

Winder: Mrs. J. W. Carrington, president of the John Rich Pentecost unit of Winder, writes that this unit has planted flowers around the hospital, and candy and flowers have been sent to the men in the hospital from Winder.

Tifton: An outstanding feature of the unit activities of the Tift county unit is assisting the post with the swimming pool during season. They follow also in close alignment the activities as outlined by the department. Mrs. W. J. Davis is president of the unit and Mrs. G. N. Herring publicity chairman.

G. S. W. C. Activities.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—"The Marriage Proposal," by Chekov, a one-act play, was presented in the play production room at the Georgia State Woman's College Saturday evening by Misses Marguerite Powell, of Griffin; Helen Steele, of Savannah and Mattilu Doss, of Valdosta, at the joint meeting of the Argonian and Sororian Literary Societies Thursday evening. Miss Mildred Minchew, of Baxley, directed the play. Miss Quinnie Carmack, of Hawkinsville, president of the Argonian Literary Society, presided.

Euclidian Club met Wednesday evening and Miss Annie Sue Brindon, of Norman Park, spoke on "Euclid" and Miss Cleo Griffin, of Ochlocknee, on "Archemides."

International Relations Club met Tuesday to discuss financial problems. Sunday evening the club meets and Dr. Gulliver will speak.

Philharmonic Club met Monday evening in the rotunda, with Miss Carolyn Bullard, of Nashville, in charge of the program: Miss Mildred Minchew, of Baxley, read a paper on "Chopin," and Miss Joyce Robertson, of Screven, played "Polonaise in C Minor," by Chopin. Miss Elizabeth Thompson, of Ochnocknee, spoke on "Face to Face With DeBussy" and Miss Helen Ryon, of Hinesville, rendered DuBussy's "Claire de Lune" at the piano. Misses Elizabeth Kirkland, of Sylvester; Mildred Minchew, of Baxley; Mary O'Quinn, of Patterson; Minnie Richardson, Mattilu Doss and Louise Clifford, of Valdosta, presented a playlet, "A Class in Public School Music."

Mrs. R. A. Peeples, of Valdosta, spoke at the vesper service Sunday evening on the "Character of Luke." The Y. W. quartet, composed of Misses Eureliza Swain, of Rome; Caro Horne, of Vienna; Ethel McSwain, of Lyons and Madge Ingram, of Vienna, presented a group of songs, and Miss K. D. Rantz, of Lakeland, was leader.

NATIONAL REALTY MEN END MEETING

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 17. (AP)—The mid-winter business meeting of the National Association of Realtors was brought to a close here today with the sounding by Harry S. Kissell, Springfield, Ohio, newly elected president, of a note of optimism for real estate in the future.

"You may feel free to leave this convention with considerable confidence for the future," Mr. Kissell said in adjourning the three-day meeting, "as real estate has come through the period of depression with less shrinkage on the whole than any other investment."

CHATTANOOGA PLANT TO REOPEN MONDAY

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—H. A. Hogue, superintendent of the Marion Extract Company, announced that the local plant, closed since last Augusta, will be reopened Monday.

Fifty employes, the normal number of workers, will be put back on the job at the plant. Sufficient orders have already been received to keep the concern active for the next three months.

The plant manufactures tannic acid used in the preparation of leather.

Y. M. C. A. PRESIDENT TO SPEAK IN ATLANTA

Francis L. Harmon To Address State Group Wednesday Night.

Francis S. Harmon, prominent editor and attorney, of Mississippi, and president of the national council of the Y. M. C. A., will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the dinner of the state council of the Y. M. C. A of Georgia, which will be held at the Ansley hotel on Wednesday night. Mr. Harmon is the youngest presiding officer the national Y. M. C. A. organization has ever had. During twenty of his thirty-five years he has been active in various phases of association work. He started as a member of the Hi-Y Club.

His war service began as a private in the regular army. Later he was commissioned a lieutenant and saw action at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne. He is a graduate of Harvard law school. Since he has taken up his chosen profession in Mississippi, he has proven himself to be a sympathetic and aggressive leader in political, community welfare, and religious activities.

Eugene R. Black, governor of the federal reserve bank and president of the state Y. M. C. A., will preside at the dinner conference.

The organization's executive committee is made up of the following: Eugene R. Black, S. C. Dobbs, B. L. Bugg, John W. Crenshaw, W. S. Ramsey, M. L. Thrower, J. W. Wills, and A. E. Wheeler, of Atlanta; Harvey W. Cox, of Emory; George S. Jones, of Macon; Abit Nix, of Athens; Columbus Roberts, of Columbus; H. O. Lowden and J. A. Wall, of Savannah, and F. W. Withoft, of Fort Valley. The secretarial staff is made up of H. W. Rohrer, executive secretary, and H. E. Montague, boys' work secretary.

Doctor Ends His Life On Operating Table

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 17.—(AP) Dr. Marcus Heldman, 58, whose earthly career was an enigma to even his friends, wrote his own final chapter of life yesterday with a characteristic flourish.

He drove from his home in an exclusive district to his office, donned a surgeon's gown and lay down on an operating table. Then he sent a pistol bullet through his head.

Reputedly wealthy and recognized as a skillful surgeon, Dr. Heldman practiced only in the poorer section of the city and refused to join any medical association.

CHARGE OF CONTEMPT FOR BELLE LIVINGSTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Belle Livingston, whole "Salon of Culture" on Park avenue was raided thrice by prohibition agents, faced new trouble today.

Federal Judge Caffey signed a warrant for her arrest on a charge of contempt of court, after Assistant Federal Attorney Bishop charged the woman, who was once the toast of two continents, had violated a temporary injunction restraining her from breaking the dry law.

She surrendered later at the federal building.

"This is ridiculous," she said with a defiant toss of her head as she was held in $5,000 bail for padlock court.

SENATE FOOD PROBE TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The senate's investigation of the prices of bread and sugar and possibly other food products ordered by the senate yesterday will get under way next week.

Chairman Capper, of the agriculture subcommittee to make the inquiry, said today the scope of the inquiry, the witnesses and the general program would be determined at a meeting Monday. Hearings will be started a day or two later.

Senators Wagner, democrat, New York, and Brookhart, republican, Iowa, authors of the resolution under which the inquiry is being held, have been invited to explain their views.

POLAND ORDERS WAR ON AMERICAN APPLES

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 17.—(AP) Orders to hunt down and destroy every American apple in Poland went out to all cities and larger towns of Poland today.

The health authorities some time ago prohibited the sale of apples from America, alleging that they had been sprayed with arsenic, but despite the prohibition there was evidence that the American apples still continued to penetrate the market, hence the extermination order.

PITTMAN SEEKS RELEASE ON BOND

An application for bond was filed Saturday by S. A. Pittman, rent collector, who is under indictment for murder of E. B. Fowler January 10 at Bedford place and Forrest avenue. Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton superior court, set the bail petition for a hearing at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

In his bail application, Pittman admitted shooting Fowler, but alleged that he was justified. Pittman alleged that Fowler grew angry when told he could not get back money paid in advance for rent, as it had already been remitted tot he property owner and Fowler threatened him for several days.

Pittman alleged that he shot Fowler when the latter reached his hand in a pocket as if to draw a gun. Pittman is represented by Reuben Garland and Shackleford & Shackleford

Various Georgia Chapters, D. A. R., Make Splendid 1930 Records

BY MRS. STEWART COLLEY,
State Editor, of Grantville.

January meeting of the John Laurens Chapter, of Dublin, was held at the home of Mrs. Finch Walker, with Mrs. A. T. Coleman, Mrs. Russell Kelly, Mrs. Alice Brinson and Mrs. George Walker acting as assisting hostesses. Mrs. E. B. Freeman, regent, presided and in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. E. T. Barnes, Mrs. M. J. Guyton served as secretary pro tem. A report on the sale of mutual benefit trade cards was given. These cards were put on sale by the chapter December 15 and in three weeks' time had added to the chapter's treasury the sum of $124. In addition to meeting all honor roll requirements the following donations will be made: $5 for gift scholarships, of which Mrs. J. M. Simmons, of Bainbridge, is chairman; $5 to Wakefield with Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, of Dublin, state chairman; $1 to Meadow Garden; $2 to the purchase of Fort Hawkins stamps. The chapter authorized their delegate to extend every courtesy to Mrs. Gaffney, Georgia's candidate for the office of vice president general. In response to a request from Mrs. J. A. Travis, state chairman preservation of historic spots, the chapter will offer a reward of $5 to the pupil in the Dublin High school who writes the best essay on some unmarked historic spot in Laurens county. A committee composed of Miss Katherine Chappell, Mrs. Alice Brinson and Miss Mamie Ramsay will have charge of this work. A committee composed of Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, Mrs. I. G. Prim and Mrs. H. G. Stevens will have charge of all details in the essay on "Girl Homemakers." Mrs. J. S. Adams was elected as delegate to the continental congress and Mrs. J. S. Simmons to the state conference in Macon. In addition to the regent and delegate, this chapter will be represented at the Macon meeting by Mrs. J. S. Adams, state librarian; Mrs. M. J. Guyton, state chairman of La-Fayette Day, and Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, state chairman of Wakefield. Mrs. J. M. Couric, chapter librarian, will bring in at the next meeting suggestions for lineage books to be purchased for the D. A. R. book unit at the Carnegie library. Mrs. W. M. Shurling, state chairman, of illiteracy, was a special guest and the following papers were read during the program hour: "Defense of Education," Miss Katherine Chappell, and "Socialism in American Colleges," Mrs. Frank Brown.

John Houston Chapter, of Thomaston, has just completed the history of Upson county. We congratulate the chapter and the author, Mrs. E. T. Nottingham and Miss Evelyn Hannah, upon the completion of so splendid a work. We publish below a letter from Mrs. H. H. Birdsong, regent of the John Houston Chapter, which tells more in detail of some of the excellent features of this history.

The Upson county history, just off the press of J. W. Burke & Company, of Macon, Ga., and sponsored by the John Houston Chapter, of Thomaston, is the second county history to be finished since the law in regard to them was passed by the legislature little more than a year ago, and is being universally received with enthusiasm. It was begun many years ago by this organization and adopted April, 1930, by the county commissioners as the official history. Handsomely bound in black and gold, containing over 1,100 pages, the volume is amazingly complete. There are many lists of names, each one of which is valuable; the 1830 census, the 1850 census, which gives the age of every white man, woman and child in the county at that time, the state in which they were born, and the occupation of every male over the age of 15; names of those in this county participating in land lotteries; names of individuals in other counties drawing land in Upson; Revolutionary soldiers buried here or any who made claims for pensions; rosters of soldiers in the War Between the States and the World War. There are, in addition, extremely important marriage records (1825-1865) and deeds. Cemetery records and data from family Bibles have been faithfully transcribed. But the book is not made up of statistics; there are interesting chapters on the foundation of the county and city, early schools and churches, manufacturing industries from the beginning to the present time; articles on early roads, and particularly the old Alabama road; newspapers, dead towns, etc., chapter on doctors and lawyers who practiced in the county.

But perhaps the most interesting feature to genealogists will be the 50 or more family sketches of pioneer Upson county families to which approximately 200 pages is devoted. The history and present work of the local organizations such as the Red Cross chapter, Sherman of Upson chapter, U. D. C.; Edward Telfair and John Houston chapters, D. A. R., etc., are given. However valuable these records, they might remain inaccessible to many were it not for the excellent index, covering the 150 pages and comprising more than 16,000 names, which greatly facilitates the use of the book. Copies may be had upon application to Mrs. H. H. Birdsong, regent, or to Mrs. E. T. Nottingham and Miss Evelyn Hannah, authors and compilers of the book.

Mesdames D. C. Gurley and E. F. Vickers were hostesses to the January meeting of the Bainbridge chapter, of Bainbridge. Mrs. T. R. Ramsay, regent, presided at this meeting and plans were perfected for the observance of patriotic days at the February meeting. The program consisted of paper on "Jumel Mansion—Home of Aaron Burr," by Mrs. C. S. Hodges. Mrs. E. F. Vickers had visited this historic shrine and she also gave a short sketch of this place. Those present at this meeting were Mesdames T. R. Ramsey, W. O. Gaines, P. S. Cummings, J. J. Cummings, Ramsay Simmons, W. A. Dole, Cleveland Thomas, E. T. Hines, S. S. Brinson, J. M. Simmons, M. L. Mayes, E. J. Perry, L. O. Hooper, Hoyt Donalson, Gordon Chason, A. B. Conger, Frank Battles, Otis Bell and Miss Ajetta Cummings.

Cairo chapter, of Cairo, of which Mrs. R. C. Bell is regent, met for their December meeting at the home of their regent, Mrs. R. C. Bell. Mrs. Kedar Powell led in prayer and after that a report was given by Mrs. C. A. Curry, chairman of better films. The chapter decided to make a loan to a Grady county girl to help her complete her education. Mrs. Eugene Clower was asked to assist the chapter with this loan. Mrs. Kedar Powell, flag chairman, asked for the privilege of buying flag codes for each grade in the local schools from the 3d to the 11th, inclusive. The following program was given: Paper, "Independence and the Revolution," by Mrs. T. W. Kennedy; song, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," by the chapter; talk, "Woodrow Wilson," by Miss Blanche McGahee. Mrs. L. L. O'Kelley was the program chairman.

Roanoke chapter, of Stewart county, met in Lumpkin at the home of Mrs. O. W. Patterson for their January meeting. Mrs. W. A. Fitzgerald, regent, presided and reported that she had received a deed to the place where old Fort McCreary had stood. This is a gift from the Metropolitan Life Insurance of New York city and included three acres of ground which is as beautiful as it is historic. This chapter now has recorded deeds to three of Stewart county's historic spots, namely: Roanoke, the village that was destroyed by the Indians; the plot where Jackson's trail is marked, and Fort McCreary.

Arthur Fort chapter, of Grantville, of which Mrs. V. G. Williams is regent, met for the January meeting at the home of Mrs. J. F. Brasch, Mrs. Ewell Hopson was associate hostess. Reports from the various committees were given and delegates were elected to continental congress and also to the state conference which will meet at Macon. The following interesting program was given, "Soviet Rule in Russia," by Miss Elizabeth Banks; piano solo by Rebecca Brasch, and a history of Tamassee by Mrs. Edward Nall.

A card has just been received from Mrs. A. R. Colcord, state chairman of Georgia Day, February 12, urging that all chapters observe this day. This department believes that every chapter in the state will observe this important anniversary because if they do not, it will be something like forgetting their own birthday.

We congratulate the William Candler chapter of Gainesville upon their splendid year book. It is the evidence of much thought and study.

William Candler chapter of Gainesville, held the January meeting at the home of Mrs. A. S. Hardy. Regent Mrs. Ernest Palmour, presided. An announcement was made that the chapter would offer prizes to the boys in the high school for highest averages in American history and citizenship. Mrs. Will Hosch gave a financial report for the cake sale during Christmas. The chapter voted to present $50 to the local Community Chest. The program for the afternoon was given by Mrs. Will Hosch, Mrs. Price Charters, Mrs. Carl Romberg and Mrs. George Ashford.

Mrs. Wylie Makes Announcement.

It is with sincere regret the state regent, D. A. R., Mrs. Bun Wylie, announces the resignation of the state recording secretary, Mrs. Clarence H. Leavy, Brunswick, caused by the serious illness resulting from an automobile accident of several months ago. The love and sympathy of the entire membership of the Georgia D. A. R. goes out to our beloved retiring secretary.

The state is most fortunate in the appointment by the state regent of Mrs. W. E. Mann, of Dalton, to fill the office of state recording secretary until state conference, in Macon, in March, at which time the appointment will be verified by election by this body. Please send all reports for "proceedings" to Mrs. W. E. Mann, state recording secretary, Dalton, Ga.

Lutheran Missionary Writes Of Work in British Guiana

A letter from Reverend and Mrs. Paul M. Counts, of the Lutheran mission in New Amsterdam, British Guiana, was recently received in Atlanta by Mrs. Herman Heller, together with interesting snapshots of the family and works there. The letter in part is as follows:

"We all visited the river (not designating name of river) stations last month; much work along the coast makes only these quarterly visits possible. We left New Amsterdam at 7 a. m. on the large river steamer, and while the trip was most interesting it got very hot about noon. We put a camp cot on deck so the children could enjoy their customary naps. The river at the coast is quite deep and two miles wide; there is not much bathing because the waters are infested with a certain fish that attacks bathers. A trip of 140 miles brought us to Marie Henrietta, our destination, at 7:30 p. m.; it is the center of three stations on the river bank. St. Lust being ten miles down the river and Itoni, the Arawak Indian station, being ten miles up the river which we visit via launch. The river is the main thoroughfare in all missionary work here, no roads nor even paths being found in the interior. Our sojourn at these stations is a week, because the steamer comes up every Wednesday and returns on Thursday.

Work To Be Done.

"The work here is old and the people are civilized, which is quite different from our African work. Near New Amsterdam we have two very promising stations, among East Indian people who speak the Hindu language. They have their temples and follow their native Indian customs. At Lochaber there is a Sunday school of over 100 pupils and at Adelphia, a like number. There is much missionary work to be done here. We have four preaching services and three classes every Sunday. Churches represented are Church of England, Scotch Canadian, Scotch Presbyterian, Jordonites Wesleyan, Salvation Army Catholic, Lutherans, with their respective mission stations, besides the Mohammedan mosque and Hindu temple.

"On Sundays the natives all come to church in their canoes, which they park along the river bank, but carrying their paddles for safekeeping up to the church. Ebenezer Lutheran church in New Amsterdam is 186 years old."

Luther League.

At a recent meeting of the Luther League, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, held January 4, the following officers and committees were appointed: President, Garnett Geisler; vice president, Miss Sarah Mae Rikard; secretary, Miss Marie Kerrison; educational secretary, Miss Mary Johnson; missionary secretary, Otto Kaminky; treasurer, Miss Minnie Trautwein, and hostess, Mrs. Geisler. The social committee, Miss Sarah Rikard and Mrs. James Bean; publicity, Frank Tate and Herbert Diekmann; the guest book to be presided over by Miss Grace Anderson. A substantial money donation was voted to be sent to Porto Rican work. The state Luther League convention will be held in Macon February 13-15, to which delegates will be announced later.

Vice President of Federation

Mrs. John L. Yost, wife of the pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, who is the valued second vice president of the Federated Church Women of Georgia.

Missionary Program Features Presbyterian Auxiliary Meet

A foreign missionary program will be featured by the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church, Monday afternoon, January 19, at the church. Mrs. M. P. Hamilton will present the missionary work in China and Mrs. Talmadge in Korea. Miss Catherine Morrow, student at Agnes Scott and a daughter of a missionary, will relate some interesting facts about the work in Mexico, and Miss Martha Logan, also student at Agnes Scott and a daughter of a missionary, will present Japan.

Six booths representing the six countries where the Presbyterian missionaries are stationed will contain curios and maps and other information and students from Agnes Scott dressed in native costume will be in charge. Tea will be served from the booths representing Japan, Korea and China, and coffee from booths representing Mexico, Brazil and Africa.

The Agnes Scott students who will take part are: Miss Florence Preston, Korea; Miss Caroline McMillan, China; Miss Mary Miller, Japan; Miss Maude Armstrong, Mexico, Miss Alline Hudson, Brazil, and Miss Annie Chafin, Africa.

Federated Church Board To Meet.

Miss Rosa Woodberry, president of Federated Churchwomen of Georgia, announces the annual meeting of the executive board to be held Saturday, January 24, at 12:30 o'clock at St. Luke's lunch room, 552 Peachtree street. Election of officers for 1931 will take place.

Congregational Group Elects Officers

Woman's Society of United Congregational chuch met at the home of Captain and Mrs. H. E. Storms, 163 Third street, N. W., Tuesday afternoon, where a large group of women listened to a fine program of music. The artists were Miss Willa Beckham, pianist; Miss Lydia Wheeler, soprano, and Mrs. H. E. Storms, accompanist. Prior to the musical, on nomination by the chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. J. A. Bailey, the following officers were elected: Mrs. M. Luther Stimson, honorary president; Mrs. W. T. McElveen, president; Mrs. E. H. Willisford, first vice president; Mrs. Arthur Helliwell, second vice president; Mrs. J. H. Miller, second vice president; Mrs. R. A. White, recording secretary; Mrs. L. H. Keller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. E. Mansfield, treasurer.

Mrs. Rogers Addreses Calvary Society

Mrs. Wallace Rogers gave an address on "Stewardship" at the Calvary Woman's Missionary Society Friday morning at the church. Mrs. Irby Henderson was appointed delegate to the annual meeting at Athens, Ga., from February 2 to 5.

The following officers were installed by the pastor, Rev. Irby Henderson: Mrs. E. C. Houston, president; Mrs. L. B. Loftis, vice president; Mrs. T. S. Blalock, general circle chairman; Mrs. E. L. McCrory, treasurer; Mrs. A. T. McNeely, local treasurer; Mrs. C. D. Benton, recording secretary; Mrs. T. J. Middlebrooks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. E. Wilson, social service; Mrs. W. A. Johnson, supplies; Mrs. J. G. Seay, mission study; Mrs. J. J. Edwards, publicity; Mrs. Lota Burnett, Wesley house; Mrs. H. J. Morse, Voice agent; Mrs. E. A. Entrekin, Juniors; Mrs. R. A. Walker, Primaries, and Mrs. Irby Henderson, baby division.

The following are the circle chairmen for the year: Mrs. L. C. Hays, Mrs. G. C. Collier, Mrs. E. G. Pope, Mrs. A. D. Gregory, Mrs. B. D. Manston, Mrs. W. A. Johnson, Mrs. A. T. Owings, Mrs. D. R. Bryan, Mrs. E. L. McCrory and Mrs. George Halpin. The meetings will be held the first Friday morning in each month at 10:30 o'clock.

Flint River W. M. U.

Mrs. J. W. Touchstone, superintendent of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union, Flint River Association, will preside at the annual meeting Tuesday, January 20, at Hampton Baptist church beginning at 10 o'clock. The worship period will be led by Mrs. J. P. Nichols, of Griffin. The welcome address will be made by Mrs. H. G. Fields, of Hampton, and the response by Mrs. W. J. Greer, of McDonough.

Reports will be made by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. A. G. Copeland, of Griffin, and the following chairmen: Mrs. J. H. Cheatham, white cross; Mrs. L. A. Ingram, mission study; Miss Dora Snead, stewardship; Mrs. L. G. Perry, personal service. Reports from district secretaries include Mesdames O. M. Duke, Griffin; A. G. Fields, Hampton; A. S. Castellaw, Locust Grove; W. C. Sparkman, Jonesboro; F. A. Sams, Woolsey; C. R. Gwyn, Zebulon, and Mrs. Touchstone. Vocal solo will be rendered by Miss Louise Keisler, of Griffin, and address will be made by Mrs. A. F. McMahon, of Atlanta.

Reports on young people's work will be made by young people's superintendent, Mrs. C. D. Ingram, of McDonough, followed by a roll call of churches in Flint River Association. Each W. M. S. president, Y. W. A. counselor, G. A., R. A. and S. B. leader or representative answering by presenting standard of excellence chart and reporting number of points reached in 1930. Mrs. E. B. Brooks, of Zebulon, will deliver an address on young people's work.

Hospital Auxiliary.

Mrs. J. W. Awtry, president, presided at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Georgia Baptist hospital held at the hospital January 9. One of the most interesting reports was made by Mrs. J. L. Jackson, chairman of the Christmas tree entertainment for the nurses, which took place December 23. Each nurse received a pair of silk stockings, a box of Nunnally's candy, and nuts, raisins and fruits. The address of appreciation was made by Dr. Louie Newton; Luke's Christmas story was recited by George Joseph Awtry, young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Awtry, and the nurses' choir rendered several Christmas carols.

What Is Self-Sacrifice?

Why is it self-sacrifice to do good to men and women? Think of it, we cannot give credit to a man for finding as much pleasure in doing good as in anything else under the sun. A man can be enthusiastic about golfing, fishing, shooting, hunting—oh, that's all right. Money-making, politics—yes, that's all right. But when a man becomes enthusiastic about the welfare of men and women, the world says he is mad and we call it "self-sacrifice."

Methodist Missionary Society Holds Annual Meeting Feb. 2-5

Approximately 300 prominent churchwomen will gather in Athens for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, North Georgia conference, Methodist Episcopal church south, which will be held February 3-5. Mrs. Jere Pound, president of the Missionary Society of the First Methodist church, will act as official hostess to the conference, assisted by Mrs. Claude Tuck, secretary of the Athens district.

Mrs. J. N. McEachern, Sr., will preside over the session and will make her annual president's address on Tuesday morning. Conference officers who will be present are: Mrs. W. A. Albright, Mrs. E. W. Brogdon, Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Atlanta; Mrs. Frank Wells, Hapeville; Mrs. L. M. Awtry, Acworth; Mrs. Rosser Little and Mrs. Glenn Giles, Marietta; Mrs. B. B. Brown, Griffin, and Mrs. Virlyn Moore, Bolton.

District secretaries whose reports will feature Tuesday morning's session are: Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell, North Atlanta; Mrs. J. C. White, South Atlanta; Mrs. M. H. Hendee, Augusta; Mrs. A. C. Jolley, Dalton; Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Elberton; Mrs. W. E. Grubb, Gainesville; Mrs. W. Y. Daniel, Griffin; Mrs. R. A. Field, LaGrange; Mrs. Roy Crisler, Marietta; Mrs. W. C. Cantrell, Rome.

Mrs. W. A. Albright is chairman of the program committee, the theme of which is "Go Forward." Miss Daisy Davies will bring the noon devotionals and Mrs. Katie Griffith, of Athens, will have charge of the music. Much interest is centering in the presence at the conference of Mrs. Stephens, president Woman's Missionary Council. Mrs. Stephens' address on Tuesday evening will have as its subject, "A Jubilee and What It Began." Bishop Moore will be the speaker of Wednesday evening, his subject being "World Peace." Other distinguished speakers on the program are: Dr. R. L. Russell, Dr. Wallace Rogers and Fred Barnett, assistant secretary general hospital board.

Missionaries attending will be: Miss Layona Glenn, Brazil; Miss Thelma Stephens, Bethlehem House, Augusta; Miss Jane Head, Wesley Community House, Atlanta; Miss Bert Winter, rural worker, North Georgia conference; Mrs. J. N. Castellanos and daughter, Havana, Cuba; Miss Maria Schnudt, Austria, and Miss Er Tzan Lok, China. The annual meeting will open Monday evening, at which time "The Way of Life," a pageant written by Mrs. M. E. Tilly, will be presented. This is being directed by Miss Vance, of the department of oratory, state normal school.

Names of delegates should be sent at once to Mrs. J. S. Hawkes, 390 Lumpkin street, Athens, Ga.

Military Crosses To Be Awarded

Military crosses of service, the decoration given by the U. D. C. for the descendents of Confederate veterans who served in the World War, will be given at the exercises celebrating Lee's birthday, at the state capitol Monday afternoon, January 19, at 2 o'clock under the auspices of Camp 159, with Garland S. Prior, commander, assisted by Atlanta chapter, U. D. C.

Hon. Walter McElreath and Mrs. J. J. Harris, president of Georgia division, U. D. C., will be the speakers and a musical program will be rendered by Mrs. Caroline Scott Perkins, accompanied by Misses Hinda Roberts and Ethel Platkin, and Tech High band.

Those receiving the distinguished crosses of service medals will be Emory Z. Hall, Mell Aycock, Virgil Gardner Shearer and Ivon Rolander. Mrs. W. E. Beckham, chairman of patriotic days, and Mrs. Alva D. Kiser, recorder of crosses, have charge of arrangements and program of the Atlanta chapter. Invitation is extended the public.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Adams, of Hapeville, Ga. Mr. Nisbet is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. M. O. Nisbet, also of Hapeville. Mr. and Mrs. Nisbet left immediately for Miami, Fla., where they will make their home.

Farley-Brown Rites Occur in Griffin, Ga.

GRIFFIN, Ga., Jan. 17.—The marriage of Miss Elamie Farley and Homer Brown, which was solemnized at the First Methodist church here Thursday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Quillian, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few close friends and relatives.

The church was decorated in green and white, with stately palms and ferns forming a background while tall holders containing unshaded white tapers cast a soft glow over the scene. Mr. and Mrs. Brown left immediately after the ceremony for their wedding trip and upon their return will be at home on Meriwether street, Griffin.

Mrs. Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Farley, of Griffin, and is a young woman of delightful charm and personality, popular with all who know her. She has been working at the Georgia Experiment Station as secretary to the district agents. Mr. Brown is the son of J. P. Brown and the late Mrs. Brown, of Lamar county, and holds a responsible position with Spalding county.

Miss Inez Bishop was married to C. J. Smith, Jr., Monday afternoon at the office of Judge Steve B. Wallace, ordinary of Spalding county, who officiated in the presence of a few close friends. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Bishop, of Molena, and has visited in Griffin. Mr. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Smith, of Eatonton, and is in business here, where he and his bride will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble Give Buffet Supper

Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Noble were hosts last evening at their home, "Wakefield," on Habersham road, at a buffet supper. The home was artiscally decorated with quantities of yellow calla lilies, combined with narcissi and white lilacs, which were used in profusion in vases and baskets throughout the reception rooms.

Mrs. Noble received her guests wearing a stunning costume of apple green chiffon, trimmed with crystal beads. She wore a corsage of orchids and valley lilies.

The guests included about 100 members of Atlanta's most fashionable society.

McDonald—Smith.

Brilliant Ballet To Be Sponsored By Atlanta Woman's Club Jan. 31

The colorful ballet, "Christmas Eve in Moskow," which the Atlanta Woman's Club will sponsor in collaboration with its author and director, Senia Solomonoff, at the city auditorium on the afternoon and evening of January 31 promises to be one of the most elaborate affairs of its kind staged in Atlanta in many years. Madam Lola Menzeli, "dance phenomenon" of two continents, wife of Senia Solomonoff, of this city, will be seen in a number of special dance numbers and be "premiere danseuse" of the ballet. Madam Menzeli's appearance in London and New York was of sufficient importance to elicit the most flattering comments from the leading critics throughout the entire nation, and Atlanta's "patrons of the dance" are looking forward with much pleasure to her first performance here in ballet.

Special music will be provided and many gorgeous costumes especially designed for this performance will be seen. The cast is composed of 150 well trained dancers which include one Macon belle in addition to representatives from a number of Atlanta's leading families.

The phantastic ballet, which has the effect of transporting its beholders to a make-believe world of motion and song, is built upon a Russian tradition that the peasants may seek, through the royal priest, the aid of Providence, at the Christmas festivities, which are an annual affair in Russia.

The opening scene with the peasants at prayer on the royal estates near Moscow, is particularly dramatic and realistic and the thrilling romance in which Ivan the Fool seeks the hand of Natasha, the beautiful, is ingeniously woven into the plot, which ends in the spectacular "mad dance" in which Senia Solomonoff, the originator, will be seen in the leading role.

Tickets are on sale at the Atlanta Woman's Club, Studio Arts building, Cable Piano Company, or may be purchased through Penelope Penn, street floor, Rich's store. Prices, night performance 50c, 75c and $1, and matinee, 50c.

Miss Collier Weds Howard C. Marler

SMYRNA, Ga., Jan. 17.—An announcement centering cordial interest to hosts of friends is that made by Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Collier, Sr., of Smyrna, of the marriage of their daughter, Alice Cordelia, to Howard E. Marler, which was quietly solemnized Sunday afternoon, January 4, in Marietta. Rev. Dr. Crowe performed the ceremony.

The lovely young bride is the second daughter of her parents and is of unusual brunette beauty, her charming and sweet manner having won her a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Marler is the granddaughter on her maternal side of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Thomason, of Atlanta, and a descendant of the prominent Willis and Henderson families of Texas, and Tampa, Fla. On her paternal side the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wesley G. Collier, distinguished pioneer citizen of Atlanta.

Mr. Marler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Marler, prominent citizens of Cobb county, and a descendant of the well known Hill family of north Georgia. Mr. Marler holds a responsible position with the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company in Cartersville, where the bride and groom will make their future home.

Dudley Van Clive Is Given Party

Mrs. Dorothy Van Clive entertained yesterday afternoon at her home at 10 Sheridan drive, in Garden Hills, at a children's birthday party in compliment to her little son, Dudley Van Clive, who celebrated his fifth birthday.

The home was attractively decorated with a profusion of carnations and narcissi and the pink and green idea was predominating in the entire color scheme. Various games were played by the little guests, including indoor croquet, and prizes were awarded the winners. Following the games the children were seated at individual tables which held in the centers large pink and green Jack Horner pies in the shape of dolls. The place of each little guest was marked by placecards to which were attached ribbons terminating in the pie and tied to little gifts for each child.

Mrs. Van Clive was assisted in entertaining the guests by Miss Ione Price, Mrs. George L. Reed and Miss Lucille McLaughlin.

The following children were invited: William Hamilton, Frank Coggins, John Coggins, Mark Cooper Pope III, Jacquelin Pope, Jean Schults, Bee Philips, Vivian Beville, Margaret Troy, Howard McCall, Jr., Mary Shropshire, Frank Winecoff, Gene Levert, Steve McIlvaine III, Donald Levert and Gayle Van Clive, sister of the young host.

Symphony Orchestra Concert Now Projected for Atlanta

BY GEORGE F. BRADFORD.

The writer has heard from Enrico Leide that he is promoting an Atlanta symphony orchestra concert for some Sunday afternoon soon. Free admission, free services of players with the Musicians' Union's consent, and all that sort of thing.

The hope is to prove to a group of backers that we have enough good musicians here to provide the nucleus of a great Atlanta orchestra, and that the public will demonstrate their interest by a large attendance at that concert.

This calls for a few remarks.

Mr. Leide can easily prove, all over again, that we have here the nucleus for a symphony orchestra. If he is granted enough rehearsals he can give a concert with local musicians that will make us enthusiastic (again) for the musical future of Atlanta.

But why should it be necessary to prove anything of the kind to Atlanta's prime movers? They know it already.

How much better it would be to raise plenty of money, organize a governing board, import enough musicians to balance the sections, and go at the job right, giving at least two concerts a week on week days, charging admission, building an institution that Atlanta can take great pride in before the world as the only symphony orchestra of the first class in the south.

A symphony orchestra becomes in time a city's greatest treasure, and I don't mean art treasure only. Look at Cincinnati. Do you think she would part with her great orchestra for any number of millions?

Yet an orchestra cannot maintain itself by any amount of struggle and financial grief unless the tastes and artistic standards of the people of that city show constant improvement.

After many years of struggle money comes to the relief of an orchestra that has been founded on a financial shoestring, and it is only then that the organization can reach the highest standard of excellence.

Every symphony orchestra founded originally on hope, and most of the American orchestras were started that way, has had to fight its way like an invading army minus shoes, clothing, provisions and ammunition, starving its way tactically in a process of public education until the time came when financiers and public-spirited citizens realized that their support had been withheld too long.

Such approaches to a symphony orchestra, like the approaches to a great bridge, begin far away from the span that carries us over the river.

The financial histories of all such great orchestras are fraught with grief and uncertainty. We quote from the book "Twenty-five Years of the Philadelphia Orchestra," by Frances Anne Wister:

There are two ways of embarking on an enterprise: one is to procure the funds in advance on faith; the other is to start the undertaking on faith and hope for the best to pay the bills. The first plan failed, the second succeeded, and after 20 years of effort an orchestra was financially established in Philadelphia.

This is not the best way, the ideal way to establish a symphony orchestra nowadays, as has so often been said in these papers.

In order to avoid the financial reefs that make the early struggles of great orchestra so pathetic we have been searching for the wealthy Atlanta man or men to properly finance it.

Yet, because there are so few men of vision of that kind anywhere, the slow and difficult way is the way an orchestra usually gains sufficient foothold on the affections of a people to make them want to perpetuate it, enlarge it, improve the personnel, widen its scope and thereby enjoy programs which will not fall below those given by other symphony orchestras of the first class.

Why not reverse this painful process in Atlanta, which stands before the world as the leader in southern progress? If we establish our orchestra mainly on hope, the titanic struggle lies ahead, with the possibility of temporary failure until another start can be made.

If we establish it with plenty of money we can sweep forward instantly to great artistic success.

Purse strings must be loosened somewhere to pay the cost of this. The nearer a local orchestra comes to operating without a deficit the more disappointing its promoters should be, because there is no such thing nowadays, considering high salaries and rentals, as economizing in artistic excellence.

A newly organized orchestra in Atlanta will not perform to capacity houses at first, therefore the artistic excellence of the orchestra cannot be set in advance by the estimated amount of money that can be taken in at the box office, but rather by the number of thousands of dollars rich men and women will be content to part with in order to pay operating losses and build the people's tastes up, at the same time, to the required standard.

In the nineties orchestral deficits used to mount to ten, twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars a season. Nowadays they can run up to a hundred thousand dollars and backers will not bat a lash at paying their share of it, realizing that a first-class symphony orchestra is cheap at any cost—only it must be first-class.

Success to Atlanta's projected symphony orchestra concert. Attend it liberally, give it your moral support, and take the fish hooks out of your pockets when the problem of perpetuating the orchestra comes up.

It does not matter much, in the end, how the Atlanta Symphony orchestra is organized, so long as it is organized without delay. There is no thoroughly fine entertainment in all Atlanta to regularly attract the intelligent classes. Time is flying, children are growing into adults without this cultural help in their lives; we must live fully and right today, for tomorrow we die.

Praetorian Dance.

The third of a series of dances to be given by the Praetorian Club will be given Friday evening, January 23, at Hurst hall on Pine street from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Renowned Dancers To Give Recital Here At Woman's Club January 21

Under the auspices of the Southern Musical Bureau, Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, world's renowned dancers, will be presented in a dance recital at the Atlanta Woman's Club Wednesday evening, January 21, at 8:30 o'clock. An unusual program has been selected for their Atlanta performance from a repertoire of more than 100 dances which includes some startling creations never before offered in America. The program is as follows: "Polonaise," Chopin; "The Master of Ceremonies," Scott; "In the Twilight," Milhaud; "Revolte," Wilckens; "Variations," Mozart; "Kassandra," Wilckens; "Romantic Dance," Debussy; "Russian Dance," Wieniawski; "Pavane," Ravel; "Capriccio," Wilckens; "Persian Song," Satie; "Waltz," Wilckens; "Rural Dance," Wilckens.

Yvonne Georgi is one of the outstanding dancers of Germany and was a member of the original Mary Wigman ensemble, of Berlin, from which have come many of Europe's leading dance artists. She was born in France of a Franco-Arabian mother and a German father. As a child she was trained for the career of a concert pianist, and at the age of 10 became known as a child prodigy in Germany.

Harald Kreutzberg is German. As a child he attended the opera with his mother which filled him with a desire to sing and dance. After the study of painting, costume design and primary dancing at the Mary Wigman school Kreutzberg appeared in the ballet of the Hanover and Berlin operas. Later he was engaged by Max Reinhardt for the Salzburg festival plays. He was eminently successful as the master of ceremonies in "Turandot," and came to America for the first time in 1927 to appear in Reinhardt's production of "Midsummer Night's Dream." Returning to Germany he began to dance with Yvonne Georgi, whom he had met at the Mary Wigman school. These two young dancers began to originate dances which have since made them world famous.

Alabama Visitor Is Entertained At Party Series

Mrs. Joseph Clowd Kendrick, of Birmingham, Ala., who is the attractive guest of her sister, Mrs. Turner Collins, at her home on Andrews drive, is being entertained at a number of social affairs. Yesterday Mrs. Collins was hostess at a luncheon at the Druid Hills Golf Club, in honor of Mrs. Kendrick. The table was decorated with pink and green, and the place of each guest was marked with miniature corsages made of colored candy and tied with pink and green tulle.

The guests included Mrs. Kendrick, the honor guest, and Mesdames Ray Lang, Julian Whatley, James Oliver, Charles R. Collins, Jerry Cowan, Roy Martin and Evan P. Howell.

Monday Mrs. James Oliver will compliment Mrs. Kendrick at an informal luncheon, the guests to include a few close friends.

Thursday evening, January 22, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Collins and Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Collins will entertain Mrs. Kendrick at their home on Andrews drive at a bridge supper at 7 o'clock. The guests will include 16 close friends.

"What's Downstairs?"

A lady, well dressed and charming, stopped Ben, our pet elevator boy, with the above question.

She stopped him, in more ways than one . . . he just grinned and said—"Basement, lady."

But, what he meant was: "Downstairs? Why, madame, downstairs is located a spic and span, roomy, attractive shop, through which J. P. Allen's endeavors to supply the growing demand for dependable, style-right merchandise at lower prices. Downstairs is a shop devoted to dresses and coats, hats and shoes . . . a basement, if one wants to be geographical, but not a basement in the accepted sense of the word."

That's what Ben meant, but being inarticulate he couldn't get it out . . . so we thought we'd better say it for him . . . Because we had a sneaking suspicion that there are others who don't know what's downstairs, at Allen's!

Depression Ball Given by Debs Jan. 26

The depression ball writes finis upon the activities of the Debutante Club of 1930-31, and will be given Monday evening, January 26, in the gorgeous ballroom of the Shrine mosque, a fitting setting for this ambitious undertaking of the debutante coterie, inasmuch as the funds accruing therefrom, will be devoted to the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital, the pet charity of this organization.

A prize will be awarded for the most unique costume, and attics will be searched for old-fashioned and out-of-date clothes to be worn by these social butterflies, and couples may attend for the sum of $1. A grand march will open the ball and other attractive features are under consideration. Officers of the club include Miss Hannah Sterne, president; Miss Elizabeth Spalding, vice president; Miss Laura Hoke, secretary, and Miss Margaret Arnold, treasurer.

Miss Jewell Deserts Army for Navy.

One of the loveliest army girls has deserted the army, as her affections have been captured by the navy, the engagement being announced today of Miss Cecil Jewell to John Burnside, lieutenant, United States navy. Miss Jewell met Mr. Burnside when the fleet reach Panama, where the tropical skies and flowers provided a perfect setting for the romance of the Junoesque blonde and the attractive naval officer. The engagement ring worn by Miss Jewell is a duplicate of Mr. Burnside's class ring of the United States Naval Academy. A large onyx forms the setting with a gold crest of the naval academy guarding the stone and the ring itself of heavy gold cut to fit the slender finger of the wearer.

Miss Jewell for the past three years has made her home in town, residing with her parents, Colonel Frank C. Jewell, U. S. A., and Mrs. Jewell; her grandmother, Mrs. M. F. Mosby, and her sister, Miss Bobby Jewell, in a hospitable home overlooking Piedmont park, and she has been numbered as one of the most popular girls in military and civilian circles. As a member of the Debutante Club of 1928-29 this army deb was feted at numerous entertainments. Woven into the colorful pattern of her girlhood has been the varied existence of an army child, for she has journeyed to stations throughout the states as well as in foreign countries. Graduating from the fashionable National Cathedral in Washington, D. C., she continued her studies in Panama, where her parents were stationed. Upon her arrival in Atlanta she at once endeared herself to a wide circle of friends and fitted perfectly into the interesting army and civilian social affairs. She possesses a slender, graceful figure, combined with distinct chic, and should the gay social life which she will lead as one of the "navy wives" ever pall, she might easily obtain a position as a model in a smart shop.

Mr. Burnside is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Burnside, of Silver City, N. M., and the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Burnside, of Washington, D. C. He is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy in the class of 1928 and is taking a course at New London, Conn. In several months he anticipates duty in Honolulu, Hawaii, with headquarters at Pearl Harbor. Since the date of the wedding has not been set and Honolulu is such a perfect place for a wedding trip perchance the attractive naval lieutenant will be accompanied by his bride when he sets sail for his tour of foreign service.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson Open Bermuda Home.

The annual exodus to warmer climates claimed Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, who departed last week for the Bermudas to open their winter home upon this isle of enchantment and sunshine. In the past five or six years they have spent a great deal of time there, declaring its climate to be the most perfect and salutary on earth during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson built a fascinating home, christened it Atlanta-by-the-Sea, and have many friends among the same smart fraternity of villa owners. They keep open house all during their solourn in the Bermudas, dispensing hospitality of the rarest quality, and their home is surrounded with stately palms and lovely gardens. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson are very active in all that transpires at Hamilton, where their home is located, and Mr. Atkinson is an ardent golfer and a prominent member of the Midstream Golf Club, one of the most picturesque places on the island.

Catholic Mission Appeal Answered.

The crying need for financial help to carry on the work by the Catholic missions in southwest Georgia has been heard across the space of almost 1,000 miles. To aid the cause a large box of exquisite gifts has been sent from Wilmington, Del., to be given as prizes at the bridge party next Wednesday for the benefit of this philanthropic work in the southern part of the Empire State. Immediately upon the receipt of a letter from her sister, Miss Annie Flynn, one of the three Atlanta women sponsoring the bridge, Mother Monica, of the Visitation monastery, sent

Dollar Dance Planned Monday At the Biltmore

Atlanta society will assemble Monday evening at the "dollar dance" to be sponsored by the Young Girls' Circle of the Tallulah Falls School in the ballroom of the Atlanta-Biltmore, the proceeds derived from the dance to be applied to the worthy cause of the education of mountain children at the Talluiah Falls school.

Members of the organization, of which Miss Marion Hull Smith is president, have already sold many tickets for the worth-while cause, and guests wishing to attend may purchase tickets at the door for the sum of $1. Hundreds of members of Atlanta society will attend, including the sub-deb and college sets, debutantes and young married couples and members of the unmarried set of Atlanta.

Miss Ruth Rowbotham is general dance chairman; Miss Catherine Ginn is ticket chairman; Miss Elsie Prater is chairman of the orchestra committee. Other members of the dance committee are Misses Marion Hull Smith, Yolande Gwin and Frances Howard.

Assisting in arrangements will be the other officers of the club, who are: Misses Margaret Harris, vice president; Ruth Rowbotham, secretary, and Littell Funkhouser, treasurer.

Members of the Young Girls' Circle include: Misses Frances Barnett, Helen Cody, Myra Boynton, Jane Dillon, Runa Erwin, Littell Funkhouser, Frances Howard, Yolande Gwin, Margaret Harris, Marguerite Hodnett, Katherine Howell, Mary Jernigan, Cecil Jewell, Billy Johnson, Lena Knox, Sara Law, Henrietta Mikell, Adair McCarley, Catherine Norcross, Augusta Porter, Martha Powell, Elsie Prater, Ruth Rowbotham, Frances Spalding, Marion Hull Smith, Hannah Sterne, Jane Small, Margaret Stovall, Virginia Torrance, Marion Wolff, Boots Walker, Martha Lewis, Pam Johnston, Margaret Keiley, Teresa Wade Atkinson, Catherine Ginn, Sarah DeSaussure and Elizabeth Dodd.

Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock all members of the circle will meet at the home of Miss Jane Small, on Myrtle street, to discuss final plans for the dance and to make reports on the sale of tickets. All members are urged to attend, as the meeting will be very short but of utmost importance.

Engagement of Miss Cecil Jewell And Lieutenant Burnside Announced

Of utmost social importance today is the announcement made by Colonel Frank Carson Jewell, U. S. A., and Mrs. Jewell of the engagement of their daughter, Cecil, to Lieutenant (J. G.) John Lockwood Burnside, U. S. N., the marriage to take place at an early date in Washington, D. C., in the National cathedral.

Miss Jewell is one of Atlanta's most attractive and popular army belles, and since arriving in Atlanta with her parents from Panama in 1928 she has enjoyed widespread popularity. She was a member of the Debutante Club of Atlanta during the season of 1928-29. Her only sister is Miss Bobbie Jewell, popular member of the sub-deb set of society. Miss Jewell received her education at the National Cathedral School in Washington, D. C., and completed her education in the Panama Canal Zone while her father was stationed there. Mrs. Jewell before her marriage was Miss Cecil Mosby, of Memphis, Tenn., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mosby, of that city.

Lieutenant Burnside is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Burnside, of Silver City, N. M. He received his preparatory education at the New Mexico Military Academy and is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in the class of 1926. He is stationed at the submarine school in New London, Connecticut.

The marriage will be quietly solemnized at the National cathedral in Washington late this winter and following the wedding Lieutenant Burnside and his bride-elect will reside at New London until this summer, when they will leave for Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, to reside.

Ralph Magill Makes Appetizing Salad.

There was once a great salad-maker who went in the evenings from mansion to mansion solely to manufacture the family salad for dinner. His fee was 10 guineas a bowl, and it was cheerfully paid, for the man was an artist, and well worth the money.

Such an artist is Ralph McGill, eminent sports writer of The Constitution and gentleman par excellence. He it was who introduced to Atlanta a wonderful salad made of lettuce and hard-boiled eggs. Quickly his fame has spread abroad, and the delectable concoction now bears his name on the menu of one of the city's most popular tea rooms.

Going into Rich's tea room one day recently for luncheon, the French chef who presides over the culinary department of this up-to-date department store learned of his presence and requested him to come back to his kitchen to make just one bowl of the salad of which he had heard so much. After the manner of French chefs, the portly genius of the kitchen went into ecstacies over the new dish, which, according to Mr. McGill, originated in a restaurant in his native city, Nashville, Tenn.

The directions for making the salad call for a head of very crisp lettuce, broken into pieces instead of being cut, for cutting destroys some of the flavor of the salad green. Hard-boiled eggs are sliced and added to the lettuce, the mixture put into a deep bowl which has been rubbed with a clove of garlic, leaving just a suspicion of its pungent flavor, and the whole dressed with a French dressing filled with Roquefort cheese. Proof of its popularity is substantiated by its daily recurrence on the menu prepared by Rich's chef.

Lovely visitors and a charming bride-elect vie in social interest with a recent bride and bridegroom and an attractive Atlantan on today's feature page. At the left is Mrs. Hugh Gallaher, of Forest Hills, Long Island, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. L. C. McKinney, at her home on Peachtree road. Miss Mildred Williford, in the oval, leaves today for Pass-a-Grille Beach, Fla., accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Paul Brooks, to spend several weeks at the Hotel Don Ce-Sar. Miss Cecil Jewell, daughter of Colonel Frank Carson Jewell, U. S. A., and Mrs. Jewell, whose engagement is announced today to John Lockwood Burnside, U. S. N., the marriage to be solemnized in Washington, D. C., which is to be the future home of the family, is pictured at the upper right. At the lower left of the page is Miss Marguerite Mountcastle, of Knoxville, Tenn., vice president of the Knoxville Junior League, who is visiting Miss Evelyn Branch at her home on The Prado, in Ansley Park. She is a great belle and beauty, and is being entertained at a series of informal social affairs. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Battey Crich ton grace the lower right of the page, their marriage having been solemnized last Monday in Augusta, Ga., at a fashionable church ceremony. Mrs. Crichton was formerly Miss Sarah Alexander, of Augusta, and after a wedding trip in Florida they will make their home with their mother, Mrs. E. C. Crichton, on Piedmont road. Photographs of Mrs. Gallaher, Miss Jewell and Miss Mountcastle by Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer, and Miss Williford is by Rogers and Farmer.

Tech Club Guest Of Mrs. Griffin

Mrs. George Griffin will be hostess to the Georgia Tech Woman's Club at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. H. Johnston, 1186 Piedmont avenue, N. E., Tuesday afternoon, January 20, at 3 o'clock. She will be assisted in entertaining by Mesdames W. M. Gathion, Harold Burger and Roy Mundorff. Music will be rendered by a group of Atlanta artists. Mrs. George McKee will sing a group of French songs in costume. She will be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Charles Chalmers. Mrs. H. E. Storms, soloist at the United Congregational church, will sing a group of German and Italian songs and be accompanied at the piano by Miss Willa Beckhan. Miss Lydia Wheeler, who is soprano soloist at the Central Presbyterian church, will sing a group of American songs and be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. H. E. Storms. Miss Willa Beckhan will render several modern piano numbers.

'Perfect Alibi' To Be Presented By Studio Club February 5

The best talent in the dramatic group of the Studio Club will take part in the production of the Little theater when Milne's "Perfect Alibi" will be presented in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club Thursday evening, February 5. Janet Millis Shepherd and Cyril Smith will play the leads. Mrs. Shepherd's professional training and skill, together with her experience in acting and in the direction of plays, combine to make her well suited to the part of Susan Cunningham. Cyril Smith, himself an Englishman, will have an opportunity, in an English drawing room comedy, to display his histrionic ability which has proven so entertaining.

A second English actor has been secured by the casting committee for the "Perfect Alibi" in Robert D. Ballantyne, of Scotland, who will give a realistic imitation of an English bobby, in the role of Sergeant Mallet. W. M. Camp, Jr., will play the part of Jimmy Ludgrove; Dean Axline, Georgia Tech's gifted actor and designer of sets, will be seen as Edward Laverick.

Joyces Brown, star of the Junior League Follies, will appear in the role of Jane, a very modern girl though she vehemently denies it. Pendleton Mitchell, whose finished acting has previously pleased Atlanta audiences; W. C. Pauley, Eugene Willingham and G. I. Tolson complete the cast which is rehearsing under the leadership of Janet Millis Shepherd.

Season tickets for the remaining performances of the 1930-1931 season of the Little theater may be obtained from the business manager, Kenneth Kalmbach, 91 Forsyth street, N. W., or Jackson 0991.

Officers Installed.

New officers of Piedmont Rebekah lodge No. 16 were installed by Mrs. Myrtice Beattie, district deputy president and past president, assisted by Mrs. M. C. Strickland, secretary and past president of the Georgia Rebekah assembly; Mrs. W. H. Hutchins, division president of the third division; Mrs. C. E. Williams, past noble grand; Mrs. H. H. Harden, past noble grand; Mrs. Lucile Irvine, district deputy president of Kirkwood Rebekah lodge; Mrs. Jessie Pitts, past noble grand; Mrs. H. T. Brown, past noble grand, and Mrs. J. L. Garden, past noble grand. The following elective officers were installed: Mrs. Daisy Stipes, noble grand; Mrs. Florence Blakely, vice grand; M. C. Strickland, secretary; Mrs. J. L. Garner, financial secretary, and W. J. Bagwell, treasurer, and a full staff of officers were appointed by the noble grand. Miss Beatrice Cadioux, junior past noble grand, was presented a past noble grand pin from the lodge; Mrs. Beatrice Weems, past noble grand, just retired after a very successful term, presented all her officers a lovely, useful handmade sunflower; Mrs. Beattie, district deputy president, presented all installing officers a box of chocolates. Mrs. Weems received several presents from members in token of her high esteem and good work.

Hugh Hodgson Gives Piano Recital Jan. 26

Hugh Hodgson, noted concert pianist and master teacher, will give a piano recital at Egleston hall, Monday evening, January 26, at 8:30 o'clock, under the auspices of Woman's Auxiliary of St. Luke's Episcopal church, of which Mrs. Arthur Tufts is president, the proceeds to go to the constructive work done by this organization.

Mr. Hodgson is not only known in Atlanta and Georgia for his artistic ability and his genuine musicianship, but for his never-tiring efforts in the advancement of music in the community and in the state. His performances are hailed everywhere as unexcelled works of art. His tone is soul-stirring in its warmth and appealing quality, and his technique is enviable.

Mr. Hodgson is head of the music department at the University of Georgia, which department he established a few years ago. His successful work with the University of Georgia Glee Club is known throughout the south. Mr. Hodgson divides his time between Atlanta and Athens, maintaining studios in this city and being organist and master of the choristers at St. Luke's Episcopal church. His reappearance in concert in Atlanta will be warmly received in musical circles and promises to be one of the most brilliant programs of the season.

Committee in charge of plans are Mrs. Arthur Tufts, chairman. Mesdames John Glenn and Floyd McRae. Tickets are on sale at Phillips & Crew's on Peachtree street.

Y. W. C. A. Begins Second Term Of Health Education Classes

The second term of the health education classes of the Y. W. C. A. begins February 1, with new classes added in tap dancing and gymnasium and with a few changes announced in the schedule. Miss Nannie B. Crow, director, requests those desiring to enter these classes to secure full information about the requirements, physical examination and schedule. New classes in tap dancing for beginners only have been added for the following days: Wednesday, 10 to 11; Tuesdays, 5:30 to 6:30; Wednesdays, 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock.

Classes in gymnasium will be held on Tuesdays and Fridays, 10 to 11; Mondays and Thursdays, 4:30 to 5:30, and Tuesdays and Fridays, 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock. There are also classes in mixed dancing, which are open only to those who took the first term or those who took last year.

A new class in tennis for beginners only will be given on Fridays from 4:30 to 5:15, while an additional class in children's dancing is listed for Mondays, 3:30 to 4:30. Other classes for those who were members the first term and for advanced dancers are contained in the new folders which may be obtained at information desk, 37 Auburn avenue, or by calling Walnut 8961.

Swimming classes which are given all during the winter will be re-organized February 1, with junior and senior life saving, diving and special dip periods offered. Of interest to mothers is the class for little boys held on Fridays from 4 to 4:30 and the dip period allowing mothers and children to go in together from 2:30 to 3:30 on Fridays. A special bargain dip to 10 cents is allowed school children on Saturday mornings only, and Decatur school children on Mondays. Suits and towels are furnished by the "Y" and swimmers will find the pool heated to the correct temperature.

Memberships Renewed.

January is observed as "membership month" when special effort is made to secure new members for the Y. W. C. A. and to renew 1930 cards. Mrs. E. V. Carter, membership chairman, called a meeting of her committee Friday to emphasize the need of renewals and the necessity for talking Y. W. C. A. in the churches, in business women's circles and in young peoples' organizations.

The nominating committee of the Y. W. C. A., composed of Mrs. John J. Eagan, Miss Susie Wailes, Miss Ellen Douglas, Miss Caroline Nicolson, Mrs. F. M. Berry, Mrs. E. V. Carter and Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood, has prepared the ballot for 1931-34 directors, and it will be mailed to all members of the association. The results of the election will be announced at the annual dinner given January 30 at 37 Auburn avenue. Anyone not receiving a ballot, due to incorrect or changed address, may obtain one by calling Miss Margaret Richards, membership secretary, at Walnut 8961. The ballots should be signed and mailed to the Y. W. C. A. by January 24.

Club Activities.

A series of lectures is being sponsored by the businessgirls' department, which are open to the public. D. M. Therrell, supervisor of radio and dial service of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, will give the second talk on the wonders of modern science Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, when he will explain the intricate processes of "Talking Across the Atlantic."

Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, Miss Helen Coyne Riley will give another of her impressions of "Operas and Oratorios."

The newest club formed in the businessgirls' department is the Halliday Club, composed of the members of the Halliday class of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church. Mrs. P. J. Gurr has been selected as president, with other officers to be announced later. Effort is being made to secure all former members of the Halliday class and to renew old friendships.

Friday morning the industrial committee meets for discussion of the organization of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Mrs. De La Perriere Urges Emphasis Placed by Clubs Upon Legislation

Mrs. Herman De La Perriere, of Hoschton, chairman of legislation for Georgia Federation, expresses herself thus:

"Legislation seems to be occupying the center of the stage just at this time, and I would like to urge all club chairmen of this department to take advantage of this opportunity to emphasize this work in the local clubs. To write to them all individually seems well nigh impossible, so I have written an 'open letter' which I would like to have printed on the club page." The letter follows:

"Dear Madame Chairman: The extra session of the Georgia legislature and the present regular session of congress afford an excellent opportunity of bringing the department of legislation to the forefront in club work. Vital issues are before both state and national bodies. Problems of government are numerous and difficult. Never has there been greater need for an enlightened and well informed citizenship. Legislative chairmen are urged to present legislative news at each club meeting, in addition to sponsoring one or more programs on legislation during the year.

"Women are no longer considered pioneers in politics, but ours is an everchanging, constantly progressive government and in order to keep pace we must continually increase our information, broaden our vision and renew our courage. Georgia will be a greater Georgia when Georgia clubwomen become legislatively conscious. Every club is urged to make a pilgrimage some time during the year to one or more of our state institutions and to the capitol while the legislature is in session. Such visits will give us a real vision, deepen our sympathy and understanding.

"There is much discussion at the present time about taxation, tax commissions, the executive budget and revision of the state constitution. The daily press is giving affairs of state a most conspicuous place in the day's news. As chairman of legislation it is your privilege to study suggested changes and proposed measures, and report to your club, state and national progress in legislative affairs. Let us resolve to make legislation one of our major interests in club work this year. I am eager to enlist the co-operation of every club chairman of legislation to the end that Georgia clubwomen may become an intelligent and important factor for state and national progress through better legislation."

Dallas Clubwomen Feature Tallulah Falls School for January Program

Dallas clubwomen are centering all their club activities during the entire month of January on different phases of the Tallulah Falls school. The program, sponsored by Miss Grace Clark and her committee featuring Tallulah Falls school, talks on different phases of the school and its different departments were given by Mrs. A. O. Colquitt, Miss I. V. Moon, Miss Ruth Denton. Musical numbers were given by Misses Floribel McGoogan and Frances Hart. At this meeting, Miss Lila Lee Warren was elected secretary to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Wendell Welch.

The club will sponsor a silver tea Saturday, January 24, the proceeds to be given to Tallulah Falls school. An attractive program is being arranged which will include the playlet, written by Mrs. E. M. Bailey, "The Light of the Mountains and the Wey Out." A number of prizes have been donated by club members and will be awarded at the conclusion of the program.

Vidalia Club Stresses Public Health Bill

Public health was stressed by members of the Woman's Club at the January meeting, presided over by Mrs. Ernest Whitchard, president. Mrs. H. A. Deen, chairman of the public health committee, gave a report of recent activities of that committee, and announced that through this committee M. H. Brice has presented the club a handsome vase. Mrs. C. D. Williams, leader, introduced the group of speakers, composed of four men active in public health work in Laurens county.

Dr. O. H. Cheek, commissioner of health of Laurens county, gave a most instructive talk on "Preventive Medicine," followed by a discussion of "The Benefits of Organized Health Work," by T. M. Hicks, superintendent of Laurens county schools. Dr. J. E. New, chairman of county medical board, and Rowe Blankenship, chairman of the Laurens county board of education, gave interesting accounts of the success of public health work, which has been in operation in Laurens county for the past 12 years. This important subject was discussed by well-informed men, and the realization was brought out more fully of the need of organized health work in the county.

Hostesses were Mesdames T. W. Timmerman, R. E. Ledford, George Rountree, W. T. McArthur, Jr., and Miss Alice Groover.

Dr. Phelps Lectures To Augusta Club

Dr. William Lyon Phelps, Lampson professor at Yale, will deliver a lecture on "Books" at the Bon Air-Vanderbilt February 5, given under the auspices of the College Woman's Club and Tallulah Falls division of the Augusta Woman's Club. A voluntary offering will be taken and the proceeds will be used for educational purposes.

The College Club has a scholarship at Tubman High school. Dr. Phelps two students at Yale and the Women's Club a scholarship at Tallulah Falls school. These annual talks on contemporary literature by Professor Phelps are eagerly anticipated, not only by the many who enjoy the wealth of information given by Professor Phelps in his talks, but for the delight of hearing this gifted speaker whose lectures sparkle with wit and humor as well as giving a vast amount of information.

Colbert Woman's Club

Colbert Woman's Club held an enthusiastic meeting at the home of Mrs. C. W. Porterfield, with Mrs. T. G. Benton, assisting hostess. Mrs. H. H. Hampton presided and the collect was read by Mrs. Benton. Mrs. J. B. Sims, secretary, read the minutes of the December meeting. Roll call was responded to with "Christmas thoughts." There were 21 members present. Mrs. J. A. Hitchcock, treasurer, reported a balance of $85.87 on deposit. Group workers chairman turned $28 over to the treasurer and Mrs. H. H. Hart, chairman for sale of Red Cross seals, asked club to co-operate in making the drive a success. Miss Bradberry gave the health report which was favorably commented on by Mrs. Hampton, who told of the encouragement offered club by the health and patriotic reports of last year's work, which were mentioned in the state yearbook and that General Federation president, Mrs. John Sippel, selected Colbert club as the subject of her talk at the national convention in Denver, Col.

The club decided to accept invitation of Superintendent Chandler to assist in planting trees on school grounds and a committee was appointed to prepare an Arbor Day program. Shrubbery and bulbs are to be given and planted by the club. It was reported that school library was in need of more reading matter and 20 books were immediately donated by club members, with supplementary material for the grammar grades. Superintendent Chandler gave 10 books, making a total of 30 books. Plans for using home economics building as a club home were discussed and it was decided to hold the January meeting there. Clubwomen furnished most of the equipment for this building.

Mrs. S. R. Hardman prepared an interesting program, including song, "Silent Night," by six little girls; orchestra, by six little girls; reading, "Are You Going Home for Christmas?" by Billy Bob Sims; song "Up on the Housetop," Latone and Marjorie Hardman, Louise and Christine Loden, Neva D. and Mary B. Hampton, with Miss Lawrence at piano; reading, "Christmas Reveries," Ouida Collier; duet, "Star of the East," Mrs. H. C. Hardman and Mrs. S. G. Chandler, with Mrs. J. C. Hardman, pianist.

Mrs. Romberg Heads Gainesville Federation

Mrs. C. L. Romberg was elected president of the Gainesville City Federation at the quarterly meeting held Friday at the Princeton hotel. She succeeds Mrs. D. L. Anderson, and the remaining officers elected were: Vice president, Miss Helen Estes; secretary, Mrs. Edgar Dunlap; treasurer, Mrs. Pierpont Brown. The outgoing officers are Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. D. L. Moore, secretary; Mrs. Lester Hosch, treasurer. The report was made by Mrs. Heyward Hosch, chairman of the nominating committee.

The club comprises the memberships of the Modern Topics Club, of which Mrs. Lester Hosch is president; the Book Club, of which Mrs. Heyward Hosch is president; the Progressive Arts, Mrs. J. G. Collins, president; the Study Club, Mrs. U. R. Waterman, president; the U. D. C., Mrs. A. H. Swann, president, and the D. A. R., Mrs. Ernest Palmour, regent, also accepted membership in the city federation at the meeting.

"Favorites From Operas" was the subject of the program, and the Progressive Arts, Mrs. J. G. Collins, president, was the hostess club. Mrs. C. L. Romberg was chairman of the program and the following took part on the program: Mesdames Will Logan, George Ashford, Will Hosch, Eugenie Wright, Misses Margaret Newman, M. Watson and Mrs. Romberg. Arias from "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore" and "Carmen" were sung.

Claxton Club Directory

Perkins; legislation, Mrs. Coy Edwards; song leader, Mrs. Clara Varnedoe; attendance, Mrs. W. T. Stubbs, and child welfare, Mrs. Ben Strickland.

Oxford Woman's Club.

Oxford Woman's Club held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. C. M. Sherwood with the president, Mrs. R. F. Harwell, in the chair. Potted begonias and bowls of narcissus were used in artistic arrangement in the rooms open to the guests. The meeting was opened with Mrs. H. H. Britt reading the club creed. The responses to roll call were the names of favorite music composers. From the tree and shrub committee came the report that a living Christmas tree had been planted. Upon discussion it was voted to sponsor a picture show, the time to be announced later, the fund accruing therefrom to be used in the financial operation of the club.

An Edward MacDowell memorial program, arranged by Mrs. H. A. Woodward, was presented as follows: "The Life of MacDowell," Miss Susanne Stone; music; group of MacDowell selections, Professor Bert Flanders; MacDowell colony," Mrs. Neil Barfield; music, Mrs. N. G. Long.

A social hour followed with the entertainment committee composed of Mesdames C. M. Sherwood, Carl Giles, M. R. Ellington, A. L. Sherwood and Miss Annie Bush Summerour in charge.

Maysville Club Holds Meeting

Maysville Woman's Club's January meeting was held at the home of Mrs. C. W. McCurdy last Tuesday, with about 45 members present. Mrs. M. P. Deadwyler, the president, presided, with Mrs. Paul Deadwyler acting as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Ferd Ray. A short patriotic program for the opening exercises included the singing of America, the reading of the American creed and the salute of the flag. Mrs. Deadwyler extended greetings for the new year to each memebr and expressed appreciation of the cordial support on the part of the club in all its work of the past year. She asked that each member, despite the stress of the times, go to work with renewed zeal and interest this new year.

Mrs. John Miller, treasurer, reported that with all obligations met, including a sum for charity, a nice balance remains in the treasury. Mrs. T. K. Miller, chairman of charity committee, stated that needy families had been provided with bedding and garments suited to the need of each by contributions and benefit club money. Mrs. C. W. McCurdy and Mrs. W. H. Wiley each reported the sum of money obtained from selling Anna Wade products, which they turned into the treasury and asked that members continue to buy these products until supply is exhausted.

February being the month to elect new officers, the president named the following as nominating committee: Mrs. N. A. Arnold, chairman, and Mesdames William Miller, F. A. Parks, W. P. Cooley and R. W. White. Mrs. L. W. Eberhart presented Mrs. W. A. Miller, Mrs. Ralph Miller and Mrs. J. O. Burnette as new members, who were welcomed. A reading by Miss Mary Hartley and musical numbers by Misses Bonnie and Grace Carter and Mrs. Billie Pittman were enjoyed during the social hour.

Visitors were Mrs. C. W. Bacon, Mrs. Fannie Camp, the Misses Carter and Ethel Moore, of Jefferson. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames W. O. Jackson, Howard Hill, Joe Arial, Billie Pittman and C. W. McCurdy.

Mrs. Johnson's Request.

Mrs. J. Fain Johnson, of Manchester, chairman of forestry in fourth district of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, asks that every club in the district plan the planting of a George Washington tree and have a George Washington program. Write to United States George Washington Bi-centennial Commission, Washington building, Washington, for program.

The president of the United States is chairman of the commission that is advocating the erection of ten million monuments to a great man. Ten million tributes, enduring the straight growing, which will be as evergreen as is the memory of George Washington in the hearts of the people recording the fact that he is ever the "first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Vidalia Woman's Club.

Vidalia Woman's Club featured a program on public health at its January meeting, and a short business session was conducted by Mrs. Ernest Whitchard, president. Mrs. H. A. Deen, chairman of the public health committee, gave a report of recent activities of that committee, and announced that through this committee M. H. Brice has presented the club a handsome vase. Mrs. C. D. Williams, leader, introduced the group of speakers for the program, this group being composed of four men active and interested in public health work in Laurens county.

Dr. O. H. Cheek, commissioner of health of Laurens county, gave an instructive talk on "Preventive Medicine," followed by a discussion of "The Benefits of Organized Health Work," by T. M. Hicks, superintendent of Laurens county schools. Dr. J. E. New, chairman of the county medical board, and Rowe Blankenship, chairman of the Laurens county board of education, gave very interesting accounts of the success of public health work, which has been in operation in Laurens county for the past 12 years.

Hostesses were Mesdames T. W. Timmerman, R. E. Ledford, George Rountree, W. T. McArthur, Jr., and Miss Alice Groover.

Mrs. Piercy Chestney Addresses Club Meet.

Mrs. Piercy Chestney addressed members of the Macon Woman's Club at the January meeting held at the clubhouse in Baconsfield. In discussing "Motion Pictures and the Community," she told what a woman's club can do for motion pictures. She outlined a plan through which the club could put in a motion picture machine at the clubhouse, in order that the little theater for motion pictures can be revived and an opportunity presented for the showing of a clinical film for the benefit of the doctors in the community. Mrs. Chestney presented the plan that the better films committee is formulating to bring to Macon once a month, at the children's matinees, one of the subjects in the Chronicles of America, which were made under the supervision of Yale University. Mrs. Chestney stated that a number of organizations had already indorsed this movement and promised support.

Mrs. J. A. Selden read an article which recently appeared in the Motion Picture Monthly, and edited by Lamar Trotti, called "What Block Booking Does," in which it was explained how block booking creates a market for better pictures, how it permits industry to keep ahead of public demand and how its effects economies. Mrs. Selden said that by the system of block booking a town is able to get the best pictures and get them as soon as the larger cities. "When an exhibitor gets a number of pictures under the system of block booking, he is allowed to cancel those he thinks would not be suitable for his community. If it were not for block booking, Mrs. Selden said that the producers would not be able to make splendid pictures like "The Silent Enemy," "Disraeli," and others. The idea of block booking is to elevate the taste of the people to better pictures, Sidney Kent, vice president of Paramount, calls block booking "a political handball." It is the wholesaling of pictures and is not a pernicious practice, but is done to benefit the exhibitors.

Miss Mary Shivers, of Wesleyan conservatory, winner of a recent radio contest, rendered several vocal selections and was accompanied on the piano by Miss Carolyn Bell. Mrs. Lewis Waxelbaum, president of the club, was in the chair.

Miss Martha Cole Presents Tallulah Playlet at Meeting

Miss Martha Cole, of Newnan, whose interpretation of the playlet entitled "The Light in the Mountains and the Wey Out," before the Newnan Woman's Club membership, was a feature of the January meeting of the organization.

Featuring the playlet, "The Light in the Mountains and the Way Out," together with a report of the Junior Welfare League, Newnan Woman's Club held an interesting and entertaining January meeting, with the president, Mrs. W. B. Hudson, presiding. She opened the meeting with New Year greetings from the state president, Mrs. S. V. Sanford, and presented Miss Martha Cole, of Newnan, who gave a reading of the rather unique and appealing story of the work and accomplishments of the Tallulah Falls school, through the playlet which depicts the true story of many Mary Anns to be found in this school. Through Miss Cole's interpretation of the story the women received a new vision and a keener interest in their school which is receiving such widespread recognition.

Miss Cole is the daughter of Mrs. E. M. Cole, who was formerly Miss Mattie Tate, of Tate, Ga., widow of the late E. M. Cole. Upon Miss Cole's completion of her studies at Randolph-Macon College, in Lynchburg, Va., last year, she traveled extensively in Europe. She specialized in English dramatic reading and her audience was charmed with her delightful portrayal of the play. Miss Cole has two brothers, Edwin M. Jr., and R. D. Cole, of Atlanta, whose wives are loyal and enthusiastic members of the Atlanta Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls. Miss Mary Glover was introduced and gave an inspiring resume of the work of the Junior Welfare League during the past year, her report reflecting great credit on this organization.

Our Versatile State Treasurer

By Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, state corresponding secretary.

The Chinese government has in the past weeks granted absolute suffrage to women; a movement is being pushed for The Hague conference to give equal rights to women in citizenship; women in Russia are recognized in all projects of government, and in Georgia we are following in the forward march of progress hand-in-hand with the male despite their slowness in admitting it.

So many of our clubwomen are joining the ranks of commercialism, but it remains for our state treasurer, Mrs. G. V. Cate, to prove what a dynamo of energy one person can be. Mrs. Sanford and I were her guests last year and we would come in from a long ride to the marshes of Glynn or over to Frederica where we had listened in rapt attention as Mrs. Cate gave us story after story of this old Spanish ruin, or that Tabby house or about the Spalding family burial ground and we would get ready to rest a while. Not so Mrs. Cate, for with that ever cheerful smile she would close the door on us in our lounging robes with a farewell bid to take a nap. "How about you?" we asked. "Oh, I must go and see about my chickens, then get out some reports and then I have some typewriting to do, but I will see you at supper time."

Winner of Loving Cups.

The result of all this strength of mind and body is reaping for her many well earned rewards. In a clipping from the Brunswick Pilot there is the announcement that "The ten barred Plymouth Rock hens owned by Mrs. G. V. Cate, of this city, won the silver loving cup awarded the high pen in the American class at the Georgia egg-laying contest. . . . This is a distinct honor for Mrs. Cate is the only poultry breeder in Georgia whose pen has ever won first prize on a year's record at any contest."

The Cate strain of Barred Plymouth Rocks is one of the best known laying strains in the United States and has been sought by colleges and experiment stations for their foundation stock. Mrs. Cate has supplied breeding stock to the Georgia College of Agriculture, Clemson College, South Carolina; Virginia Polytechnic Institute and to the United States government for the experiment plant at Beltsville, Md. Not only that, she is a consistent winner, having four silver cups to her credit. She won first place at the southeastern egg laying contest, McCormick, S. C., in 1926 and again in 1927, at the Alabama egg laying contest in 1928, and at the Georgia contest in 1930.

Her interest in barred rocks dates back to 1922 when she purchased her foundation stock; she has bought no stock since, but does her own breeding, being careful to keep certain blood lines distinct, so that she can mate her birds from year to year without inbreeding.

Dr. Cate's Turkeys.

While Mrs. Cate breeds chickens, Dr. Cate raises turkeys and the Brunswick Pilot goes on to say that "Last year he raised and marketed 225 and this year he has 500 beautiful Narragansett turkeys. Dr. Cate raises his turkeys with as much scientific care as a hospital baby receives."

"Our Todays and Yesterdays." This is the title of a most interesting story of Brunswick and the coastal islands published by Mrs. Cate in 1930. All through it is a mass of data from the earliest known province of Guale, through the Spanish occupation when Mrs. Cate writes "Brother Domingo wrote the first book ever written on United States soil" to the coming of the English who fought with Indians, Spaniards and pirates, through the Revolutionary days and the War Between the States, which she says "might be called plantation days because of the large and prosperous plantations along the coast," past the settlement of Sapelo island to the coming of such well-known Georgia families as the duBignons, Spaldings, Kings, Coopers, deBoisfeuillet, Rodriguez, Gwinnett and many more familiar as belonging to the builders of our state, Mrs. Cate fills page after page with reading that keeps one absorbed and gains for us a pride in the reverence due such pioneer planting of our government as she has assembled for our reading.

Mrs. Maxfield Parrish and Howard Coffin.

The assistance of Mrs. Maxfield Parrish and Howard Coffin in the research that Mrs. Cate has undertaken to find old maps and locate historic spots has meant much to her. Mrs. Parrish has a winter home on St. Simon's island and her love for the locality has found expression in hunting up old pictures and maps and retracing them. Mr. Coffin has used a folder compiled by Mrs. Cate for the interest of visitors to Sea Island Beach.

Historic Collection.

Another of Mrs. Cate's many undertakings as a clubwoman and a citizen of Glynn county was the gathering up from friends and neighbors of all sorts and kinds of old stuff, pictures, jewelry, clothes, maps, chests, swords and what-nots and displayed them in the parlors of the Sea Island hotel. This was the first exhibit she ever held on that historic spot and Mrs. Cate was astounded at the splendid collection of early Americana.

We look with pride on the accomplishments of this one woman and we know that the Georgia Federation has as its treasurer a faithful exponent of all that is best for county, state and nation. Mrs. Cate is an expert chicken fancier, author and historian.

Mrs. Gardner Elected.

Stone Mountain Woman's Club elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: Mrs. W. A. Gardner, president; Mrs. Louise Dempsey, vice president; Miss Annyrene McCurdy, secretary and treasurer; Miss Janie Maddox, parliamentarian; Mrs. F. E. Sacket, Mrs. J. A. Bagwell Center and Miss Janie Maddox, committee on town improvement; Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. W. P. Humphreys, committee for cemetery improvement.

Mrs. Stapleton Heads Georgia Sorosis Club

Mrs. Raymonde Stapleton was installed as president of the Georgia Sorosis Club at the January meeting held in Elberton at the home of Mrs. H. L. Wiggs, who was assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Linwood Wiggs Jr., and Misses Blanche and Jean Wiggs. Mrs. W. L. Wester, retiring president, presented the gavel to Mrs. Stapleton, who possesses executive ability and is an ideal leader. She outlined the work to be conducted during her regime.

Mrs. C. J. Almand gave report of the two years' work as chairman of the executive board, showing that the past year under Mrs. Wester's leadership was one of the most constructive in the history of Georgia Sorosis. An exceptionally brilliant program was arranged by Mrs. J. W. Wester, in which Miss Elizabeth Jane Mattox rendered a piano solo; and a legend, "What a Man's Hand Is to a Man," was given by Mrs. Hal K. Boswell.

The corps of officers elected to serve with Mrs. Stapleton are Mrs. C. J. Almand, first vice president; Mrs. A. S. Oliver, second vice president; Mrs. C. P. Herndon, recording secretary; Mrs. C. J. Hayes, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. Allen, treasurer; Mrs. W. D. Tutt, auditor; members of the executive board include Mesdames J. M. Wester, A. S. Simmons, T. O. Taber, Jr., and Mrs. H. T. Brookshire. Mrs. W. E. Snowden is press chairman.

Canton Club Holds January Meet

January meeting of Canton Woman's Club was held Friday afternoon at the clubhouse with the president, Mrs. J. E. Johnston, presiding. Mrs. J. W. Chamlee, parliamentarian, gave the constitution of the club and discussed several fine points of parliamentary rules.

New Year's greetings from Mrs. Sippel, general federation president, and from Mrs. A. J. McCurry, district president, were read, and then Mrs. Johnston gave the following greetings:

"In thinking of our past year's work it would be in terms of "memories" and "wishes"—that of memory as to truth, beauty and all loveliness shall live again. Memories of warm handclasps fragrant with sweet friendships and companionship that is bright and radiant with the light of perfect understanding. As we enter the threshhold of 1931 let our minds only retain memories of pleasant things, benevolent deeds and say 'These are the things that have made life worth while and they now become my wishes for the return of similar happiness in the days that will unfold with the coming of a new year.'

"Some writer very truly said 'God made the world but He did not make my world or your world.' We are our own architect and your world will be beautiful to the extent that you create it so. And because I may I would build my world wide and high, for the light of it I would cultivate cheerfulness, for the warmth of it; there should be friendship, for the comfort of it; there should be patient forbearance, for the calmness of it; there should be gentle sympathy, for the kinship of my world to yours; there must be suffering 'a common touch that makes the whole world akin.' For the glory of it there must be the privilege of work; the golden privilege that I may be of use to my fellowman in making his world lovely too! That in some special way I may be permitted to help to understand the pattern for his life; that I may catch a gleam of the star of hope that shines only dimly to his discouraged vision, and that I may bring the purple and gold of friendship and lay it on the souls Rialto, and take in exchange that which he may be able to do for me. Now, softly close the door to the old year with all its disappointments and failures and write on its panel, 'Memories,' and on the door opening into the freshness of the new year, 'Wishes.' Wishes for the best year, the happiest year, the ripest, richest year of all the years."

A program on "Florida" was presented and Mrs. O. G. Glover gave an interesting paper on this subject. Mrs. Bessie Saine played "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River" and gave an interesting paper on "Sponge Industry in Florida," and Mrs. Dick gave an article on this subject. American home department of which Mrs. N. J. Coker is chairman, served refreshments.

Mrs. Gholston Is Appointed.

Governor Hardman has appointed Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, on the Georgia Library commission for a term of three years. Mrs. Gholston has been state chairman of library extension in Georgia federation for past four years and has done outstanding work, co-operating at all times with the state work and keeping the clubwomen of Georgia interested in establishing and improving the libraries of their home towns.

The library commission was established in 1897 but it was not until 1919 that the legislature made the appropriation to carry on the work. This appropriation was obtained through the work of the clubwomen under the leadership of Mrs. John K. Ottley who has been chairman of the commission since its establishment in 1897.

Will Help Needy.

Mrs. E. J. Reagan, assisted by Mesdames C. D. Ingram and E. L. Reagan, was appointed chairman of a committee to provide school books and clothes for needy children in the community at the January meeting of the McDonough Woman's Club. Mrs. Reagan, district chairman of child welfare, gave a splendid report which outlined and suggested the activities of such a committee and proposed the work for the local club, which was heartily indorsed.

Mrs. E. L. Reagan and Mrs. C. D. Ingram were made chairmen of a committee to plant shrubs as a memorial to Mrs. Grace F. Dickson, president of the organization. They will be assisted by Mrs. Ralph L. Turner. Tentative plans of this committee include a formal planting program and bronze markers which will commemorate the service of each president. The program, a study of Georgia noveltists, was directed by Miss Bertha Bunn.

'Thrift Week' Observance Urged By Mrs. Stanley C. Davis

Mrs. Stanley C. Davis, chairman of family finance, of the Fifth District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, requests federated clubs to unite in the observance of national "Thrift Week," January 17 to 23, and says:

"January 17 to 23 is nationally designated as Thrift Week and the federated women's clubs is one of 50 organizations of national scope indorsing the movement and entering into its observance. Certainly no group of persons is more interested in the promotion of thrift nor more vitally concerned in the matter of family finance than is that group designated as housewives, of which our clubs are largely composed. It is the housewife, for the most part, who is responsible for the manipulation of the family budget. It is she who spends and it is she who saves. It is the woman and child who profit most as the result of thrift and who suffers most from its lack. It is then the direct obligation of clubwomen to promote both the study and practice of this fundamental virtue, and never was the time more opportune than the present."

Clubs of the district are asked to consider and observe the week according to the following subject outline: Sunday, January 19, Share With Others Day; Monday, January 20, Budget Day; Tuesday, January 21, Make a Will Day; Wednesday, January 22, Own Your Own Day, and Thursday, January 23, Safe Investment Day. These are topics which vitally concern family life and should not be overlooked nor disregarded by those who have the responsibility and welfare of a family resting upon them. How easy it is to postpone the making of a will or the subscription for life insurance and ofttime how serious is the result of such procrastination.

Mrs. Nachman Will Represent Georgia at Washington Conference

Mrs. David Nachman, of Augusta, chairman of international relations of the Georgia Federation, will attend the sixth national conference on the cause and cure of war, to be held in Washington, D. C., January 19 to 22. These conferences are held under the auspices of 11 national women's organizations, which have prepared and indorsed their programs.

The call for the conference, issued by the national chairman, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, says in part:

"'Prospective war preparations are costing Europe six millions of dollars a day to say nothing of the countless billions still unpaid for past wars,' said the chairman of the naval affairs committee of the house of representatives on September 21, as he returned from an extended trip through Europe. A distinguished Hungarian on the same day set 1937 as the probable date of the next European war. 'Men under arms, including active reserves in the world, are almost thirty millions in number or nearly ten millions more than before the Great War,' said President Hoover in his armistice address of 1929. Raymond B. Fosdick, in correcting an overoptimistic estimate made by Mr. Coolidge concerning the American attitude on preparation, says that the United States has today 1,250,000 tons in its national fleet as compared with 843,600 tons before the Great War, whereas Great Britain and France have each a smaller number of tons than before that date; that in actual cost for naval armament the United States is spending today three hundred and seventy-five millions, whereas in 1913 she spent one hundred and thirty-seven millions.

"Do you want war, ever more war, continuing past history, or do you want eternal peace and goodwill, the hope of the civilized nations?"

Georgia Products To Be Featured In Prize Menu

A menu featuring Georgia products, will be the subject of the February meeting of Midville Woman's Club, and Mrs. R. H. Comer, chairman of American homes, requests each member to submit a dinner menu, which will be judged and a prize given for the best.

The January meeting had Mesdames R. H. Sanford, Joe B. Jones and J. B. Murphree as hostesses, and the president, Mrs. J. B. Thurman, was in the chair. Mesdames G. M. Barnes and R. H. Sanford presented papers on English literature, entitled "The Norman French Period" and "Geoffrey Chaucer," which will be kept on file in the club library.

Public welfare department sponsored an Arbor Day program, and Miss Bessie Drew read a collection of poems; Mrs. L. W. Murphy sang "Trees," by Joyce Kilmer; Mrs. G. M. Barnes made an address on "George Washington;" Mrs. W. C. Mulling talked on "Presenting of Trees;" Mrs. T. E. Pippin chose as her subject "Planting of Trees;" Mrs. J. B. Thurman talked on "Acceptance of Trees."

A magnolia tree was planted to memorialize George Washington, whose 200th birthday will be celebrated next year. Four stately pines were planted in honor of the three past presidents of Midville Woman's Club, Mesdames J. L. Slade, G. M. Barnes, J. L. Parish and for the incumbent president, Mrs. J. B. Thurman. Two lilac shrubs were planted for the precious baby girls born this year to club members, including Elizabeth Rose Johnston, daughter of Mrs. R. A. Johnston, and Fay Lois Atkinson, daughter of Mrs. C. J. Atkinson. The custom was established to plant a pine tree for each succeeding president and a lilac shrub for every club baby.

Mrs. Cobb Re-elected By Ellijay Club.

Mrs. J. P. Cobb heads Ellijay Woman's Club, being re-elected at the January meeting held at Mrs. H. C. Cole's home. The corps of officers elected to serve with her include Mrs. M. L. Cox, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Watkins.

Mrs. Howard Perry was program chairman which featured "Italy." Italian music, by Mrs. C. H. King; arts of Italy, by Mrs. R. W. Smith; dress and customs of Italy, by Mrs. E. T. Hudson, were included on the program. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. J. L. Hamby. Those present were Mesdames E. T. Hudson, G. G. Ward, J. P. Cobb, J. L. Hamby, E. W. Watkins, M. A. Cox, R. W. Smith, L. L. Daugherty, Jr., Howard Perry, M. L. Cox, Jr., and H. C. Cole.

Mrs. Hinman Speaks.

Mrs. George B. Hinman, chairman of art in the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Woman's Clubs, will speak on "Bourbon Art" at her home, 923 Piedmont avenue, Tuesday, January 27, at 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. Hinman is an authority on the development of modern art, and other lectures to be given by her at her home each Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock include "Pseudo-Classicism," "Romanticism," "Romanticism continued; Barbizon School;" "Realism," "Realism continued," "Impressionism and Neo-Impressionism," "Post-Impressionism" and "Contemporary Art."

D. A. R. Delegates Are Elected for State Convention

Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., met Thursday afternoon at Craigie House with the regent, Mrs. Eli A. Thomas presiding, when the following delegates were elected to represent the chapter at the state conference at Macon March 24, 25 and 26: Mrs. J. Whiteford Russell, Mrs. James O. Wynn, Mrs. William Barnes Smith. Alternates elected were: Mesdames Rowe Price, E. R. Kirk, J. D. Cromer, W. H. Smaw, T. C. Ratliffe, C. V. LeCraw, Thomas Morgan, L. P. Pairo, H. Lane Young and Miss Annie Laurie Hill.

Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology, presented an inspiring patriotic address upon "National Defense," and stressed the importance of a good military defense on sea and land and air. He declared that every country should be prepared to protect its liberty and its civilization. A group of songs were sung by Mrs. S. M. Green, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. A. Barry. At the conclusion of the program tea was served by Mrs. W. H. Smau and members of the house committee.

CATHOLIC MISSION APPEAL ANSWERED

the box which contains lovely handiwork executed by the sisters of this institution. For months these women, whose very lives bespeak charity, have spent their spare time in making daintily embroidered pillows, fancy linen sets, handpainted pictures, etc., with the thought that every stitch of the needle or stroke of the brush would eventually mean help for someone in distress.

Sponsored by women imbued with the spirit of the Golden Rule, such as Miss Annie Flynn, Mrs. Ellen Anderson and Mrs. J. J. Lynch, certainly success will crown their efforts to bring relief to the less fortunate by the results of next Wednesday's benefit.

Miss Helen Riley Heard in Concerts.

Miss Helen Riley, popular young director of the Atlanta Music Center, has resumed her activities here after a visit to her home in Syracuse, N. Y., following which she visited friends in New York city, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. In addition to a round of social engagements, Miss Riley found time for many musical appearances of significance, and notable among these was her singing at the holiday salon charity concert in New York. This program was arranged by Miss Riley's teacher, Paul Reimers, who is an eminent tenor and member of the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music. In Philadelphia Miss Riley gave a highly successful song recital at the Conservatory of Music. Madame Olga Samaroff, pleasantly remembered in Atlanta, is a director of that institution. While in Washington she visited Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hansen, of the United States foreign service.

Mrs. Pearson Writes Of Trip to China.

Charming Mrs. W. F. Pearson, wife of Colonel Pearson, who is stationed in the Phillipines, made an interesting trip through China accompanied by her daughter, Miss Sally Pearson, a member of last season's debutante coterie. Her letters to Atlanta friends reveal the wonders of the east, and especially was she entranced with Peking, built on the wide plain and surrounded by high walls with the entrance blocked by 16 gates. The city, according to Mrs. Pearson, is really two cities, with the Imperial City, where the palaces are built, enclosed with an imposing wall of yellow tiles over 40 feet high.

Mrs. Pearson wrote of Peking: "We are entranced with it. It is just what one imagines it to be, only more vast. We had two rickshaw coolies who were untiring in their efforts to please. Lee, my boy, would never take Sally, as her three musketeers came up to take her about frequently and her boy, Kree, had many hours off and felt that 'Little Missy' wasn't doing Peking properly. It took me exactly five days to buy six plates, and my boy said, 'You buy too fast. You take time—and get price more cheap.'"

A marvelous Chinese dinner party, called a Chinese chow, given in a famous Chinese restaurant, was a unique experience for Mrs. Pearson and Miss Pearson—and the menu was a marvel of Chinese art. The first course consisted of seeds, fried, and served with tea. The table was laid with a tiny silver plate, chop sticks, a soup spoon, a two-tined fork and a small silver cup. Into the cup was poured hot rice wine, then four cold dishes were served. Consomee with pigeon eggs, shark fins, birds nest soup, chicken velvet, chicken ham, noodles, a delicious sweet of rice, fruit and lotus nuts was served, followed by turtle eggs, baked fish with ginger sauce, Peking duck with pancakes, and rice with a concoction of chrysanthemum petals and chopped fruit.

The American visitor wrote that after the dinner was completed a thick gruel was served and "if you were Chinese you should be able to begin all over again. All through the meal a little cup is kept full of the hot wine. At first I wondered if I could drink it and then I found I could. It was quite a huge dinner party and great fun."

The travelers spent three days in Tientsin and had an eventful trip down the Peiho river. The boat only carried 40 passengers and the service was excellent. However, a sand bar was encountered in the river and the boat stuck fast upon it. The trip down took six days instead of three, and as the weather was very cold, the arrival in the tropical station was indeed welcome.

Winchell Mentions Altanta Poet.

"As quiet as words unspoken," a simile from a poem by Atlanta's famous poet, Daniel Whitehead Hicky, was chronicled last week in Walter Winchell's syndicated column, among similes from many of America's most famous authors and poets. The similes were taken from the 1930 edition of Frank J. Wilstach's "Dictionary of Similes," one of the interesting tomes published annually.

The phrase was taken from the following poem which appeared recently in the Sunday magazine of the New York Herald-Tribune by the southern poet, entitled, "Swamp Night."

As quiet as words unspoken, daylight goes
Over the emerald water in bright escapes
And purple and blue as the ripening of grapes
The evening comes. As soft as a wing it flows
Over the trees, over the moss that drips
Like silent music from each gnarled limb,
And grasses heavy with dewfall shudder, dim
And lost in the dark till their quivering tips
Are pointed with starlight. Paler than death
Swamp lilies open their petals apart
Until the beating of their wild heart
Ripples the water lighter than a breath.
Night slumbers on, forgetting at its gates
The sunrise like a golden shadow waits.

Among famous authors whose similes were quoted in the same story by Mr. Winchell were: Conrad Aiken, the internationally known poet, whose book, "Collected Poems," won the Pulitzer prize; the late D. H. Lawrence, the famous English poet, author of "Lady Chatterly's Lover;" George Jean Nathan, the well-known author, editor and dramatic critic, who, with H. L. Mencken, was editor and founder of The American Mercury; Bugs Baer, the columnist and humorist; Heywood Broun, the famous author; Irving S. Cobb, the humorist; Fay King, the cartoonist; Percy Hammond, the critic; H. L. Mencken, Kathleen Norris, and many other nationally and internationally known writers.

Mr. Hicky, who is known to his close friends as "Jack," is coming to the front as one of the outstanding poets of this country. His poems are often published in the Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest, Harper's, Hollands and other leading publications. The February issue of McCall's has devoted almost an entire page to the beautiful poem by Mr. Hickey, entitled, "Snow Fall at Dusk," with attractive illustrations by A. K. Macdonald.

The only other poem in the issue is by the well-known Joseph Auslander, McCall's has recently accepted four poems by Mr. Hickey, the other three to be published in forthcoming issues.

Carolina Belle Is in Atlanta.

Spending the winter in Atlanta recuperating from a long illness is Miss Elizabeth Sims, one of Spartanburg, S. C.'s most popular and attractive belles of society. Miss Sims is under medical care here and she and her mother, Mrs. R. B. Sims, have taken an apartment on North avenue. Miss Sims, who was a student at Converse College when she became ill, was voted among the most beautiful students in the college, and she is an acknowledged belle in the college circles of North and South Carolina society.

During her illness Miss Sims has been unable to attend the college dances to which she has been invited this past fall, so a group of Converse friends have sent her a miniature football player from every school. The players are little dolls in football uniform made from stockings, and every school and university to which she had been invited to attend the dances was represented. There were dolls from Furman, Wofford, Clemson, University of South Carolina, University of North Carolina, Duke University, North Carolina State, Davidson and various other colleges. There were so many little gridiron heroes around that a use for them had to be found. At last an idea was hit upon. Each one was attached by his head to a shade pull, and now the shades may be raised or lowered with the aid of an All-Carolina football team.

Miss Sims and her mother will leave at an early date for points of interest in Florida, and after their trip they will return to their home in Spartanburg.

Katie Seabrook Writes First Book.

Another former Atlantan coming to the front in the literary field is Katie Seabrook, wife of the well-known writer, William Seabrook, whose first book, "Gao of the Ivory Coast," has been selected by the Junior Literary Guild of America for the spring list of books. The Junior Guild, which is a subsidiary of the Literary Guild of America, has selected the book for the children of 9, 10 and 11 years of age, and one of the editors in a personal letter to the Atlanta branch has praised Mrs. Seabrook's book very highly.

Mrs. Seabrook, who was before her marriage Miss Katie Edmondson, of Atlanta, is the daughter of John L. Edmondson, of Atlanta, an official in the Coca-Cola Company and one of Atlanta's most prominent citizens. She was born in Dalton, Ga.; was educated at Wesleyan College, in Macon, and spent the greater part of her young ladyhood in Atlanta.

The book, which is attracting nationwide attention in the world of children's literature, is published by Coward-McCann, and is attractively illustrated by E. Parin d'Aulaire. The story is based on the Seabrooks' recent trip to the famous Ivory Coast of Africa. It is Mrs. Seabrook's first book, although she has accompanied her husband on his many expeditions into far countries and has appeared in much of his writing. Gao will be published simultaneously with William Seabrook's new book, now running serially in the Ladies' Home Journal, and will undoubtedly receive unusual publicity in that connection.

Atlantans to Attend Mardi Gras Festivities.

January 27 will chronicle the departure of those intimate friends, Misses Ruth Miller and Martha Boynton, for New Orleans, to remain during the Mardi Gras festivities, when the social life reaches a crescendo pitch, and the days and evenings are filled with gay goings-on. Lovely Miss Miller's engagement was announced last Sunday by her mother, Mrs. Clara Belle Martin Miller, to Eben Hardie, who resides in the Creole City, and she and Miss Boynton will visit her fiance's mother and sister, Mrs. Eben Hardie and Miss Flora Hardie, at their hospitable home in New Orleans.

Naval Pair Ordered To the East Coast.

Atlantans will learn with interest that Lieutenant Rufus Gerard Thayer, United States navy, has been ordered to the east coast and with his wife, who was formerly Miss Anna Harriet Shewmake, of this city, will return to Annapolis, Md., where for one year this popular naval officer will pursue a post-graduate course. Since their marriage one year ago, Lieutenant and Mrs. Thayer have been stationed at San Pedro, Cal., where the former was attached to the U. S. S. Procyon and where he and his bride have been popular figures in the brilliant social life enjoyed by those in naval circles on the Pacific coast. Though Lieutenant Thayer's duties will prevent his visiting Atlanta very often while detailed at the naval academy, Atlantans eagerly anticipate the frequent visits of Mrs. Thayer to her father and sister, Claude Shewmake and Miss Elizabeth Shewmake.

Further good news of this popular pair tells us that perhaps two years of residence on the east coast will be granted, for following the year in Annapolis Uncle Sam will order Lieutenant Thayer to Columbia University in New York. Which, of course, means more of the charming Mrs. Thayer's presence in Atlanta, and perhaps that of her handsome and genial husband.

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris Elected President of Travelers' Aid Society

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris was elected president of Travelers' Aid Society at the meeting held Friday at the Chamber of Commerce, and the corps of officers elected to serve with her include: First vice president, Mrs. Ernest Brown; second vice president, Mrs. Allan Gray; third vice president, Mrs. W. P. Atkinson; recording secretary, Mrs. Ralph White; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George C. Kaulbach, and treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Mansfield.

Mrs. W. H. Harris, retiring officer, presided at the meeting and Horace Russell reviewed the welfare situation in Atlanta. He paid special tribute to Frank Miller and Alison Thornwell and said that the Chest was in better condition than ever before. He praised the Better Business Commission and said it was functioning splendidly, co-operating with the organized groups to relieve the unemployment emergency. He praised specially the Salvation Army, the Welfare Society and the Travelers' Aid Society, to whom most of the relief calls come, and he urged optimism in time of depression.

Particular emphasis was paid the work of the executive secretary, Mrs. A. B. Payne and the splendid workers at the various stations. Mrs. W. H. Harris, the retiring president, paid tribute to her past officers and chairmen.

David Woodward is chairman of the board of directors, which is composed of Mrs. W. H. Harris, E. K. Large, Clark Howell, Mrs. Henry Davis, Mrs. Max P. Greenfield, James Alexander, R. A. Magill, R. B. Pegram, Mrs. W. B. Willingham, W. L. Stanley, Judge Garland Watkins, C. A. Wickersham, Eugene Black, Frank Neely, Robert Alston, Mesdames J. W. Hurt, J. H. Zachry, Whitner Howard, Samuel Lumpkin and Joseph McMillin, Mrs. L. Altmayer and Ben Reid.

Mrs. West Honored.

Mrs. Ella West was honored Thursday at a farewell bridge party by her daughter, Mrs. Walter Adams, at her home on Sixth street. Mrs. West left Friday for her home in Martin, Ky., after spending several weeks with her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Adams. Invited to meet her were Mesdames F. H. Camp, H. G. Hudgins, Judson Bostwick, Pat Nelson, G. G. Frank, Guy Guest, W. H. Downs, Lane Dolvin, J. L. Hollingsworth, F. T. Hogue, Ella West, W. M. Debnam and A. H. Adams.

J.; James Ritter, Norfolk, Va., and Charles S. Smith, Jr., Montclair, New Jersey.

A reception for relatives and immediate friends will be held after the ceremony at the Hotel St. Regis. Miss Ames is a graduate of Centenary Collegiate, Hackettstown, N. J. Mr. Dennis, a native of Atlanta, Ga., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Dennis, Glen Ridge, N. J.

West End Civic Club Makes Plans

The garden division of the Civic Club of West End meets Tuesday afternoon, January 20, at 3 o'clock, at the clubhouse. Mrs. Walter R. Lamb, chairman, will preside. A bridge-luncheon will be given at the club Thursday, January 29, sponsored by the ways and means, telephone and Americanization committees, Mrs. E. O. Thornton, Mrs. Otis Witherspoon and Mrs. J. S. Boardman, chairmen, respectively. Reservations may be made through the above-named members.

The executive board met Wednesday, January 14, with Mrs. P. D. Johnson presiding. Mrs. L. A. Hollingsworth, president, requested the chairmen to have written reports ready for the meeting of January 28. Mrs. Carl Raper reported that the articles requested for patients in the Milledgeville sanitarium had been sent as Christmas gifts.

Art classes started Friday, January 16, with Miss Lillian Williamson as instructor. For information call Mrs. Bradley, art chairman, Raymond 1058.

Mrs. E. O. Thornton, ways and means chairman, carried Christmas basket and completely prepared dinner to an old lady. The committee had also sent coal to the same party. Mrs. Hinton Blackshear, welfare chairman, distributed four Christmas baskets and gave monetary aid where needed. A beautiful Christmas tree was arranged by the juniors for a group of children from the Stewart Avenue day nursery.

Musicale and Exhibit.

An event combining musical and artistic talent of high standard will be a program by the faculty members of the Brenau College Conservatory of Music, and a preview of a distinguished collection of paintings by Willford S. Conrow at the High Museum of Art this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Honoring Mr. Conrow, who will be here in person with his exhibition, a reception will follow the musical program, giving the members of the Atlanta Art Association and their friends the opportunity to meet this outstanding artist.

Among the canvases Mr. Conrow will exhibit here will be a portrait of the late Miss Mildred Rutherford, of Athens, Ga., who was for many years state historian general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The hostesses of this occasion will be Mrs. Samuel N. Evins, Mrs. F. M. Inman, Mrs. Alex King, Mrs. Harold Bush-Brown, Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, Mrs. F. K. Boland, Mrs. M. Gray Zalinski, Miss May Haverty, Mrs. Dudley Cowles, Mrs. William H. Kiser, Jr., Mrs. Hal Hentz, Mrs. Hugh Richardson and Mrs. Gordon Burnett.

East Point Club To Hear Dr. Milton

EAST POINT, Ga., Jan. 17.—East Point Woman's Club meets Friday, January 23, at 3 o'clock with Mrs. R. L. Bowen, chairman of education, having charge. Dr. Milton, of Oglethorpe University, who will be introduced by Professor R. L. Ramsey, will speak on the subject of "Study For Grown-ups." Mrs. Paul Gowder will have charge of the musical program and Miss Kathleen Turpley will render several vocal selections, and Charles Snow will play piano selections.

Better Films Group To Hear Address By Dean de Ovies

Dean Raimundo de Ovies, of St. Philip's cathedral and an orator of note, will speak before the Atlanta Better Films committee at the luncheon on the Ansley roof, Thursday, January 22, at 12:30 o'clock. Dean de Ovies will discuss "The Art in Movies." Mrs. Patrick Bray, president, will preside and Mesdames J. B. McDougal, E. B. Barron and Marion Swingley will act as hostesses. Flower decorations will be in charge of Mrs. Carl Wesley and the Tenth Street theater group. Among the especially invited guests will be Miss Regina Corrigan, president of the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Wilbur Colvin, secretary of that organization. A detailed report of the Christmas project to provide toys for the poor children in the city, which was sponsored by the Better Films Committee and the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce will be a feature of the program. At the executive board meeting held Thursday a unanimous expression of appreciation was extended Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein, Mrs. L. J. Elsas and Mrs. Frank McCormack, members of the juvenile cooperation groups of the Better Films body for their efforts and successful accomplishment in behalf of this project.

At 11 o'clock, preceding the luncheon Thursday, Mrs. Roy K. Smith will conduct another reviewers' class at the Ansley hotel. All members are requested to attend.

A matter of interest to Georgians is the announcement that Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, of the city board of film review, and Mrs. Piercy Chesney, president of the Macon Better Films committee, will be among the speakers at the conference of the National Committee of Better Films, which event takes place in New York this week. Mrs. Bray and members of the local body have received invitations to attend this conference at which all southern states will be represented.

"Stratford-on-the-Potomac" Is Subject Of State-Wide U. D. C. Contest

BY ADA RAMP WALDEN.
Editor, Augusta, Ga., Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Of the many phases of U. D. C. work none is more vital and more interesting to every member than the essay work. This year Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison, is chairman, and her committee has named 50,000 as the goal to be attained—which means that the pupils of Georgia schools will write that many essays on "Stratford-on-the-Potomac." In this contest the state is divided into five divisions, the chairmen being Mrs. Edgar Alexander, Atlanta, first division; Mrs. H. C. Walker, Eatonton, second; Mrs. W. I. Wilson, Augusta, third; Mrs. M. J. Stone, Columbus, third; Mrs. Thomas A. Coxon, Ludowici, fifth.

First prizes in high school are eight weeks' campship, girls or boys under 16 eligible. A. A. Jameson, of Atlanta, owner of Camp Dixie for boys at Wiley, and Camp Dixie for girls, at Clayton, generously donates these prizes, the two valued at $450. Mr. Jameson directs the boys' camp; Miss Elise Stokes, the girls'.

A gold medal is to be given the boy and girl who win the grammar school prize, confined to fifth, sixth and seventh grades. The committee urges every chapter in the state to offer an additional prize to the student who writes the best essay in the county in which the chapter is located.

It is fitting indeed that the subject, "Stratford-on-the-Potomac" has been selected; since ere long, this birthplace of the immortal Lee will be a shrine, to which the entire nation will make pilgrimage. As a specimen of 17th century architecture, its like is seldom seen in America.

Here was born Thomas Lee, Virginia's first native born governor; "Lighthorse Harry" Lee first saw the light at "Stratford," and resided there for 36 years; on its beautiful grounds adorned with beechnut and hickory trees that have stood for centuries, there took place a skirmish between the Minute Men of Old Westmoreland and the crew of a British Man o' War, during the revolution. The south's great chieftain, the Peerless Robert Edward Lee, was born there. Here he spent his childhood and it was for "Stratford" his heart often yearned in later days, and the spot which he longed to spend his closing years, though fate denied him this privilege.

Those attending the January meeting of the Sidney Lanier chapter, Macon, enjoyed more than one treat; for every phase was one of interest. Mrs. Walter D. Lamar was hostess, at her home on Georgia avenue; Miss Caroline Patterson presiding.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was Mrs. Lamar's talk on "Stratford," and no one is more thoroughly versed with the subject than Mrs. Lamar, who advised as a preliminary, that it was Sidney Lanier, "Sweet Singer of the South," who inspired the reclamation of Stratford, birthplace of the south's great leader, when he presented a resolution in 1870 (just after the death of General Lee) in Macon, at a gathering of Confederate veterans.

Mrs. Lamar, a most interesting and brilliant speaker, reviewed the history of the Lee family in America, from Richard Lee, in 1641, to Thomas Lee, who built Stratford, in 1729; the military services of the Lees were mentioned, particularly those of Lighthorse Harry, Washington's friend, and the father of the Peerless Robert E. Lee. "Stratford" was described in detail, and her auditors were transported to the land of yesteryear in hearing of the glamorous charms that envelope this fine old home. The chapter unanimously voted to indorse the purchase of this home by the U. D. C.

Marion County chapter, Buena Vista, voted at its last meeting to sell Georgia flags Georgia Day. Six cents per capita was voted the Maury Memorial fund. Miss Minnie Lowe presided over the meeting, which was held at the Lowe hotel.

Sarah Hornady chapter, Ellaville, observed its 26th birthday at its recent meeting, Mrs. H. J. Williams giving a history of the organization. Miss Mary Hornady, in the absence of the president, Mrs. R. E. Sullivan, presided. Tribute was paid the south's heroes, Lee, Jackson and Maury, by Mrs. M. C. Gettys and Mrs. C. C. Wall.

Miss Caroline Patterson, of Macon, the historian of the division, will be honored Tuesday afternoon at the Woman's Club, in Macon, when Mrs. Walter D. Lamar will be hostess at tea. The guests will be the members of the Sidney Lanier chapter, of which Miss Patterson is president, and the state officers.

Frank B. McDonald, Jr., prominent attorney of Waycross, will deliver the address on Lee's birthday, under the auspices of the Francis Bartow chapter. Following the exercises the Confederate veterans of Ware county will be entertained with luncheon.

At the last meeting of the Valdosta chapter Mrs. W. W. Lastinger was donor of two beautiful pictures which will adorn the walls of the chapter room in the Woman's building. "Robert E. Lee" was the subject for the afternoon, with Dr. A. G. Cleveland, the speaker. Mrs. H. W. Rhodes and Mrs. Lloyd Greer rendered several musical numbers.

Wayside chapter, Millen, devoted its study hour to "Stratford" at its last meeting, a program presented by Mrs. Carlton Attaway and Mrs. Jack Lewis. Boxes were reported as having been sent to the Soldiers' home, in Atlanta, and to each veteran of the county. Three packages were sent, too, to the sanitarium in Milledgeville. The membership committee was host for the afternoon.

Vienna chapter has just completed the decoration of the chapter room in the clubhouse, having added new shades and draperies and otherwise creating an attractive environment. A substantial sum was reported at the January meeting, as having been created for the school library. Lee, Jackson and Maury, whose birthdays take place in January, were discussed by Mrs. W. V. Harvard and Mrs. P. C. Everett; every member present contributing as her part of the program, the event in the life of General Lee with which she is most impressed.

Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy will be interested to learn that Mrs. L. M. Bashinsky, president general, will be the guest of honor at a reception Saturday, to be given by Mrs. James Henry Parker, in New York city, at the Hotel Astor. Mrs. Bashinsky will proceed to West Point Monday, the 19th, to attend the presentation of the sword given by Mrs. T. Darrington Semple through the U. D. C. to West Point in memory of General Robert E. Lee.

Roberta Harris chapter, Watkinsville, last week indorsed Mrs. T. W. Reed, of Athens, for first vice president of the Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Chapter A., U. D. C., Augusta, has selected Dr. Carl W. Minor, pastor of the Woodlawn Baptist church, for its orator at the Lee's birthday exercises. The chapter special efforts are being centered at present with the beautification of the Davis highway and the placing of tablets on the handsome Memorial bridge over the Savannah at Center street under process of construction. Mrs. W. I. Wilson, chairman tenth district, essay committee, urged the co-operation of the chapter in attaining the goal—50,000. Mrs. King Milligan is the local chairman of essays.

Fulton Chapter U.D.C. To Broadcast

Fulton chapter, U. D. C., will celebrate the birthday of General Robert E. Lee, Monday, January 19, in a new and novel manner, as friends of the veterans and daughters of the Confederacy are invited to listen in over Station WGST Monday evening to an all-southern program given by the chapter in his honor. Mrs. Charles Maddox, program chairman, has arranged an interesting program, the exact hour of which will be announced on the radio page of the daily papers.

This medium of broadcasting the program over the radio relative to Robert E. Lee was decided upon to bring some token of his memory before the great mass of southern people. The fact that such a broadcast must inevitably bring the mention of the southern cause and its leader before the whole country, as well as before one section was also a weighty factor in the decision. It is hoped by the organization that such a program may rekindle waning patriotism.

Mrs. L. M. Bashinsky Makes Announcement

Mrs. L. M. Bashinsky, of Troy, Ala., president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, announces a valuable prize of $250, offered by Miss Mary Lou Gordon White, of Nashville, Tenn., in memory of her brother, Dr. Gordon White, for the best story of literary merit founded on the life of the early colonists in Virginia, or one of the other southern states, to bring out in fictional form the contribution made by that section to the making of American history. The prize money is now in the U. D. C. treasury, and half of this amount is to be paid the writer when the judges have made their decision, the other half on the appearance of the story in a well-known magazine. All stories submitted remain the property of the authors.

Rules of the contest are as follows: Manuscripts must be submitted before June 15, 1931, to the historian-general, Miss Marion Salley, Orangeburg, S. C. The story must never have been published; the story must not exceed 6,000 words in length; all manuscripts must be typewritten; a contestant may submit only one story; the story must be submitted under pen name; real name, address and return postage enclosed in a sealed envelope, bearing on the outside the title of the story and the author's pen name.

The contest is open to writers from all sections of the United States and is not confined to members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Announcement of the prize winner will be made at the November, 1931, convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Polhill Issues Executive Board Letter

Mrs. Thomas G. Polhill, president LaGrange Chapter, U. D. C., issues the following invitation to executive board members of Georgia division, U. D. C., in which she said:

"My Dear Co-worker: The annual meeting of the executive board of the Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be held in LaGrange on January 22. The morning session will begin at 10 o'clock, central time, and will be followed by a luncheon at 1 o'clock at the Colonial hotel, given by the LaGrange Chapter, U. D. C. The afternoon session will be followed at 5 o'clock by a tea given by the LaGrange Chapter, D. A. R., and the LaGrange Woman's Club at the Woman's Club building. Those visitors who arrive the night before will find excellent accommodations at very reasonable rates at the Terrace and Colonial hotels.

"Mrs. J. J. Harris, state president, requests a full attendance of the officers, past president, committee chairmen and directors. LaGrange chapter cordially urges your presence. Please let us know if we may expect you."

Vassar Scholarship Available This Year.

Mrs. Thomas W. Reed, chairman, general committee on education, U. D. C., announces that the Mary B. Poppenheim scholarship at Vassar College, valued at $1,000 and offered through the United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be awarded this year for the collegiate year 1931-1932.

It is important that all Georgia applicants for this scholarship communicate with Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, Ga., chairman of the committee on education, Georgia division, who will furnish them with necessary information. All applications should be in the hands of Mrs. Anderson by February 15, if possible.

Dr. Raymond V. Harris, well-known Savannah physician, will be the guest speaker of the Council of Jewish Women in co-operation with the Fifth District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs Monday afternoon, January 19, at 3 o'clock, at the temple house, 1389 Peachtree road. Dr. Harris was past president of the Savannah chapter of Workers for the Blind, chairman of the organization for the state association and member of the legislative committee. Having lost his sight three years ago he is well able to discuss the rehabilitation of the blind in his topic, "Our Responsibility to Our Blind."

Mrs. Louis Elsas, chairman of work for the blind for the fifth district, has prepared an interesting exhibit of Braille work, which will be explained by J. J. Childs, teacher at Calhoun school. Mrs. A. B. Witcher will explain the use of the material and equipment used in the sight conservation classes and there will also be an exhibition of articles which the sightless are taught to make so that they can become economically independent. This aim is the most important feature of the entire work. Miss Hettie Higgenbotham, who studied piano and voice at Peabody conservatory in Baltimore, will sing a group of songs. Miss Higgenbotham taught in private schools for the blind for three years and at present gives private instruction in Atlanta. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Jack Salmon at the piano. Dr. Harris and the other distinguished guests will be honored at tea and those interested in the work for the blind are heartily welcome.

Daughters Of Founders And Patriots Meet

The meeting of the Georgia chapter, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, was held Friday at the home of Mrs. Charles F. Rice, on Peachtree road, and was graced by the presence of Mrs. J. M. High, beloved life president, who had been absent from several meetings on account of illness. This society is one of the outstanding patriotic societies, doing splendid philanthropic service in the community and assisting the national society in preserving valuable records.

Mrs. Rice also acted as chairman of the proceedings, and she gave a patriotic and inspiring new year salutation and after disposing of the necessary chapter business presented the following excellent program: Subject, Egypt: paper, "Egypt," written by Mrs. High, read by Mr. J. O. Wynn; paper, "Cleopatra," written by Mrs. High, read by Mrs. DeLos Hill; reading, "Egyptian Arts," Mrs. DeLos Hill; music, Miss Margaret Battle; reading, "America," Mrs. Clyde King. Mrs. Irving Thomas contributed to the program by giving some of personal impressions of Egypt. An elegant buffet luncheon climaxed this delightful occasion. The table in the dining roo was a lovely picture in its gleaming silver and crystal decorations and tall, white, unshaded tapers. Mrs. Rece was assisted by her daughter, Mis Mary Rice, and the following members of her committee: Mesdames DeLos Hill, J. O. Wynn, H. M. Milam, Walter Tomlinson, Miss Martha Tomlinson. Mrs. W. Brenner Dunn and Miss Tomlinson brought in the state and national flags.

Mrs. Fletcher Hostess.

An interesting event featuring the week-end social calendar was the buffet supper at which Mrs. Charlotte Meador Fletcher entertained last evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Meador, on Fourteenth street. The affair was a lovely complimentary gesture to Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Pope, who leave at an early date for Nashville, Tenn., where they will reside in the future.

RICH'S INC

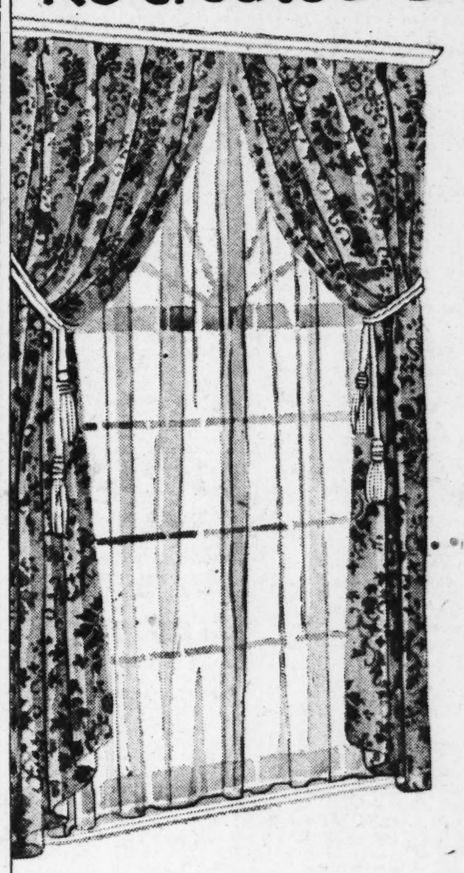

AN INDISPENSABLE preparation for lightening the skin is Anti-Brown Spot Ointment Before applying the ointment, cleanse and tone the skin according to directions I have given you in earlier lessons.

Next coat the skin with a protective layer of Orange Skin Food. Then, using the fingers, smooth the Anti-Brown Spot Ointment over the area to be bleached, keeping well away from the eyes and lips. Almost immediately you will feel a prickling sensation indicating the activity of the preparation. Leave the ointment on from three to five minutes, depending on the sensitiveness of the skin. Remove with liberal applications of Muscle Oil.

Another treatment which I have prepared for home use is my Venetian Masque, which brings up the blood to purify the skin and lighten it. It is an excellent year-round treatment for keeping the skin clear and fine-textured.

For an intensive bleaching treatment you should also use one of my special bleaching preparations nightly. Venetian Bleachine Cream is a mild preparation which should be smoothed well into the skin after it has been cleansed at night, and left on. A stronger preparation is Ardena Bleach Cream. Do not rub this into the skin, but smooth it lightly over spots and dark places.

"SEZ YOU" MAN SUED — Victor McLaglen, hard-boiled, lady-loving soldier of the screen. Leopold McLaglen, his brother, has filed suit against Victor, in Los Angeles for $90,000 damages. When he came to Hollywood he alleges Victor pictured him as a scapegoat and prevented his making good there. (AP)

TOO MUCH CHRISTMAS PUNCH?—This strangely terrifying bird seems to have stepped out of the Never-Never Land. It is actually not nearly so grotesque as it looks. For it is merely an ordinary pelican snapped at the crucial moment when it threw back its head to swallow a fish.

ALL THAT'S LEFT—Only the mast of the dredge Raritan is protruding above the surface of the water in New York harbor after the dredge was rammed and sunk by the City of Montgomery. Fifty-seven members of the crew of the sunken boat were saved by the mail boat President and a police launch.

JUSTICE TAKES FALL—One of the huge pillars which ornamented the Temple of Justice in Seattle crashes to the ground as an automobile truck, playing the role of Samson, pulls it down during wrecking work. (AP)

HE'S MAJOR JAMES J. TUNNEY NOW!—Gene Tunney, ex-heavyweight champ of the world, became Major James J. Tunney when he appeared in this handsome new uniform in his new capacity as aide to Governor Wilbur Cross, of Connecticut.

FAT
Is Going Fast

Why Not Yours?

No need to tell you fat is going fast. Think back ten years ago. Most folks above 40 were over-fat. Now slender figures are everywhere the vogue.

It is clear that some new factor is fighting obesity. Not starvation, not over-exercise, not harmful drugs. It is something which doctors everywhere employ. Science has found that a great cause of obesity lies in a weakened gland, and they are feeding that gland to correct the condition.

Ask your doctor. He will tell you how and why this great new factor acts.

Marmola prescription tablets are based on this new idea. A world-famous medical laboratory prepares them to fit the average case. They are for those who don't wish to pay a physician.

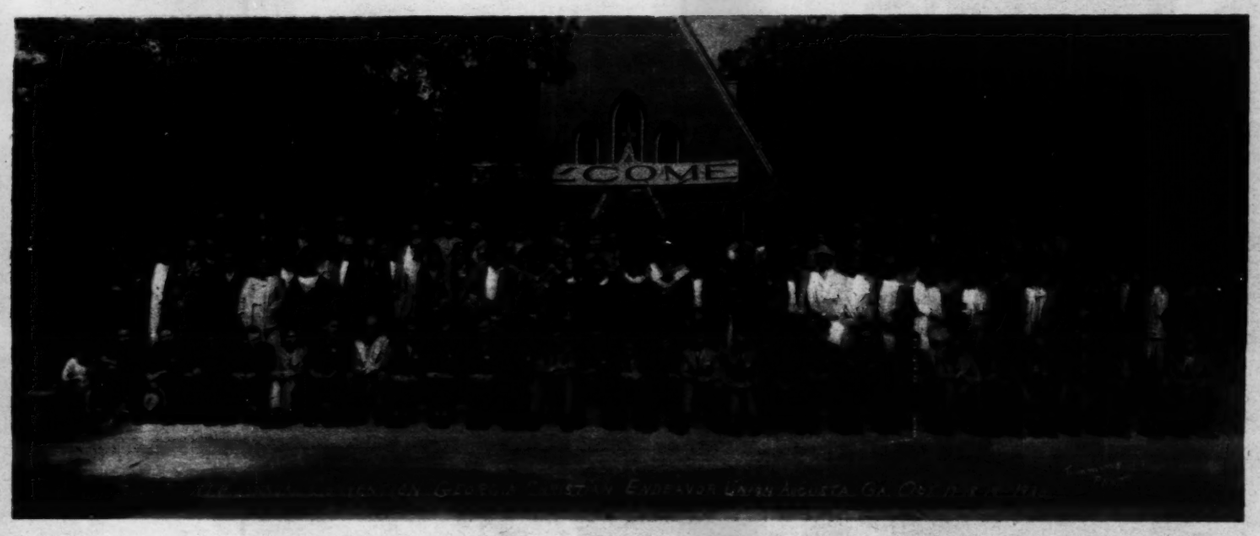

Marmola has been used for 24 years—millions of boxes of it. Users have told others and the fame has spread. Now it holds top place in a field once dominated by harmful treatments and by frauds. In every circle there are people who can tell you what they do.

Marmola is not secret. A book in each box tells the formula and explains results. Price $1.00. Go try it if you need it. It is the right way to fight fat.

Private Life of A ROLLING STONE...

FOR THOUSANDS OF YEARS THERE I LAY, FAR UP ON THE SIDE OF A GREAT MOUNTAIN- I THOUGHT I'D NEVER GET ANYWHERE-

BUT ONE WONDERFUL DAY THERE WAS AN AVALANCHE AND DOWN I RUSHED, WITH MILLIONS OF OTHER STONES, TO THE VALLEY BELOW-

I GUESS THAT WAS THE TURNING-POINT IN MY LIFE- AT LEAST I BEGAN TO TRAVEL FROM THAT DAY, FOR THAT VERY EVENING A TOURIST PICKED ME UP.

HE TOOK ME WAY ACROSS THE COUNTRY SHOWING ME TO ALL HIS FRIENDS-

THIS STONE HAS A HISTORY-

OH, YEAH?

THEN I WAS PUT ON THE MANTEL, GETTING A LOT MORE ATTENTION THAN THE VIEWS OF THE WORLD'S FAIR OR THE SHELLS FROM CONEY ISLAND-

SCAT!

THEN ONE NIGHT I WAS THROWN AT A CAT ON THE BACK GARDEN WALL- I'VE ALWAYS BEEN SORRY I MISSED THAT CAT.

BUT THINGS MOST ALWAYS WORK OUT FOR THE BEST- I BOUNCED AND ROLLED DOWN TO A LITTLE BROOK- IT'S NICE AND PEACEFUL HERE-

WELL, I'VE SEEN A LOT, ROLLING AROUND AS I HAVE- NOW I'M SATISFIED TO SETTLE DOWN WITH MY MEMORIES AND GATHER A LITTLE MOSS-

During the courtship days everything looks rosy and glamorous with romance. It's the years that follow marriage that test the character of man or wife —years of disillusionment and adjustments that take courage and faith.

Who Is the Perfect Wife?

By LEO RABBETT

WHEN is a wife perfect?

Dr. Edward Lyman Cornell, of Northwestern Medical school, gave the law school students of that institution his opinion the other day that such a one should be "able to run 100 yards in 13 seconds, never be jealous; she must be thrifty, should have a college degree, be blessed with tact, good taste and a gift for entertaining.

"She must have had a good business training," according to the worthy doctor, "be willing to have a family; she should be willing to permit her husband to attend meetings and conferences at any time; she should look well and be smart enough to maintain her good looks."

The young man looking for a bride should first employ her as a private secretary; the doctor especially emphasized this in his advice to the hopeful young legal lights.

When I asked Leonard H. Nason, noted Boston author, what he thought of that as a working idea, he laughed. "That's a large order," he said. "Where is the ambitious young man going to find a woman like that? Even Helen of Troy didn't combine

SECOND-ACT CURTAIN

By Ring Lardner

THEY were trying out a play in Newark. The play was to open in New York the following week. Washington had liked it pretty well and busines had been picking up in the big New Jersey metropolis until a full house at a rainy Wednesday matinee had just about convinced the author and the manager that they had something.

The three were standing in the lobby before the evening performance.

"We'd be all set," said Mr. Rose, the manager, "if we just had a curtain for the second act."

The authors, Mr. Chambers and Mr. Booth, walked away from him as fast as they could go. Neither of them wanted the blood, even of a manager, on his hands; and they had been told so often—by the manager, the company manager, various house managers, the entire office staff, every member of the cast and the citizens of New Jersey and the District of Columbia—that they lacked a second-act curtain (just as if it were news to them), that both had spent most of their prospective profits on scimitars, steletti, grenades and the sawed-off shotguns, and it was only a question of time before some of these trinkets would be brought into play.

After a while the good folks from the Oranges and Montclair began looming up in such numbers that Chambers and Booth thought Mr. Roses' mind might be on some other subject and they ventured back into the lobby.

"Boys," said Mr. Rose, "we've got a hit. If we only—"

Chambers grabbed Booth by the arm.

"Come here a minute," he commanded, and Booth obeyed.

"Now listen," said Chambers, "we're not going to find a second-act curtain by watching another performance of this clam-bake. Let's leave it flat for tonight and go to our respective homes and do a little real thinking."

Chambers' respective home was a mansion in the lower sixties. Booth's was a hotel room in which he had spent nearly all of the summer working because he found it impossible to work out on Long Island where everybody else was having a good time. The collaborates parted at the Thirty-third street terminal of the Hudson Tube and Booth went first to a speakeasy to buy himself some thinking powders and then to his room—the number doesn't make any difference because each is equipped with radio, and all you have to do to avoid it is not open the drawer of the table by the bed.

Booth's room was not an expensive room. It was a $4 room and opened on a court, and the people in the other rooms opening on the court were nice and friendly and hardly ever pulled down their window shades, no matter what they were doing. For three days the room right across the court from Booth's had been occupied by a comely and frank lady of about 26, so Booth took a powder before settling down to real thinking. The room across the court was dark. Booth got into his thinking costume, consisting of pajamas, slippers and bathrobe, had another powder and decided he had better eat something.

Enter the Heroine.

While waiting for the food, he began a letter to somebody at Syracuse University who didn't know him and wanted him to make a speech. He discovered that the I key on the typewriter had gone blooey from overwork, rendering him mute. The food came and he sat on the bed to eat it. There was a knock at the door and in scampered a chambermaid not a day over 50.

"Are you sick?" she said.

"No," said Booth. "Why?"

"Well," said the chambermaid, "there was a woman sick in this room a couple of weeks ago and I thought maybe she was still here."

"You're the only woman in this room," said Booth, "and I hope you're not too sick to leave."

"It's a funny thing," said the chambermaid, "but I came in a room along this hall one time, it must have been last spring, and there was a man and woman both in there, both sick. And they knew me because I worked in a hospital once and they were both there too."

"Marriage might regain something of its former sanctity," observed Booth, "if husbands and wives were always both sick together."

"I'll just turn down your bed."

"No. Let it alone, I'll fix it when I get ready."

"Well, I wouldn't sit around like that or you'll catch cold."

"Good night."

Booth finished eating and looked around the room for reading matter. There were three books—Heart Throbs, a collection, by Joe Mitchell Chapple, of Boston, of favorite bits of verse or prose of well-known Americans; Holy Bible, anonymous, but a palpable steal of Gideon's novel of the same name, and the Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu, by Sax Rohmer. Booth had seen them on the desk all summer, but had been too busy to read when the I key was working.

He took another powder and started in on the insidious Chink, but the author's quaint method of handling direct discourse ("Two small by inches!" he jerked; "The pigtail again!" rapped Weymouth; is "'Parson Dan?'" rapped Smith; "But," rapped Smith; "Got any theory?" he jerked) was a little too much for frayed nerves. "It is all right," he rapped to himself, "for a guest to bring a book like this with him, but there certainly ought to be a penalty for leaving it in the room."

Inspiration from the Muse.

Holy Bible began too slow and after another powder Booth dived into Heart Throbs, only to be confronted by the complete text of Home, Sweet Home. Now, out in the town where Booth's family was spending the summer the natives had pointed with pride to the house where Mr. Payne, who wrote this famous lyric, used to live. If the natives had ever read the whole thing, they probably would have burned the house instead of pointing to it.

Turning over a few pages, however, Booth came across a poem that soon had him fighting to keep back the tears. It told about a mother who often cried at the memory of the good times she used to have, before she was married and gave birth to a little one, but who felt all right again when the little one reminded her of her present blessings by climbing on her knee—

And she says and twists a curl;
"I am Mamma's baby dirl!"
And the while I bles my lot
Whispers; "Mamma had fordot!"
And another whose first stanza ran;
When you see a man in woe,
Walk right up and say, "Hello!"
Say, "Hello!" and "How d'ye do?
How's the world been using you?
Slap the fellow on his back.
Bring your hand down with a whack;
Waltz straight up and don't go slow,
Shake his hand and say, "Hullo!"

For a brief moment Booth considered dressing again, engaging a taxi, driving to Chambers' house, waltzing straight up to Chambers' room, bringing his hand down with a whack on Chambers' shoulder and saying, "Hullo, and how d'ye do, and how's your second-act curtain?" But he hadn't had enough powders.

While the waiter was removing the tray, he took another one and looked across at the opposite room. Strangely, the shade was down.

Booth lay on his bed, with glass and bottle beside him for half an hour. Inspiration came to him. The second act should end with a song. But he'd better call up Chambers and get his approval.

"It's Got to Be Funny."

"Why sure," said Chambers. "Only it's got to be damn funny."

"Have you had any ideas yourself?"

"Not yet. I've been reading. You realize, of course, that a line or a piece of business would be better than a song unless the song's damn funny."

"But I can't think of a line or a piece of business."

"Then go ahead with your song, and be sure it's damn funny."

Booth hung up and took a drink. In a room devoid of musical instruments he had to compose a song that would be a curtain, would make an audience laugh, would be damn funny.

He looked across the court and saw the light in the girl's room flash on and then off.

He pictured her as a buyer from St. Louis or Cincinnati. She worked hard all day while he attended rehearsals, or while he sat there in his own room and attempted to think up lines dumb audiences would laugh at, as substitutes fo rlines that they wouldn't. He wondered whether she was dumb.

In the evening she came back to her $4 cell, and perhaps changed her clothes and went to a picture, or sat in the grill or on the roof and dined alone and wished there were someone for her to dance with when the orchestra played Here Am I.

After her solitary dinner or the pictures, she probably went to bed and read the confessions of John Gilbert and Rudy Vallee until she fell asleep.

It was a shame, thought Booth, that the conventions and his arduous work kept him from calling her up and perhaps taking her to dinner or a show, or merely carrying on friendly conversations with her so she would not be quite so homesick.

Wasted Sympathy.

He fell asleep and was awakened by the telephone at half past two.

"Listen," said the voice of Mr. Rose, "we've got a show if we find a curtain for the second act. They liked everything but that tonight. You fellas have got to dig up a curtain by tomorrow."

"I think I've got an idea."

"Well, I hope it's good."

Booth began to hum different people's tunes to himself. Tunes lots of times suggest words; it's customary and much more satisfactory to get the tune first.

He looked across the court once more. The lights were on, only the thin shade was down, and he could see a man in shirt sleeves standing in the middle of the room.

"Well," thought Booth, "she's married and I've been wasting all my sympathy. A girl that's married may not be having a good time, but at least she is'nt alone."

For some reason, however, he felt resentful and the drink he took was three times as big as its predecessors. So, she was married—

Suddenly there flashed into his head one of the prettiest tunes he had ever heard. He grabbed a piece of music manuscript paper and wrote a lead sheet of half the refrain.

"It will be all the better," he thought, "if I can get some silly, incongruous words to such a pretty melody as this."

He set down what he considered an amusing line and was at work on a second when the telephone rang again.

"This is Rose, I was thinking maybe you'd better tell me something about your idea for a curtain."

"It's a song. I've got it half done."

"You might just as well quit working on it. We can't drop on a song. It's got to be a gag."

"But suppose the song is a gag—"

"No. I tell you we can't ring down on a song. We've got too many of them. This is no musical. Just forget that idea and work on another."

Booth tried to answer, but Mr. Rose had hung up.

"Whether we ring down on it or not," Booth said to the bottle, "we can use it somewhere."

But in the middle of the third line of the Prime Minister of Great Britain

WE NEVER feel the world's change so much as when we return to old paths and haunts. There we see how the shadow of Time has passed over the dial of life. I have wandered back to a scene of great exploits. The unruly crowd who went to Drainie school to be licked into shape by Bain's grammar, the tawse, and a much respected dominie are scattered to all the winds, but, whether dead or alive, in their dreams they must often return to those wild days when a tear or two dissolved the worst of cares and every sunrise brought a hilarious day.

And what were those days without the Nineteen Trees? No mariner returned with greater pride from voyaging into the unknown seas bearing a cargo of gold and silk and spices than we did when, mounting the first of the nineteen, we swung and jumped in mid-air like squirrels from tree to tree until we went the round of the nineteen for the first time. Then we were fit for any venture. We had accomplished the grand achievement, and had passed to a niche among the heroes.

I returned and found the place desolate. The trees, like ourselves, had grown old, and the axe had been laid to their roots. They have passed on to another life. Perhaps they bear the scanty supper of the laborer; perhaps they are behind the veneer of some shoddy creation of industry; perhaps they kept up the muddy sides of trenches in France and are moldering there with some of the youths who climbed them. The woods are gone, and the naked ground appeared to my eye to be tortured with shame. It seemed to have forgotten us all in its own misery.

Then there were the romantic wanderings by the shore, where every week brought its new fairlies thrown up from the sea. The changeable is constant in its changes. The sandbanks have been blown up by the winds and washed by the tides into new shapes, and the shingle has come farther west. But upon the beach are the familiar tins, spars, uprooted trees and all the scraps which are the playthings of the waves. And the black bituminous shales which we used to treasure for their fossils are still washed up from their beds far out in the Firth, though no one seems to gather them now. Here time has been merciful, and from whin to whin in the raised beaches behind chirp and fly the feathered children, 50 generations removed from their parents whose nests were robbed.

At the end of the shingled beach and close by the mighty river is a hamlet that itself, under its thatch and with its whitewashed walls, looks as if it had been thrown up by the sea. It was an old haunt. How had time dealt with it? Had it become the home of ghosts? Here on a beach sat in the sun a derelict who, when I saw him last, was in the prime of life. Now, "the oldest man he seemed that ever wore gray hairs." He leaned on a staff and sat as though he were waiting for something. We began a talk on the trivial things which are the avenues of approach to the intimate. We reached that in due time.

"There was a girl, Maggie——"

"Aye aye! a glaikit quean Maggie was."

"And her brither Jock?"

"Aye there wis her brither Jock?"

"She marrit Jamie?"

"Aye, Jamie wis a decent man." He had lifted up his head and his eyes were upon the faraway hills.

"What happened to them?"

"They're a 'thegither oot there" (pointing his stick to the churchyard on a brae slope), "up in the tap corner there. Ye'll see their gravestanes."

We drifted in our talk like boats on a tide. Then——

"Aye, I min' those loons. They were a mischievious lot. Ane o' them aince stealt a boat o' mine, and he might hae been dront. I gae him a guid thrashin' an' the nickum nearly broke my heid wi' a stane."

He paused and the faraway look came upon him again.

"An' whaur's that deevil o' a loon noon, think ye?"

"Hung," I suggested.

"Hung? Deil a bit, mon.—— Ech, mon! there's chainges. Ye're maybe fra the Sooth?"

I assented.

"Weel, ye ken o' him. He's flinging stanes as big as yon hill at the heides o' the damned Tories. I wid like tae see him again afore I dee. Bit he's forgotten a' boot the boatie an' that clout he gave me. He struck me jest there (rubbing the back of his head). O, I'm prood o' it. Aye! aye!

Who Is the Perfect Wife?

all those qualities. Anyway, a girl with those attributes is not going around looking for a job as a secretary. As to the good looks, I've often said that if I had to do it over again, I'd marry a homely woman."

Mrs. Nason laughed a little at this, as she sat sewing by the great window overlooking the esplanade and the Charles river. She is as charming and, I'm sure, as perfect a wife as a man could find; successful, too, with a most attractive home and three gracious and most lovely children: Jane, 9; Priscilla, 6, and Leonard, 3.

All her husband's success, too, is in her name—his war book, "Chevrons," the first and "best seller" of all American books on the great conflict—the fact that he makes upwards of $30,000 a year writing. "I have to be good," he smiled. "She spends it for me as fast as I get it."

"One thing Doctor Cornell forgot, philosophically speaking," smiled Nason, "the Perfect Wife should be an orphan, no relatives on either side. He has an idea there, however, in advising the boys to marry a secretary. He has a chance to study her, see if she has any brains, is neat, thoughtful, all that sort of thing, under trying conditions. He sees how she looks when she has been up the night before.

"Most fellows interested in a girl only see her when she has her best clothes on, and with her 'company manners.' She gets a chance to see the man at his worst, also, which is fairer for her. And that's why a lot of marriages are not very successful. They so seldom actually know each other before the fateful word is spoken. You've got to love someone an awful lot to stand them 24 hours a day, and realize you can never escape them as long as you live.

"In business, now," went on Nason, "there's not much illusion. A man hires a girl to fill a definite place. And if it would afford any consolation to the homely girls, I think they make better office help. I never yet saw a good-looking stenographer who was especially efficient. An office is a good place in which to find out how good a girl is.

"I was with a company once, and the girl who ran that office excellently, signed all the boss' mail, certainly didn't get the job or hold it through 'sex appeal.' Perhaps, too, the boss' wife had something to say about that.

"I know another man whose secretary, that really looks after him, tells him when to get a haircut—he always asks her what suit to wear; the chances are he would have married her—if he hadn't been married before. And they would undoubtedly have been happy together.

How About Protection?

"Of course," considered Leonard Nason, "this is a rather complicated question. You might say that a woman with the perfect qualifications of a perfect secretary would not make a good wife. There's the famous male instinct of protection which enters into the case.

"To love and cherish, as the man sees it, implies the consciousness of his manly strength used to protect and watch over the delicate being which he has chosen from out 'the weaker sex.'

"He doesn't want her to be absolutely dumb, of course, but still dumb enough so that he'll feel that he has something to do. If she's as good a business man as he is, or even better—it happens sometimes—then the chances are that he'll soon fall in with some young, very frail, clingingly-feminine young 'squab,' who'll look up at him with adoring eyes, as though she were going to faint, but who doesn't know enough to come in when it rains.

"He'll probably fall, and it will probably be his finish."

And About Thrift.

"How about the thrift?" I said. "That sounds reasonable."

"I'm not so sure I agree with him there," replied Nason. "No, I don't agree with him. Men are too easily satisfied; they need some urge to get ahead. There's nothing like a wife and family to inspire a writer, especially a good-looking wife who wears clothes well.

"I was invited to go down to New York and speak recently. You would think that was a fine idea; I get all my expenses paid, and have an opportunity to do a lot of necessary business in that city. Fine and economical. Then your wife gets enthusiastic at the idea of New York, comes along and brings the children. And while you are working, she is running loose around the stores having a great time buying things.

"You are inspired not only to get ahead but to keep ahead. Several times I have been in positions where I would have been perfectly content to rest there the remainder of my life. But I had to get out and scratch for higher things because the family budget was going up.

"On the whole, it is a healthy condition, keeps you alive and developing all the time. While too much thrift might very well lead to an ingrowing disposition and stagnation."

"There's an old proverb," said I, "which runs, 'These things are better ordered in France.' Would you say it applied to this problem of success in marriage? From your experience in that country?"

"You see," said Leonard Nason, "the European idea is totally different from ours. In general, the French marry for social and business reasons, in many cases for every other reason except love. Then, having thus arranged to have a family and have someone to care for them, he usually hires a good-looking 'secretary' for a companion, one he really loves."

"Do you think there are any advantages in the French system?" I asked.

"Yes, there are," he replied. "It cuts out a lot of monkey business, such as we so often see in this country. Here, at first blush, and often without any possible reason or excuse, a young man and a young woman will run off and get married.

"In France it's different; both parties have to have birth certificates from the towns they were born in.

"The marriage intentions have to be posted at the mairie; all church marriages require the reading of the banns, for two or three weeks; you have to be at least 21 years old, also, in order to marry without parents' consent.

"Here, the youngsters often just go crazy, and when they wake up to find out it is only a trick of nature, it's too late; when the fever, cleverly contrived by Mother Nature, burns itself out they find they are not at all suited to each other; not even in the social sense, as is definitely previsioned in France, do they find themselves a proper couple.

"Of course," smiled Nason, "there is something in this idea of marrying your secretary. If a man should marry a woman just following his basic instinct of protector, he might get a perfect dumbbell, and not know it till the first bloom was brushed from the peach.

"If he married his secretary, a girl with more brains, he would respect her, and their marriage would be more enduring, more likely to lead to happiness.

"That loss of respect of husband for wife or wife for husband," continued Nason, "is, I think, one of the commonest causes for the breaking-up of homes. To discover that the rosy-haloed person, almost a mythical princess, or prince, under the light of the Honey-Moon, is only a human being after all.

"That first crash of coming back to earth out of the pink clouds is the hardest, noticing that the ethereal being snores, perhaps, or chews gum in no particularly esthetic manner, this very real and very material crisis may very well, and often does, mark the parting of the ways.

"If neither partner has any fine qualities to carry them on together, make good pals of them, then they just carry on for a while, both feeling they have been cheated.

Wife Has Most Difficulty.

"Of course," 'The Old Top Kick' laughed, "we have been considering this all from the man's point of view. A wife really has a much harder time to live with her husband, to tell the truth.

"A woman never brings home a bunch of drunks in the middle of the night, expecting the man to act as the perfect host. What would a man say if a woman brought back to the house with her a crowd of women from all ranks and stratas of society, as I have; good fellows, you know, but we'd sing and talk all night. A woman has to take all that and be sweet and understanding all the time.

"I once told a man in Philadelphia that I did not think I was really any happier than when I was earning $30 a week. And he replied, 'Well, would you be willing to swap your present circumstances for the old job of sergeantship?' Naturally it was clear I was really happier now, even though life was more complicated.

"When a man marries, he just thinks he is going to have the girl with him always, with a good hot meal on the table every time he gets home. And then the clothes bills begin to come in, and he has to put out all the money to take care of the children. But of course, that's life."

"As the Greeks put it," I suggested, "the male alone is not Man; Man is with man, the woman and the child."

"Yes, they were right," Nason agreed. "It's a mutual game, and each must make mutual concessions. The man usually starts out declaring he is going to rule the roost, but finally knuckles under; in other words, he defers to the instinctive and often superior wisdom of his wife, providing, of course, he has a good one.

"Why worry," smiled Leonard Nason, "and why try to give people advice about love and marriage? One thing you can be absolutely sure of, no one will take it anyway."

there's chainges, but there'll be nae chainge for me till they carry me up yonder."

* * * *

The shops have changed their names and their faces. A farm where I had many a "piece" of thick floury scones had fitted itself out like a lady in a new hat and a stranger had come to it. A mile or so beyond was the little Arcady, where the old blacksmith of Lochill had retired with Eppie to await the Cooming. The house was a but and a ben with a "best bedroom" added and smelt of rose leaves and thyme. How well do I remember the big beds, the white counterpanes, of the white sun and the delicious scent of the place. Its roof was a thick thatch, and on the first night I could not sleep there for the sough of the fir trees that grew close round it. The fence round the garden was green and gray with lichen, a burn ran close by and part of its waters turned John Munro's mill wheel. The work of the miller, I used to think, was to stand at the door, covered with meal, and look cheery.

I found most of the wood cut, the dam on the barn was there, but not the rickety thing I knew. They had modernized it and the modern thing was in decay. The wheel of the mill was rotting. The mill itself was but four empty walls falling into ruin and surrounded by rubbish, but most woeful of all, the plough had gone over Eppie's garden, the path up to where her beloved pigs were kept is blotted out and not a trace of her home remains.

"When did they knock down the hoose?" I asked a damsel I met. She looked upon me in terror.

"There never was a hoose there," she replied, and went off scared as though she had met a madman. I went over the fence into a clover field, where Arcadia once was. Bees hummed, a cutting machine rattled in a near field, but the place of my dreams is like a city buried deep under the years. The very names of Eppie and Sandy have gone from the memories of men. Thus the generations flicker in the darkness and go out.

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

"SARAH Jane is right worried about her boy's future. He ain't done nothin' since he graduated except eat an' sleep an' read the sport pages, an' it looks like educatin' him was like teachin' a hound dog to hunt bear. There ain't no bear to hunt, an' it just spoils him for huntin' rabbits.

"Boys don't learn trades like they used to, an' I don't know as I blame 'em. If they learn to lay brick or solder tinware or somethin' like that, about the time they marry an' get a house full o' younguns somebody invents a machine to do the work faster an' they can't do nothin' but set an' whittle while their wives wait on boarders.

"A few years ago a man that couldn't make a livin' no other way could go to writin' insurance or open up another fillin' station, but agents is so thick now they can't make a livin' without writin' policies on one another an' all the corners is took.

"Boys like Sarah Jane's is too educated for plain work an' the banks don't seem to need no more vice presidents, so I don't know what's to become of 'em.

"They seem to be learnin' right profitable professions in other districts, but here in our town there ain't much demand for foreign liquor an' nobody's got money enough to be worth kidnappin'.

"I reckon they could go back to plowin', but it looks like an awful waste to spend four years in college just to learn how to stay poor."

lyric a terrible hunch came to him. He had heard the tune before. Where? Why, back at home in the Episcopal church choir. Only there it had been in nine-eight or something, and now it was four-four. "The strife if o'er, the battle done."

"I won't give up till I'm sure," he said to himself.

There was one composer in town who, chances were, would be up at this time of night, five or ten minutes past three. It was quite a job to grab hold of the telephone, but Booth finally managed it.

"Well, whistle it or hum it, but do it quick because I'm working," said Mr. Youmans.

Booth whistled the refrain, though whistling was difficult.

"I like it very much," said Mr. Youmans.

"But isn't it a hymn? I seem to have heard it in church."

"It's a hymn all right," said Mr. Youmans, "but I don't think you heard it in church. I'm sure I never did."

"No, I can imagine that."

"But I can tell you where you did hear it."

"Where?"

"Do you remember the morning you came to my Great Day rehearsal? That's where you heard it. It's the negroe's hymn that opens the second act."

Booth tore up his sheet of music paper and looked across the court. Clearly visible was the silhouette of the gentleman putting on his coat and hat.

Booth lunged for the telephone again.

"I'll call her up," he thought. "I'll tell her I'm sorry her husband has to go to work so early."

The operator answered in a voice as thick and sleepy as his own.

"Listen," he said, "what's the number of the room right across the court from me?"

"I don't know and if I did I wouldn't tell you."

"But I've got something important to say."

"You sound like it. Anyway, you tell it to me and I'll deliver the message."

"All right," said Booth. "You tell her I've been in my room alone all evening, trying to think up a second-act curtain. And I can't think of one."

At seven in the morning he was aroused by strange noises that issued forth from the telephone receiver, which was off the hook, and the cord of which was looped around his neck.

Detected!

"Will you please hang up your receiver?" said the operator.

"I will if you'll send me the house detective."

"All right."

A house detective appeared before Booth had a chance to get back to sleep.

"Officer," said the latter, "there was somebody in this room last night,"

"It looks it."

"When I came in, I brought a full bottle of pretty good stuff. I had my dinner, I worked a little and read a little, and then I went to sleep. Ten minutes ago I woke up to find the bottle empty and the telephone cord twisted around my neck as if someone had tried to strangle me."

"Go back to sleep," said the detective, "and give me time to run down clues. I think we will find that both crimes—the emptying of the bottle and the displacement of the telephone receiver—were the work of one man."

THE LUCKY MAN

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

By Elisabeth Sanxay Holding

Old Aunt Eliza, Embittered by Her Wealth Found That Giving it Away Involved A Problem in Hearts Which Needed No Gold for Its Solution.

"I said I was sorry—" he began. "Go away!" she repeated, pointing to the door. "And don't you come back here, George Cowan, until you've learned how to behave yourself!"

COWAN turned the corner into the familiar street and saw before him the old brownstone house, in no way different from its neighbors, yet, to him, with a life of its own. He mounted the steps with his usual reluctance; since childhood he had felt abashed when he rang this bell, knowing that the sound broke into an austere old drowsiness.

The windows were all closed this cool October day, so that not a curtain stirred; the fresh wind blew over it, the sun shone down on it, there were people passing along the quiet street, but all this warmth and movement were shut out. He sighed and waited patiently, unwilling to ring again.

Presently the door was opened by old Ellen.

"Good afternoon, Mr. George," she said, without interest. "Step in and I'll tell Mrs. Waring you're here."

Nobody here was glad to see him. It was nearly a year since he had crossed this threshold, and nobody had missed him. Once again he entered the drawing room, feeling singularly out of place in that frosty elegance; he was an impertinence there, with his warm blood and his strong beating heart and his young vigor.

The last year had been spent in places which seemed incredible in this room; he had gone as ship's doctor on a cargo boat; he had seen the tropic islands that had haunted his boyhood dreams; he had known gales, breathless heat, rain like the deluge; he had seen accidents, sudden fevers; he was browned by sun and wind and salt spray; he had changed so much, learned so and his affairs were of no importance whatever. He was nothing but Mrs. Waring's great-nephew, come to pay his respects.

She was making him wait long enough. But that was natural; she was no more anxious to see him than he was to come. It was a simple matter of duty. Years ago his parents had inculcated that idea, had told him he must not "neglect poor old Aunt Eliza." So here he was, and he had to wait.

The stillness of the house disconcerted him today. It seemed unnatural. Even the clock on the mantelpiece had stopped; it was as if everything were waiting. . . He grew restless and walked about the room, a stalwart, serious young man with an engaging, boyish face. He picked up a little vase, and hastily put it down again, as if he were still a boy and must not meddle—then, with no prelude, he heard a voice, a girl's voice, young and vehement and unsteady.

"All right! If you won't—!"

An indistinguishable murmur replied.

"All right!" said the young voice again. "But I think you're very unkind — and unfair."

He was extraordinarily moved by that unhappy voice. Going to the doorway, he looked out into the dim hall and he saw her coming down the stairs, a slender girl, very straight and proud, in a dark hat turned up on one side, like a youthful admiral, and a dark suit, with a pale, angry face—the loveliest face. . .

She saw him and paused; her gray eyes, brimming with tears, met his steadily. Then she came on down the stairs and passed him on the way to the front door. He leaped forward to open the door for her. "I—— he began, and could not find another word.

She glanced at him sidelong, and suddenly she smiled, a wide, friendly, adorable smile.

"Thanks!" she said, and ran down the steps.

He watched her until she turned the corner, then he closed the door and returned to the drawing room in a daze. It seemed impossible that she should be gone before they had even talked to each other; he felt desolate, as if he had suffered an irrevocable loss.

"Why didn't I speak to her?" he asked himself. "Why did I let her go like that? She was——"

Now he heard a paper-like rustle, and he sat down again in a sort of panic. It was the old lady who had driven away that girl in tears.

"Good day, George!" she said.

"Good day, Aunt Eliza!" he said, rising again. "I hope you're quite well."

"Well enough!" she answered. "Sit down!"

She took a chair near the door, as if she felt safer there. Distrust, that was the keynote of her nature, an unhappy distrust that seemed to chill the air about her. Beneath her fringe of gray hair her pale eyes watched him, suspiciously; she did not like him, he felt sure of that.

As for him, it had never before occurred to him either to like or not to like her. She had been, to him, simply a venerable family idol, not human. Only today, seeing her as a human being who had made that girl cry, he felt hostile.

"The weather's turning cool," he remarked.

"Yes," said she. "And that means buying coal."

"A house like this must take a lot of heating," he said, still polite.

She gave a short little laugh which disconcerted him.

"A big house . . ." she said. "And people think I'm made of money."

He reddened a little. He had certainly never asked for anything from her.

"I'm sure——" he began.

"You're all of you 'sure'," she interrupted. "Well, you needn't be! I'm not made of money! No! That Caroline . . . No decency . . . Coming here and begging me . . No decency!" She paused, and he noticed that her hands, clasped in her lap, were trembling "That Caroline! She came here today, begging and crying, and telling me all her troubles——"

Cowan sat very still, looking down at the carpet. That had been Caroline then, crying, and sent away empty-handed.

"Is she—a relative?" he asked.

Again the old lady gave that short little laugh.

"I never see any one but relatives," she said. "Especially the poor ones. Yes, she's your second cousin William's daughter. She ran off and married a worthless man. He died and left her without a penny, and now she wants me to help her out of her troubles. Every fool and knave in the family comes to me—always to me! And my money's to set everything right. I'm sick and tired of it!"

Cowan felt a profound shock of disappointment. A widow. He didn't want that girl to be a widow. Then he recalled her face, her steady gray eyes, filled with tears, and he was ashamed of himself.

"Married a worthless man," he thought. "And she's not much more than a kid even now. It's a damned shame!"

He took pains to avoid looking at the ancestral idol. He had heard years ago that she was ungenerous and unkind, but it had made no impression upon him, because he had never wanted anything from her. But now, when he thought of Caroline. . . .

"Sick and tired of it!" repeated the old lady. "I told her—I said, 'Caroline Morris, you'll never have a penny from me!' Never! She was nearest of kin. If she'd behaved herself, she'd have had it all. But after today——. Wanted money to start some sort of shop. A fine shop she'd make of it! No! Everything's to go to you, George."

"To me?" he cried.

"Every penny! You'll be a rich man, George."

It was plain enough, though, that what pleased her was not the thought of his being rich, but of Caroline being poor. She was old and frail, but she had the power to exalt or to cast down, and that power was dear as life to her.

"To me?" he repeated. "But I never expected——"

"I don't know what you expected," said she. "Anyhow, you're the only one who never came asking for anything. The only one!"

"But I don't want—everything," he said. "I mean—if you'd divide it——"

She rose, and he saw that she was trembling from head to foot. What she had offered him was all she had, it was her dignity, her value in the world, that money of hers. And he "didn't want it."

"You're a young fool!" she said. "You don't know what you're talking about."

It occurred to him that perhaps she was right, that he was committing an enormous folly, without considering, without realizing what he was doing. But he could not, to save his life, care very much.

"I'm sorry," he said, stiffly. "I don't mean to seem ungrateful——"

"Go away!" said the old lady in a rage. His own temper was rising.

"I said I was sorry——" he began.

"Go away!" she repeated, pointing to the door. "And don't you come back here, George Cowan, until you've learned how to behave yourself!"

"Just as you please!" he said, curtly. "Good-by!"

As he went into the hall he found old Ellen there. He passed her with a nod, but, to his surprise, she came out with him, closing the door behind them.

"A nice state of affairs!" she said. "As if poor Mrs. Waring didn't have troubles enough without you coming and acting like this!"

"And what the devil did I do, anyhow?" he demanded, angrily. "To be ordered out of the house——"

But looking at the old creature before him, his anger vanished. The fresh wind was stirring her white hair; she looked so small, so forlorn.

"Well——" he began, good humoredly.

"Mr. George!" she said, solemnly, "I'll tell you what it is. She's getting lonely!"

"I don't wonder!" said Cowan.

"She never used to feel it," the old servant went on. "But now——. She had this little plan. She wanted to go to Atlantic City, for the change, and she was going to take Mrs. Morris with her. And then Mrs. Morris—disappointed her."

"You mean she refused to go?"

"Not she!" said old Ellen. "She never got the chance! As soon as she began asking for money Mrs. Waring sent her away. 'That's all they come here for, Ellen,' she said to me. 'There isn't one of them ever comes just to talk to me—like a human being.' "

He was astonished to see tears glittering in the dim old eyes.

"Crying—over Aunt Eliza!" he thought.

"She needs somebody now," the old woman went on. "What she wants is human kindness. Just remember that, Mr. George!"

"All right! I will!" he assured her, politely, and ran down the steps.

But it was difficult to think of the old lady as a human being, difficult to think of her at all. Her money was something he had never seen, never desired; he had always imagined dozens of other unknown relatives who would get it. He had made his plans with no more reference to the old lady's money than to the chance of finding buried treasure. Now that he was back from that voyage he meant to begin work in earnest. He had already signed a lease for a little office in an uptown street, he had already bought his sign—George Cowan, M. D.—and he expected a superb future. He didn't need her money.

The thought of her caused in him a queer feeling of guilt, as if in some way he had failed her.

"Why didn't I speak to her?" he asked himself again. "I saw something was wrong—she'd been crying. It would have been only common decency to ask if I could do anything."

He went uptown to look at that office, which was being painted and decorated to suit him. He was in the habit of stopping in there every day since he had got back, to see how things were getting on, and on all previous occasions he had been charmed with the place. But when he got there this afternoon the sun was gone, the sky was overcast, the place seemed to him paltry. He felt strangely depressed.

"Just another doctor, that's all," he thought, standing in the square little box that was going to be his waiting room. In the street outside people were passing continually, and never one face familiar to him. His parents had died long ago, he had no one now. Friends, of course, but no one to whom he was necessary, vitally important.

He thought again of that Caroline, with her pale, angry face and her gray eyes.

"I've never met a girl like that," he thought.

All the other girls he had met in his life seemed to him now like phantoms; only her face was vivid, unforgettable. And he had let her go, in all her trouble; she had looked at him straight in the face, as if she had expected something of him.

He left the little office and began to walk at random, still haunted by that sense of guilt, of urgent words unspoken. And quite suddenly an idea came to him, a plan. He remembered what old Ellen had said. And it seemed to him that if Caroline were to go back to the old lady now and approach her in the right way, she might win back her lost advantage.

He went into a drug store and consulted a telephone directory. And he found her name, lovely name—Caroline Morris. But it was hard to go on, harder than he had imagined; a queer, absurd shyness took possession of him; his hand shook as he took down the receiver in the booth.

"But if I can help her," he thought.

He heard a voice, delicate and remote.

"Yes?"

"This is George Cowan," he said.

"O! George Cowan," the voice repeated. "How nice!"

"Is—this Mrs. Morris?"

"Caroline!" she corrected. "We're cousins of some sort, you know."

Her gay friendliness enchanted him.

"I know!" he said. "And I'd like to give you—some advice. Please don't think I'm meddlesome. Only—if I were you, I'd go back to see Aunt Eliza at once. I have a good reason . . . If you'll see her. . . . It's rather hard to express what I mean. . . . But if you'll be—well, very friendly to her—don't mention anything that—that's likely to upset her. You understand?"

"Yes, but I don't see——"

"I think," he said, "I'm pretty sure, that this is the psychological moment for—a little tact. She's lonely——"

"But, George, she told me today that you were the one——"

"Well, she's angry at me now. And if you go—strike while the iron is hot—I think you'll be able——"

"But why are you doing this?" she cried.

"Because," he said, "you see, it doesn't really matter to me. And I'd like you—to get—anything there is."

"You mean you're giving up your chance to me?" she said. "O, I never, never in my life heard of anything so kind and dear. I—think I'm crying, George!"

He could not speak for a moment.

"You'll go, won't you?" he asked, a little unsteadily.

"I'd like to go, just to tell her about you!"

"O, no!" he protested, anxiously. "That would spoil the whole thing. No! Just go as if you wanted to, and—well, you'll know what to say. After all, she's old. Lonely. You'll know."

There was a pause.

"I want to see you, George," she said. "I can't very well ask you here——"

"Will you have dinner with me?" he asked. "After you've seen her? I know a little place——"

"I'd love to!" she said. "Where shall I meet you?"

He considered a few moments.

"Suppose I meet you outside her house?" he said. "At six. It's half past four now. If you get there at five, that'll give you an hour——"

"But suppose I don't get there at five? Or suppose she wants me to stay longer? You'd have to wait——"

"I don't care how long I wait," he said.

He hung up the receiver and left the booth, in a daze.

"She knew!" he thought. "When we met, just for that moment, she knew—like I did—that we'd meet again. Her voice—the way she called me George. As if we'd always known each other."

He had in his notebook the address of a restaurant he had found on 8th avenue. He had gone in there once, by chance, and he had taken a fancy to the place, so cozy, with fresh curtains at the windows and paper flowers on the tables and an air of modest cheerfulness. He had had an excellent meal there and the proprietress had even understood his painstaking French. So he had written down the name, under the address of another restaurant he had discovered in Marseilles.

"I'll take her there," he thought.

They would sit at a table there together, and he would look into her eyes.

"I love that girl," he cried to himself. "I loved her the moment I saw her!"

Like a man in a dream, he went back to his boarding house, to get ready for that dinner.

"She likes me, anyhow," he thought. "She was so friendly. She—well isn't it possible that she—feels like I do? Things like that happen. I've read about it. Two people meet. . . . I mean—well, it's destiny——"

Then, when he began to have, a new idea came to him. If she were to be reinstated as Aunt Eliza's heiress, how could he ask her to marry him?

He was appalled.

"I've been a fool!" he thought. "If I'd got the money I could have given it to her. Now what have I got to offer her? Only a bare living. I couldn't ask an heiress to marry me."

For a moment he was in misery. Then he recalled her voice, the things she had said, and happiness came back to him.

"There's no reason to think that I won't be successful in my profession," he thought. "I know I will be! Aunt Eliza may live another ten years, and by that time I mean to amount to something. Caroline hasn't anything now. I could offer her a home, at least."

He put on his best dark blue serge suit, and a new necktie, and lighting his pipe sat down to wait until it was time to go.

"I have enough money to carry on for a year—even two—if I don't get any patients at all—and that's unthinkable," he reflected. "We could take a flat in the same building as my office——"

He rebuked himself for taking so much for granted, again he called himself a fool, but in vain. A warm, beautiful happiness enveloped him; he could not seroiusly entertain any doubt.

"But what luck!" he said to himself in wonder. "What marvelous luck, that I should just have happened to go there today, and meet her!"

He did not really believe it was luck at all. It was destiny.

At half past five he put on his overcoat and hat and went out. A faint, chill drizzle of rain was falling. Very well! The little restaurant would be all the cozier. He was going to get a taxi for Caroline, but for himself, he liked this weather. He took the subway, got out at the proper station, and walked, in a hurry, toward the familiar street. He was well ahead of time, but who could tell what had happened? Perhaps the whole plan had failed. Perhaps Aunt Eliza had refused to see Caroline——

"Why didn't I think of that?" he asked himself, dismayed. "She couldn't wait for me, in the street—in the rain."

He began to feel sure that this had happened, and that Caroline had had to go home. He had known all the time that that dinner together was too good to be true. They would not meet tonight; perhaps he would never see her again. A girl like that there were sure to be other men in love with her. She had seen him once, only for a moment; she would forget him——

Then he saw her, not leaving the house, but coming toward it. She was crossing the street, carrying an umbrella in a very silly sort of way, behind her shoulders, so that the rain ran off it on her shoulders. The street lamp shone on her face, her pale young face with those gray eyes he would never forget. She was really coming, with her free and limber step, indifferent to the rain and the mud, such a valiant little adventurer.

He hurried forward to meet her, and she recognized him with a startled smile.

"I was so afraid you wouldn't come!" he said.

"What!" she said, with a sort of severity. "Why should you think I was coming at all?"

"Why, because you said you'd meet me!" he anwsered, surprised.

"I said I'd meet you?" she cried. "I've never spoken to you in my life!"

He was thunderstruck. He stood staring at her, his face grown quiet white.

"I'm sorry," said she. "I didn't mean to be rude to you. There must be some mistake."

"But aren't you—Caroline?" he asked.

"No," she said, "my name's Nora. Nora James. What made you think——?"

"O, Lord!" said Cowan.

"Do tell me what's the matter!" she entreated.

"I suppose you don't even remember me——" he said.

"O, yes, I do!" she assured him. And he was amazed, delighted, to see the color rise in her cheeks.

"You do?" he said. "Are you—a relative?"

She shook her head.

"I was just Mrs. Waring's companion," she said. "But today——" she paused. "I got the gate," she said.

Nothing could have pleased him

"Am I My Brother's Keeper?" This Question Is Being Answered by the Attitude of Big Business Toward Its Employees

"Jobs Can Be Assured!"

This Is the Cheering Message to America From Gerard Swope, President of General Electric Company, at This Time of Unemployment and Depression. How He Is Working to Attain This Goal in His Own Great Organization Is Told in This Timely Article

By Albert Eward Wiggam

Author of "The Mark of an Educated Man," "The New Decalogue of Science," "The Fruit of the Family Tree," Etc.

LESS than two weeks ago a group of economists, sociologists and public officials gathered in Cleveland in connection with the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. They had come together to discuss unemployment and the fate of the wage earner in times of business depression.

Dividends, prices, interest rates and salaried incomes of entrepreneurs and managerial classes, have in general been stabilized through the building up of reserves in prosperous periods, but there has been no reserve set aside for the upkeep of the wage earner upon whom falls the full brunt of unavoidable idleness. Now, however, industry has become aware of its duty to its employes, and, throughout the nation, it was declared, business is moving swiftly and irresistibly toward a scientific system of unemployment insurance.

The General Electric Company was one of the first of America's huge business corporations of propose and put into effect a scheme for making people happy and effective by giving them a sense of security in their jobs. And so it was that I went to talk to Gerard Swope, president of the company and the man in whose mind the plan originated.

Whenever I talk with a man the first thing I want to know is what he works at. This gives me a general view of his background. It is his background that gives me my first idea of his philosophy; and I long ago found out that whether a man has wise or foolish opinions, whether he has a good or bad philosophy, whether he has what William James called the "power of judging" wisely and well depends more upon his background than it does upon his sheer native intelligence. The judgment of a man of moderate intelligence with a great background is worth more than the snap judgment of a whole congress of wiseacres who have not had his experience.

But when you meet a man of great intelligence who also has a great background, as I instantly found was the case with Gerard Swope, such a man's words possess what Professor Hollingworth, the psychologist, calls "sagacity." Indeed, they possess that rarest and most precious thing in all the world, the thing to which men have given the magic name of "wisdom." And wisdom comes from only one place—namely, wise men's heads—and there are so few such heads! In fact, in ancient times men with such heads could do such extraordinary things as compared with common men with their ignorant heads that they thought they were possessed by some god and fell down and worshiped them. We don't do that now; we just give them a good salary and charge them with responsibility and work them 18 hours a day so that we common folks will have to work only eight.

And one of these heads happens to be on the shoulders of Gerard Swope or he would not now be working at the job of being president of a corporation with 100,000 employes, with more than 100,000 stockholders (nearly half of whom are women), with millions of dollars' worth of business annually at stake, whereas 35 years ago he was a shop helper at $1 a day. Nor would he have come up from being a welfare worker in his spare hours with that illustrious woman, Jane Addams, in Hull House, where he lived in order to understand the lives of human beings, to being still a welfare worker, but now all the year round for his millions of customers, his more than 100,000 stockholders and primarily for his 100,000 employes, upon whose happiness and effectiveness the welfare of his stockholders and the public so greatly depends.

I went to see Mr. Swope primarily to talk with him, or, I should say, for the privilege of having him talk to me, about his plan for insuring his employes against unemployment, one of the most significant developments of modern business; and as he talked I kept thinking back over those 35 years of work from shop helper to president, of the development of the man himself and how his own personal development had grown and expanded and kept pace with the incredible expansion and evolution of the modern world through this incredible generation of human experience. It was just one more illustration among the strong men I have had the good fortune to meet that wisdom is the ability to utilize in all you say and do the experience and education of your whole life.

And it was evident that in his most casual remarks as well as in the broad sweep of his general plans Mr. Swope was one of those individuals who is able to synthesize and utilize the labors, the thought, the experience of his whole lifetime. And may I digress to say that when a corporation finds a man who possesses that continuity of development and that habit and capacity of mind for synthesizing and utilizing on an instant's notice all the best of his experience and education, whether he be shoveling coal into the furnace or is among your directors, there, and there only, is your future executive.

And so it is obvious that this plan of unemployment insurance has grown up as a natural and logical product of Swope's own experience. It is the outcome of his philosophy of life. And the most important thing about a man is his philosophy of life. It is for this reason that that interesting Englishman, G. K. Chesterton, says that it is more important for a landlady to know her boarder's philosophy of life than it is to know his income, for his philosophy of life will determine whether he pays his keep or jumps his board bill, whether he pays as he goes or lets the other fellow hold the bag.

And so it is more important for the employes and stockholders of the General Electric Company to know Gerard Swope's philosophy of life than it is to know his salary or how much money he has made or may make in the future; and with his first remark it was easy to see how his deep and abiding interest in his plans for making his employes secure in their jobs had grown out of his own philosophy and how he had put into it his own life of labor and experience.

Before describing in detail his present unemployment insurance plan Mr. Swope discussed the general effect of unemployment on a man's morale and pointed out that there is something terribly demoralizing about a man being out of a job. This grows more serious, he pointed out, to a married man and even more so to a man with children. Beyond question, this keen appreciation of the whole psychology of the unemployed man was a reflection of his own early experiences, for after his graduation, in 1895, from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a bachelor of science in engineering he for several months was a resident of Hull House, in Chicago, and there imbibed much of the social and economic philosophy of Jane Addams.

"My feeling," he said, "about the insecurity of the wage earner arose very definitely in my first job after I left Chicago, when I was transferred to St. Louis. By this time I had the responsibilities of a married man and I learned what it means to wonder Can I keep my job? and to go on wondering day after day."

If a man feels insecure even when he has a job, Mr. Swope suggested, his demoralization and fear become worse when he has actually lost his job and is in search of work. Here Swope pointed out the extreme difficulty of a man keeping up his morale when he paces the street day after day, especially when he has a family and is compelled to come home at night and say to his wife with as much of an assumption of courage as possible that he has not been able to find work. There was little or no machinery in those days when Mr. Swope began, for laying a sound foundation for a working man's or salaried man's future. It is the future that most men work for not for the present, and when that future has no assurance and a man feels he is just a helpless cog in a big machine over which he has no control, it is obvious, as Mr. Swope pointed out, that he cannot do as effective work and cannot preserve the same integrity of purpose and solidity of character that develops as a natural product when a man has a sense of security in life.

It was, therefore, obvious that Mr. Swope's present-day efforts and attitudes as an executive were both consciously and unconsciously deeply motivated by his own life experiences. A man who had not come up from the ranks and also all along had developed those general humanitarian interests which Mr. Swope has always conspicuously displayed could hardly have originated this unique plan for insuring his company's employes against loss of their jobs. While living in St. Louis he was active in promoting the public playground movement and was appointed by the mayor or St. Louis as chairman of the first public bath commission.

Decorated, as he was, at the close of the World War by the president with the Distinguished Service Medal for his "foresight, ability, energy and loyal co-operation" in the "direction and supervision of procurement, storage and issue of all commodities and articles of equipment and supply needed for the army"; and also awarded by the French government the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor; a director in at least twenty of the major corporations of America and Europe and honored with a string of degrees as doctor of science, doctor of laws, etc., by various universities, it was extremely interesting to discover some of the fundamental maxims that express the economic and social philosophy of a man who has lived such an active, energetic and useful life and how they have influenced his practical policies. And of this I prefer that Mr. Swope should speak to you in his own words:

"Out of my experience in trying to develop a practical, workable scheme of unemployment insurance has come an increasing feeling of the truth of a very favorite maxim or motto of mine that expresses a very large part of my philosophy both as an executive and as a citizen. That motto is:

"We must do things with people and by people, instead of for people and to people.

"The value of this attitude was borne in on me anew by our experience in trying to get our people to adopt this plan, which we are now just trying out in our plants. It

Of All the Seekers for the Guadalupes' Gold, Old Ben Sublett Was the Most Picturesque

The Southwest's Lost Eldorado

In the Fastness of Guadalupe Mountains Lies a Rich Vein of Gold. Old Ben Sublett Found It and It Made Him Famous. But His Secret Died With Him. Many Have Sought the Treasure—Another Party Is Now on Its Trail—but It Still Defies Discovery

By J. Frank Dobie

Author of "A Vaquero of the Brush Country" and "Coronado's Children," the Literary Guild's Selection for February

THE tradition of gold in the Guadalupe mountains runs back a long, long way. Spanish conquistadores, as the story must have it, were led by treacherous Pueblos to a wonderful vein and were then extirpated. Geronimo, wiliest of all the Apaches, has been associated in a hundred stories with nuggets of that region—nuggets "as big as a goose liver."

While the Apaches were still taking scalps prospectors were looking for the great lode; they are still looking for it and adding to the tradition. Old Ben Sublett is supposed to have found it and nowadays it is best and most fittingly known as the Lost Sublett Mine. The legend represents an enormous cycle of the southwest and the west in which Adams Diggin's, the Lost Cabin Mine, the Lost Nigger Mine, Yuma's Gold, the Gunsight Lode, Engineer's Ledge and many another elusive bonanza weave through extraordinary folk narrative.

The setting is worthy of the legend. Guadalupe Peak, the highest point in Texas, rises 9,500 feet above sea level, just below the New Mexico line. Back in the Age of Horses, travelers coming down the Pecos river could ride for three days within sight of the peak. It is a beacon from all sides. The long, narrow chain of mountains to which it belongs extends, with gaps, southward clear to the Rio Grande and northward for nearly a hundred miles.

Here in the Guadalupes the only mountain sheep left in Texas and a majority of those left in New Mexico are, under the protection of the law, making their last stand; eagles and panthers molest them more than man; their haunts are so wild, rough, and waterless that only occasionally does a human being intrude. Here the Apaches made final retreat, and on the Mescalero Apache Indian reservation, hardly a day's horseback ride from the northwestern spurs of the Guadalupe chain, remnants of that fierce people yet live—secretive, distrustful, too proud to forget Caucasian appropriation of their birthright, their tribal name an inseparable element in the memorials of the southwestern world.

Of all the seekers for the gold of the Guadalupes "Old Ben" Sublett—William Colum Sublett being his correct name—was the most picturesque and has become most famous. Like the much besung Joe Bowers, he went west from Missouri—"yes, all the way from Pike"—to prospect in the Rocky mountains. But unlike Joe, he took his Sallie with him. In time they had three babies; up canyons and over mountains Ben dragged his family. He saw other men grow rich from virgin gold, but the pay streak never opened under his pick. He went in rags; at times his wife and children went hungry. Life for them must have been fearfully hard. It killed his wife. At length Sublett turned southeast and made for "civilization."

Civilization was the new Texas & Pacific railroad track—a double line of steel that glittered across hundreds of miles of west Texas land too waterless at that date even for the scant population of ranches. Sublett put up a tent beside a section house where the town of Monahans now stands, where a well had been dug. He got odd jobs from the railroad. Other men were coming in; they contributed to the support of "the children in the tent."

In fact, strangers were so charitable that one day Ben Sublett drove away alone in his rickety old buckboard, pulled by a pair of bony horses and carrying a meager supply of frijoles, flour and coffee. He did not need much. He could, as the saying goes, live on what a hungry coyote would leave. He again took to prospecting—in the nearest mountains of any size, the Guadalupes. This was long before an oil well was dreamed of in west Texas; it was before the Mescalero Apaches had been securely rounded up. Men who "packed" lead under their skins and could show the scars of arrow wounds warned Sublett that he had better stay away from the Guadalupes and the Apaches. He laughed at them and carried a gun only for meat. Trip after trip he made into the mountains, returning only to work long enough to buy a fresh store of supplies and to contribute a little to the direct needs of his children.

He moved them over to Odessa, where there were a few saloons, but no churches, where women were scarce, and where the click of six-shooters synchronized with the click of spurs. There the oldest child of the family, a girl, made something by taking in washing. The father was freer than ever to prospect. He knew what he was about. Every time he came in, his return was a surprise to the people of the town; they scoffed at his crazy mode of life. Occasionally he brought in a nugget, but hardly of enough value to keep him in shoe leather. In vain his children begged him to quit the mountains and settle down to some steady-paying job. He was stubborn; he had a "hunch" that some day he would find gold.

At times he trapped a little. Once, it seems, he had trapped in the White mountains of Arizona. This must have been before he came to Texas. After he had been prospecting for years he admitted that an Apache whom he met in the White mountains had told him a story of gold in the Guadalupes and had headed him toward it.

"Old Ben, the crazy prospector," became the jest of the country. Then one day, after having been gone for an unusually long time, he drove his rickety rig up to Mollie Williams' saloon in Odessa, strode—despite his habitual limp, caused by an old bullet wound—boldly to the bar, in a hearty voice invited everybody present to join him and called for drinks all around. The barkeeper hesitated, the men sniggered. But when Old Ben threw a buckskin pouch full of nuggets on the bar, the crowd went wild.

"Boys," he said, "I have been poor, but I ain't poor no longer. I can buy out this town and have plenty left. Drink."

They drank. They cheered. They drank again. Then between drinks Old Ben went out to his buckboard and brought in a small canvas sack filled with gold "so pure that a jeweler could have hammered it out."

"My friends," urged the crazy prospector, "drink all you want. Drink all you can hold. I have at last found the richest gold mine in the world. I can build a palace of California marble and buy up the whole state of Texas as a backyard for my children to play in. Let's celebrate."

Old Ben never built the palace, it seems, or encumbered himself with leagues of land. In reality he had no desire for estates or cushioned halls. His wants were few and elemental. That verse in the old ballad of "Mustang Gray" fits Sublett finely:

> He ne'er would sleep within a tent,
> No comforts would he know,
> But like a brave old Texian
> A-ranging he would go.

He was not greedy for riches. The golden secret that he bore in his breast—like the hidden light of the "Lantern Bearers"—and the notoriety that the secret brought meant more to him than any amount of taxable properties. He had a kind of hunger for fame. Human chicanery and the mad grasping for property perplexed him, and thus he came to distrust all "prosperity friends."

After he "struck it rich" he was never known to work at all. Every few months he would slip out to the mountains alone; he generally brought back around a thousand dollars' worth of gold. His chief pleasure seemed to be in displaying it. "One time while I was in Midland," said Charles Dixon, of El Paso, "I saw Old Ben Sublett lug two sacks of gold into the saloon and call to the world to drink on him." Whether they were two-bushel corn sacks or Bull Durham tobacco sacks, Dixon did not specify.

As may be imagined, many men tried to get Sublett to show them the location of his gold. "If anybody wants my mine," he would say, "let them go out and hunt for it like I did. People have laughed at me and called me a fool. The plains of the Pecos and the peaks of the Guadalupes have been my only friends. They are my home. When I die I want to be buried with the Guadalupes in sight of my grave on one side and the Pecos on the other. I am going to carry this secret with me so that for years and years after I am gone people will remember me and talk about 'the rich gold mine old man Sublett found.' I will leave something behind me to talk about."

Sublett was trailed, spied upon, "laid for," but no lobo wolf was ever more wily in avoiding traps than he was in avoiding detection. His habit was to leave town at some unexpected time, camp on the Pecos a day or two and then strike out from camp during the night. He might be gone only a few days; he might be gone for months. It is said that at one time he kept his money in W. E. Connell's bank, at Midland, about 30 miles east of Odessa.

Where Sublett turned his raw gold into cash nobody has explained, but the banker came to observe that when the mysterious old prospector's deposit ran low he invariably made a trip, and soon after his return invariably banked "hard money." Of course, there are people who say that Sublett never owned a check book in his life; some people will talk. Anyhow, as the best of the talkers tell it, banker Connell and a cowman by the name of George Gray offered Sublett ten thousand dollars if he would show them the source of his cash. Sublett just laughed at them. "Why," he replied, "I could go out and dig up that much in less than a week's time."

After this conversation Gray and Connell engaged Jim Flannigan to follow Sublett on the next trip. Sublett's funds in the bank were running low and he was due to "pull out" any hour. For two weeks Lee Driver, who was then keeping a livery stable in Midland, fed a horse for Flannigan. Then one day word came that Sublett had left Odessa in a hack pulled by two burros. Flannigan followed his tracks through the sand for 50 miles west along the railroad track to Pecos, on the Pecos river, and then 25 miles on up the river. There the trail played out—stopped—quit—just disappeared. How any West Texan could lose the plain trail of a hack in soft soil uncut by other tracks is almost inconceivable, but lose the trail Flannigan did. He was not the first or the last man to lose it.

He was still riding around trying to pick it up when he happened to meet a man who had just seen Sublett traveling down the river toward Pecos. He turned back, but before he reached Odessa the cunning old prospector had already arrived. He had been gone from town "only four days," and had in that time traveled at least a hundred and fifty miles. Very good traveling for a pair of burros pulling a hack through sand dunes! Evidently Sublett had not got even into the foothills of the Guadalupes on this trip. Probably he had a cache on the Pecos. Needless to say, he brought in a sack of gold.

But despite his secretive ways, Sublett occasionally relented, and before he died took several people more or less into his confidence. Once when he was coming out of the Guadalupes he met an old crony named Mike Wilson; he must have been feeling almost insanely generous, for he gave his friend such minute directions for reaching the mine that Wilson actually got to it. There he emptied provisions out of a tow-sack and crammed into it as much ore as he could carry home.

The trip wore Wilson out, and as soon as he reached town he went on a spree that lasted for three weeks. When he sobered up and tried to go to the mine a second time, he found himself utterly bewildered. Old Sublett just laughed at him and refused to direct him again.

"If anybody wants that mine," he said, "let him go out and hunt for it like I did."

Years ago Mike Wilson died in a hut within sight of the Guadalupes, trying vainly until the end to recall the way to Sublett's lost gold.

Another time, some men at Pecos, finally, after much persuasion, "ribbed up" Sublett to show them the mine. They felt so gay and prosperous that they loaded a big assortment of fancy food into their chuck wagon to supplement the regular camp supplies. The first night out, Sublett became ill with ptomaine poisoning. He was probably already sick from having promised to give away his secret. At any rate, he claimed that someone had tried to poison him, became as stubborn as a government mule and refused to go on a step farther.

Perhaps, though, there was an independent sharer of his secret, who was unknown even to Sublett. Or maybe Sublett discovered the sharer and acted as his jealousy might have prompted him to act out in the wild loneliness of the Guadalupes. Every man is entitled to his own conclusion from the testimony offered by F. H. Hardesty, who used to ranch in El Paso county.

One evening in the '80s a fellow by the name of Lucius Arthur, known better as "Frenchy," rode up to Hardesty's ranch, watered and accepted the invitation to unsaddle and stay all night. While the two men were talking after supper, Frenchy confided to his host that he was trailing two Mexicans who had left Ysleta, on the Rio Grande, the preceding night. He said that he had started to follow them once before, but that his grub and water had played out. He knew that they were bound for a gold mine somewhere in the Guadalupes to the east.

Frenchy had been keeping his eye on these Mexicans for a long time. One of them, according to him, belonged to a wealthy old family of rancheros down in Mexico. Perhaps, as he suggested, some Mexican had found out about the gold back in the days when genie from below the Rio Grande used to come up and get salt from the great beds west of the Guadalupe mountains. A gringo's attempt to control this salt resulted in what is still referred to as the Salt War. Anyway, a member of the ranchero's family made a trip to the Guadalupe gold mine each year and brought out a supply of ore. The Mexican now after it had come to Ysleta to meet his brother-in-law, and together they had left that place in the dead of night.

"After hearing all this," Hardesty related, "I told Frenchy he ought to go better equipped. I told him he might have to stay out for weeks trailing the Mexicans and waiting for them to clear out from the gold mine before he could get into it. Then I offered to stake him with everything he needed. Well, we went in partners, and when he left my place he had as good an outfit as any man could want and was carrying enough supplies to last two months; six weeks later he was back. He had gold quartz to show.

"According to his story, he had trailed the Mexicans and from a place of concealment had watched them climb down a rope ladder into a chasm. He saw them haul up sacks of ore and water for their horses which were staked on the rim. But he himself had to depend on water so far away that he couldn't keep watch. After he had hung around several days the Mexicans left and then he made a closer inspection.

"The chasm, from the way he described it, must have varied in width from 40 to 100 feet and was all of 60 feet deep. Down at the bottom he could see the entrance to a cave with freshly broken rock in front of it. He claimed that he didn't go down into the chasm because he was short on rope for a ladder. I thought he might have been a little more resourceful, but I said nothing. The chunks of quartz he brought in had been dropped by the Mexicans, so he said

"Frenchy rested up a few days, took a fresh pack of supplies, including enough rope to picket out a whole caballada, and left again for the Guadalupes. He never came back. I have never heard of him since. That's all I know about the gold of the Guadalupes."

Something over 35 years ago a jack-leg carpenter by the name of Stewart was putting a tin roof on a house for Judge J. J. Walker, of Barstow. He could unfold many a tale, and one very hot day while he rested in the shade he unfolded this one to his employer.

Along in the late '80s several officials of the Texas & Pacific railroad engaged Stewart to guide them into the Pecos country on a hunt. Camp was made in some trackless hills east of the river. A rumor racing over the range had it that the Apaches had broken out and were back on their old stamping grounds. Stewart was naturally uneasy lest they foray down from the mountains and either kill some of his party or drive off their horses. He had his son, a mere child, with him.

One evening about sundown he saw a wagon coming toward camp. It was a light spring wagon, drawn by a single horse—a very large horse. When it reached camp, the driver alighted. He was Ben Sublett and he was alone. Stewart had known him for years. Of course, he was invited to stay all night, and he unhitched. After the Making His First Trial Flight, Flint is Struck With the Beauty Narcissa Has Created on Her Island, but Disturbed by Seeing No Sign of Her on the Cay.

INSTALLMENT III.

IF MY plans work out, it will be worth flying over from Florida just to see. I chose one of the islands your red line went through on the chart because I don't want my sea rose to blush unseen," Narcissa said.

"No fear. May I use it in my publicity campaign?"

"Yes, when it's finished. That ought to be before you start your service. The autumn rains should put my gardens in full bloom at Christmas in this climate. Shall I see you before then?"

He shook his head. "After this reconnaissance I'll be close to the job at the factory. What about that first flight? Can you be in Palm Beach New Year's eve?"

"Can do. Perhaps I can lure father down. He would never fly for pleasure, but he might for business."

"Perhaps we can put it to him on such a business," Flint said. "I've got an idea about that."

John did not linger more than to go ashore with Narcissa and take a sample of the surface soil which she needed to have analyzed at the agricultural department and a report sent her as to the treatment it required for extensive horticulture, whether lime or potash or nitrates. Or if there was any ingredient in excess.

They walked down to the grotto from which the sweet water flowed steadily and stood for a moment looking into the clear dark pool as if trying to read their future there. Narcissa had a cold sunk feeling in her heart at the thought that she must presently watch her cavalier of the air dwindle into a mote and dissolve as if absorbed by the Infinite. The air, instead of keeping him nearer in the sense of distance, now impressed her as a medium vastly remote, not bounded like the earth. As if its voyager was in danger of being lost in it, never to return, just as one is lost in the sea.

She sank down on the sandy floor, with her shoulders against a rough mass of coral.

"I think you'd better go now, John, and leave me here. I don't want to watch you fly away."

He nodded. "I don't want to watch you watching me fly away, Narcissa. It's pretty awful to leave you marooned on this tiny outcrop. Hurricanes sometimes sweep over here."

"The reefs and shoals protect this place and hurricanes are rare and give at least 24 hours' warning. Let's get it over with, John."

There was no longer any lingering protest in Flint's mind at this thing of falling in love. It was, he now realized, the one thing that counted and all the rest accessory to it. Study—technical or philosophic, work, manual or mental, success, achievement, money—all these quantities were mere corollaries to the one important, indispensable object in life, that now appeared to be also the reason for it, the loved complement required for the carrying on of everything.

For a few moments his mind stopped working altogether, as he held Narcissa in his arms, her own about his neck, her tear-wet face against his weathered one. For a moment a dreadful submerged feeling enveloped him, as if this were a final farewell, the last parting of Orpheus and Eurydice. Narcissa reminded him of a famous painting of Eurydice.

This impression was insupportable but brief. He left Narcissa there a crumpled heap, walked rapidly back to where one of the sailors was fending the plane from a jutting rock. Flint wondered if all lovers, or at least all who loved as much as he, experienced this appalling sense of foreboding when compelled to leave the loved ones. It were as though the shadow of something ahead struck athwart their parting. He could scarcely have borne it if at the same time there had not been that voice of hope singing in the gloom that Rostand compares to a nightingale in the dark forest.

A regime consisting principally of work—be this interesting to absorption and of a sort in which the effort is shared by mind and body and even soul, the soul of the creator—is the best and sanest course of life for everybody. It cheers the heart, builds up the faculties, dispels gloom, brings peace when the day's work is done, strengthens and develops the evolution of the builder. Because not only does the creator create, but in the very process becomes one's self more fully created.

For four months Narcissa built in the sense of directing the construction. Her efforts during this time were of three sorts: designing, architectural and in landscape gardening. Then causing a transfer of these designs for plans to scale on the surface prepared for them somewhat as the artist of a great fresco in mosaic might cause it to be worked out in majuscule, then planting for the floral support of what had been executed in colored tiles and pigmented cement work, with the hope that these botanic features might develop in the harmony required.

Thereafter came a period of waiting and examining closely for error that required correction and the sort of feverish expectation that might be felt by a great engineer who has undertaken the construction of a spiral tunnel through a mountain starting from opposite sides and depending on the accuracy of his calculations to coincide his centers where the two excavations should meet, like the Simpson tunnel.

But in the case of Narcissa's entirely novel and hitherto unheard of experiment the problem was not only one of design but of color, and there could be no guide, no check, no control in the development until her gardens bloomed. Otherwise she would have ordered an airplane to survey from aloft the progress of the work. She might have done this anyhow but for the desire that she was attempting be kept absolutely secret until its full fruition—and perhaps to some extent a dread of disappointment in its unfinished aspect.

Then came the rains, warm and copious and gestating, falling on the fecund areas to develop them just as the chemical solution employed by the photographer in color must, in their reactions, develop his plate.

Narcissa and her aids awaited their results with the expectancy, the thrilling hopes and apprehensions of all explorers in new fields: Columbus, De Soto, Marconi, and Wilbur Wright.

No hurricane disturbed them. The black gang had finished its work and gone. They were, on the whole, a contented little colony. Picking their weather, they went now and then to Nassau, only a day's run, for supplies and mail. Narcissa's friends supposed her to be wintering on a Bahama cay where she had for some whimsical reason seen fit to build herself a camp. Those more intimate felt that at least no girl could have better protection or chaperoning than that supplied by the gruff and competent old sailing master, who had been her sea nurse from childhood or nautical foster-father, and a woman of Miss Tietjens' capacities and common sense.

Captain Broek worked at his history of the Hudson, assisted by the former librarian. The crew proved steady, docile, accepting the sailor philosophy, the sound old seagoing maxim that has supported even the most irksome monotony: "More days, more dollars."

The rains began to abate and Narcissa's gardens to glow. Her acres-wide picture was, she perceived, rapidly developing. The difficulty now was to control her excitement. She compared the color promises with those of her sketches and designs. Yet the impossibility of a comprehensive view, except from aloft, was maddening. With a picture of such magnitude as was here revealing itself, she was as helpless as the painter of a great ceiling fresco, forbidden to descend from his high scaffolding where his vision was limited to a single detail at close focus. Where such an artist would be compelled to go down a long distance and look up, Narcissa was obliged to go up a great distance and look down.

She felt that she could not any longer endure the suspense. Toward the end of December, with the gardens a riot of color, the tiles of her habitable kiosks gleaming and glowing in a benign more constant winter sun, she felt that she must absolutely view her work from the high air or suffer some sort of crash.

"Captain Hank," she said, "you'll just have to take the schooner and go to Nassau and hire a plane. I've got to have a look at this or bust."

John Flint had written regularly, buoyantly. Things were going well and nothing to prevent their New Year's initial flight, as planned. There might be little holidays in the sense of gaps to fill that could only be detected from the air, Narcissa feared, and the work must be as perfect as possible for the sake of its first impression. She did not want to leave the cay herself for any length of time. It was as if she had a treasure there that she could not entrust to guardianship of any but herself.

So Captain Hank sailed for Nassau in the Half Moon, leaving Narcissa and Miss Tietjens and two of the older hands, good stolid Finns. He left them also one of the yacht's small boats that was equipped with an outboard engine and that was an error in his judgment.

For Narcissa was in a desperately nervous, restless state. She had decided not to make the first flight of Flint's new tourist service because she did not wish to make the whole loop of Santa Domingo and Cuba, nor did she wish to be landed on Miraflores cay, when it would appear to the others that she had created it for Flint as she had done the narcissus at home. She wanted the big plane with its passengers to come upon her work all unawares, even to Flint himself, who could not have anticipated its dimensions.

But now her impatience to view it in whole and to determine that there was no error, false note of design or color or other flaw, became distressing. She did not know how soon Captain Broek might be able to secure the services of a flyer and it was only a week before John Flint was to make the voyage inaugurating the service. Narcissa had written him in ample time and told of her decision not to be of the inaugural party. She had enjoined him also to say nothing about his acquaintanceship with herself, nor to give any hint of having known of her presence there, or what she was about. It would, she pointed out, be far more effective as a promoting factor and one for publicity to arouse wonder as to who could have pushed into the Bahama archipelago and seized on this island and turned it into a lovely and amazing floral picture as soon from the sky—or as Narcissa actually put it, "because she was not sure of its success," a wild attempt at landscape gardening that Flint would not have to play up the publicity end. Narcissa thought. His astonished passengers would take care of that.

But meanwhile Narcissa was in an agony of misgiving and of dread lest Flint make his flight before she was able to see her work and correct any error of deficiency that might be there. She could not keep still, read or rest, or usefully occupy herself. The placidity of Miss Tietjens maddened her, as did the breathless repose that now lay on the cay.

Narcissa roamed about the premises like a freshly confined captive. She went in and out of the kiosk that furnished the body of the hibiscus flower delineated in its crimson tiles, shaded with deep magenta and high lights of primrose yellow ones. She climbed on to the roof and examined the other smaller buildings of like structure of which the petals served as tiled verandas. Here spread out round her was a completed work and she could not see more than a small detail of it at a time and that too close to give her the least impression.

In a fever of impatience Narcissa went down to the shore. The small cedar boat with its outboard engine was lying at the new jetty of coquina stone and cement. The water was smooth as a mill pond of a still day—a lovely azure flecked with emerald where deeper. And the horizon looked very near and had a whitish glare. The next small cay, scarcely ever visible from the shore, because it was low and over the horizon, was now hoisted well above it, sharp and distinct, yet unconvincing in reality because of its aspect of being bordered by sheer cliffs of considerable height.

This mirage effect should have warned a girl of Narcissa's marine experience, seasense and weather wisdom. She did, in fact, recognize the forecast of a change of weather from that of the last two still torrid days. But she forgot that she was not north of the forties, where such changes are more deliberate, but close to the tropics where they are swift. The sight of that island looming up about six miles away reminded

The deserted ranch near Garden City, Col., where Jake Fleagle and his gang took refuge for six days after they had held up the First National bank at Lamar.

How Fingerprint Solved Barbarous Bank Murders in Colorado and Led To the Capture of the Fleagle Gang

—By PETER LEVINS—

FOR audacity and ruthlessness, the Lamar, Col., bank murders—particularly the third and fourth killings—seldom have been equaled in this country, even in the days of the James brothers and other desperados of earlier times. The band's barbarous crimes horrified the country, spurred Colorado and its neighbor states into a relentless search, and in the end brought every member of the gang to justice.

But it called for a long, tedious piece of detective work. Before the murder could be solved, one certain member of the gang had to be arrested somewhere and fingerprinted. Had he kept clear of the law after the Lamar affair, it is hardly likely that the authorities would have broken the case.

But as matters turned out, when this robber placed a finger on the glass door of a certain automobile within a few hours of the holdup, he set in motion the machinery of his own destruction, and the destruction of his associates.

We will plunge at once into the melodrama. There's a lot of it in this yarn.

Four men in a blue sedan drove up to the First National Bank of Lamar at about 1 p. m., May 23, 1928. One stayed at the wheel while the others entered the bank and commanded the employes and two customers to throw up their hands. When two members of the bank's staff, A. Newton Parrish, aged president, and his son, John, cashier, reached for revolvers, the robbers immediately opened fire, killing both.

The father and son each managed to fire before they were dropped. Parrish, senior, missed, and died with a shot in the head. His son wounded one of the robbers and then, still firing, fell with a bullet through the heart.

OFF AND AWAY WITH TWO MEN AND THE LOOT.

Quickly the bandits gathered up $12,000 in cash and $207,000 in securities, forced Everette Kessinger, a teller, and E. A. Lundgren, one-armed janitor of the bank, to carry the wounded robber out of the place, and soon the blue sedan was speeding through Lamar, heading for the open country. The teller and janitor were brought along to serve as shields.

Within a few minutes, Sheriff L. E. Alderman was in pursuit. A freight train, passing through the center of town, held up the bandits. Alderman approached within a mile of them. Then the caboose of the train rolled by and they were off again, turning west on the Sante Fe trail. Lundgren, the janitor, was set at liberty a few miles out of town.

Now began what was to become the greatest manhunt in the region. The state armory was thrown open to citizens. The word went over the countryside to get these killers, dead or alive.

But the afternoon passed and no trace of the fugitives was found. At 7:30 p. m. they stopped at a drug store in Trinidad, Col., west of Lamar, and forced Mrs. Florence Ellis, the proprietor, to dress their bleeding comrade's wounds. She reported that the man had serious injuries in the side, forefinger and arm. Soon after this, Alderman and some deputies encountered the fleeing sedan near Bristol, 30 miles north of Lamar, and engaged them in battle.

The robbers won a complete victory, disabling the police car and making good their escape. They fled north, then eastward, having cut back east from Trinidad.

Midnight. The blue sedan stopped at the home of Dr. William W. Wineinger, a physician of Dighton, Kas., northeast of Lamar. One of the robbers, roughly dressed, knocked at the door and asked the doctor to come and attend a "man who was hurt by a tractor." The doctor got his bag, jumped into his own car, and drove off.

Dr. Wineinger did not return.

By morning more than a thousand citizens were engaged in the hunt. Officers of Nebraska, Kansas, and New Mexico were on the alert. Seven thousand dollars had already been offered for the capture of the fugitives. Later the rewards reached $55,000. All day long planes from National Guard headquarters at Denver flew low over the region. No luck.

On the afternoon of May 25, Lieutenant Charles L. Reavis, of the National Guard, flying over the countryside, spotted a wrecked car just off a road between Scott City, Kas., and Oakley, Kas. He landed his plane near by and went to examine the car.

The machine was the doctor's. It had been driven over an embankment and its license plates had been removed.

Near by was the doctor's body, still warm. The top of the man's head had been blown off.

Thus had the robbers repaid him for his services. Unthinking, he had gone off on an errand of mercy—and lost his life. Here was ruthlessness worthy of barbarians.

The reader can imagine the effect of this murder upon the inhabitants. The reader can also imagine what would have happened to these savages if citizens had caught them. It is to be doubted if the captors would have restrained themselves long enough to find something to throw a rope over.

By nightfall of the 25th more than 2,000 were hunting the killers. The posses included picked riflemen from several states. The hunt centered around Oakley, Minge, Medec, and Scott City. Every able-bodied citizen in this section took part.

But still there was no trace of the bandits. And still there was no news of Kessinger, the teller.

Officers examined Dr. Wineinger's car for possible clews, particularly fingerprints. The body of the car yielded nothing, but a single print was found on the right rear window of the machine. A thumb print. It was developed by R. S. Terwilliger, fingerprint expert of Garden City, Kas., and was later sent to all the prisons in the country, but days and weeks passed fruitlessly. The impression could not be identified.

Next, the discovery of the fourth murder.

It was on June 13. A schoolgirl, out on a picnic with several other girls, entered an abandoned shack near Liberal, Kas., southeast of Lamar, near the Oklahoma state line, and came upon the body of a man. He had been shot to death about two weeks before.

The body was that of Everette Kessinger.

Police officers and inhabitants of the region couldn't understand how they could have missed finding the body during the exhaustive search that had been made, and it was asserted that the killers must have committed the crime elsewhere and deposited the body in the shack after the hunt had subsided.

Months passed. When the prisons reported that they were able to find no print similar to the one taken from the glass door of the doctor's car, it was sent to Washington, D. C., to be compared with 400,000 other fingerprints on file in the capital. This search also proved fruitless. Finally it was filed away to be checked with such new prints as came in. That is, prints of newly arrested men.

The break came at last in the early summer of 1929. A similar print had turned up in California. It was a break that was to lead to four more fatalities, none of them illegal.

The print was that of a man who had been arrested in Los Angeles for carrying a concealed weapon and who had been released the next day. He had given the name of William Holden. Police officers located a young woman named Beatrice Holden in Los Angeles and questioned her assiduously. Before long the authorities knew the true identity of William Holden. The man was Jake Fleagle, Jr., of Garden City, Kas.

It was a startling discovery. The Fleagles, who lived on a farm 25 miles northwest of Garden City, had entertained numbers of searchers at dinner during the frantic hunt for the bank killers. The Fleagle boys—Ralph, Jake, Fred and Walt—had been regarded as rather wild by the people of the region, and Jake, Sr., the father of the family, had a reputation for being quite a drunkard, but not the slightest suspicion had ever been directed at them. In the eyes of their neighbors they were prosperous farmers and stock breeders.

Unusually prosperous, as a matter of fact.

ARMED WITH SLIM CLEW, POLICE TAKE UP SEARCH.

But the police, for all their doubts, felt that they had their teeth in something definite at last. Without making public what had been discovered, Chief of Police H. H. Harper, of Colorado Springs, Sheriff Alderman and other officers set about following up the slim clew. Chief of Police Lee Richardson arrested Jake, Sr., Walt and Fred—the other two sons had not been seen in the neighborhood for some time—and thereafter officers scrutinized every piece of mail addressed to the Fleagles.

Before long they knew that Ralph Fleagle was communicating with his family. Moreover there was something about the process that strengthened the officers' suspicion. The letters were not coming from him directly but by devious go-between methods. Why should he do this if he did not have reason to keep under cover? And why was it that old Jake and his sons had post-office boxes under assumed names?

Weeks of watching and waiting. Finally a letter came from Ralph. He was at Kankakee, Ill. Sheriff Alderman flew at once to Kankakee, enlisted the aid of the local police, arrested Ralph at the general delivery window of the Kankakee postoffice, and then all but caught young Jake in Peoria.

The Peoria tip came through a telephone call to Ralph's hotel in Kankakee. The Peoria police arrested one Dr. George De Moss, with whom Jake and a woman had been living, according to the officers, and

An Arab Conference—an Etchi

"HE WHO has once drunk of the waters of Africa," runs the old Arab proverb, "will return to drink of them again."

And about no part of the Dark Continent, perhaps, is this proverb so true as about the region in which these "waters of Africa" are most difficult to find—the white little sunlit towns of the Sahara's rim.

At any rate, there are certainly few countries which, after one visit or two or three, leave such an indelible impression on the mind. Whether this is due to some mysterious quality in the water (which, by the way, is excellent) or to the feeling one has the moment one steps ashore in Casablanca or Algiers—that Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia belong somehow to a world apart, a glamorous, colorful little world at the back door of Europe—scarcely matters.

The slender trickle of tourists which, in the years directly following the war, ran during January, February and March across the rolling Moroccan plain, through the mountains of Algeria to the desert country of the South has grown, into a stream rather more vigorous than any of the rivers of North Africa. The winter season at Algiers and Biskra is now every bit as brilliant as the winter season at Nice and Cannes. Nevertheless these things—travel facilities and what the French call "comfort moderne" are in North Africa but emphatically not of it.

This was explained to me before my first trip to North Africa some seven years ago by a man who knows this sunlit northern rim of the Dark Continent as few have ever known it. I chanced to meet him on a Mediterranean steamer bound south for Casablanca. He heard that it was my first trip, looked at me and said simply: "You'll like North Africa. It's a country of main-traveled highways and adventurous by-ways." That, it seems to me, now that I know Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia at least fairly well, sums up the country's strange, almost uncanny fascination about as completely as any single phrase could.

For even when one is traveling in one of the luxurious Transatlantique buses or stopping in a room with bath at one of the "Transat" hotels, one is always aware, somehow, of the presence, just behind one's shoulder, of the unknown. One is always aware that the road—the road that means mobility and comfort, in short, the trappings of civilization—is merely a tenuous white thread winding through a country of which it is not a part. For, despite the fact that Algiers is a modern city of a quarter of a million, despite the fact that travel throughout the length and breadth of North Africa is as safe, in general, as it is in America, the country remains barbaric at heart—a million miles, in spirit, from Europe just across the way; a part, a real part, of the East. Simply by stepping off the main-traveled road one can find almost anything in the way of an adventure that one wishes.

One winter several years ago I happened to be in Tunis with a friend. We were both more or less familiar with Morocco and Northern Algeria. Neither of us had ever seen anything of the real desert. We were both young enough to have a lust for adventure. And so one day out of a clear sky we decided to see the desert of South Tunisia, that arm of the Sahara known as the Djerid, as it should be seen. We began to compare notes. The conversation ran about as follows:

"Far to the south," began my friend, "beyond the farthest outposts of civilization lies the Sahara and the oases of the sheiks. There, under the date-palms, these generous monarchs pitch their silken tents. In the courtyard, beside the fountain. . . ."

"Courtyard?" said I. "Courtyard of a tent?"

"Don't interrupt," said my friend. "Beside the fountain, dressed in priceless pearls and robes of henna and silk, lounge the veiled beauties of the harem. Ethiopian eunuchs, in loin-cloths and peacock feathers, stand with crossed arms beside the bolted doors."

"My dear fellow," said I accusingly, "you've been reading sentimental literature. Do you want to know what the desert really is? Listen. Far to the south, farther even than the valiant Spahis dare venture, is the barren wasteland of the Sahara. Dry oueds where the shy gazelle comes furtively to drink a few drops of stagnant water, mirages that will lure the unwary traveler to his death and miles of unbroken sand scattered with camel bones. There the veiled Tuareg plies his dreadful trade of slaughter and pillage. . . ."

"Pillage?" asked my friend. "Pillage what? Camel bones?"

But I had read only the first chapter of that particular book and couldn't tell him.

We spent the next two days in Tunis asking questions. We asked tourist agencies and postmen and consuls and army officers, getting as disconcertingly diverse a set of answers as could well be imagined. The tourist agencies offered the oases, sheiks and all, with a few gazells and mirages thrown in, for the modest sum of about $25 a day. The army officers spoke vaguely of Tuaregs and hostile Bedouins and of the advisability of taking a column or so of light artillery with us. The consul told us that we would find camels to be the only practical beasts of burden and one of the postmen told us that, in the Djerid, camels cost sixty francs per hump per day—i. e. sixty francs a day for the dromedaries and one hundred and twenty for the Bactrians. That sounded like a good deal in a country "famous for its hospitality, where even to offer money is considered an insult."

Finally we bought a map and started south.

We had chosen for our jumping-off place what proved to be one of the most desolate spots I had ever seen, the little phosphate mining town of Redeyef, treeless, dusty—an Arab nourwal, or mud hut village, sprawled on the floor of a barren valley, with a huge phosphate mill rising on the barren hill behind. We spent the better part of a day in the town general store selecting our supplies; we found a little chap with a burro who agreed, for the sum of five francs, to guide us on the first lap of our journey, to the oasis town of Tamerza, twenty-odd miles away. The next morning, after an early breakfast in the cafe, we started. Ten minutes later we were over the hill and out of sight.

I am sure that I shall never forget that first day on the road—the winding yellow trail, the rolling barren plain with the mountains to the north, the crystalline clearness of the sunlit air, and finally, far down the valley, the black blotch of the palms of Tamerza. The people that we passed along the way said nothing to us; of our guide they asked always one question:

"Where are they going?"

And he replied to them always, "They are going to Tamerza."

"Why?"

"I don't know." And they passed on.

About a quarter of these people were armed with long, antiquated shot-guns strapped across their shoulders. And to us, who were carrying nothing more deadly than a bamboo cane to beat the burro with, the sight of all these firearms was anything but reassuring. Before we reached Tamerza we had begun to feel a little uneasy.

Our uneasiness was short lived. We were received on our arrival by the shiek, Mohamet Sgair ben Salah (I still have somewhere the card that he ceremoniously presented to me) with a hospitality as warm and charming as any I have ever known. He gave us an omelette and cous-cous for dinner, showed us to goat-skin couches for the night, sent with us, when we left early the following morning for the next oasis town, Negrine, his cousin Djeballa, one of the most delightful, happy-go-lucky individuals I have eve. met.

To Djeballa alone of all the people we met during our ten-day desert march, the word "American" meant something more than a vague name. He smiled when he heard where we came from, smiled and nodded. "Ah, I know them, the Americans," he said. "They are des braves gens. I was in the Argonne, mon ami."

All day, on the road to Negrine, he walked beside us, leading the white mule of his cousin, the shiek, telling us stories of his days in the army, singing French battle songs in an Arab falsetto, cursing the dull life of South Tunisia.

So the days passed. We washed ourselves and our clothes in the warm oued of Negrine, accepted for one day the hospitality an Arab schoolteacher in Ferkhan, slept, when no oasis offered itself, with Bedouins under the desert stars. But ever onward, covering from twenty to fifty miles a day, toward the West.

And everywhere we found the same hospitality, the same friendliness. If there were no silken tents and Ethiopian eunuchs, there were no Tuaregs or camel bones either. In the little Arab school of Ferkhan we slept, rolled in bright-colored woolen rugs on an old iron bedstead without a mattress. The schoolteacher invited us to a native wedding. The bride was a widow and the wedding therefore was after dark.

Late one afternoon, after a dry camp made the night before outside a Bedouin douar, we reached the oasis of Khanga Sidi Nadji. On this lap of the journey our guide, who could speak no French, was a particularly timid sort of person, and carried slung across his shoulder one of the same long antiquated shotguns which had so frightened us on the road to Tamerza. It was just as well that he had no occasion to use it, for the thing's barrel was bent—and he had no ammunition anyway. But it appeared, when we got to Khanga, that "firearms" were not allowed in the town. My friend and the guide sat down on the edge of the oasis while I went on in to explore.

As I was walking along the main street of the little town a her that she had always wished to visit it, with the idea of purchase, and that now in her restless mood, it would be soothing to her nerves.

It was just after luncheon, everybody taking a siesta, the engine was powerful of its type and would drive the light cedar yacht's dinghy at about twelve miles an hour. Narcissa was a sailor, a good machinist and this engine had never failed them. It did not occur to her that there was any danger worth considering in getting into that boat and skimming over the smooth water for half an hour's run to the low little cay now shoved up by the mirage.

She was in the habit of running round the island or off outside the reef to fish with the little boat, so that neither Miss Tietjens, nor the cook, nor any other drowsy watchdog left by Captain Broek took any heed of the staccato volleying as Narcissa set out. Well clear of the cay she glanced back at what from that same plane of observation looked like a pretty cluster of kiosks that suggested pagodas and little terraces and bright shell paths all flanked and edged about with massifs of brilliant flowers. Nobody could possibly have guessed what it all must look like from high above.

But what Narcissa now failed to notice in a scrutiny she centered on the premises alone was the zone of false blue that was darkening over the horizon astern and to the westward. In fact, the glare of the sun on the water partially prevented this. It was distressing to her eyes and so she kept them steadily ahead on the little cay that had been pushed up as if by some mystic glamour from the topaz sea.

John Flint had been disappointed on receiving Narcissa's letter to say that she would not be of the party to make the initial flight, but he perceived immediately the wisdom of her decision. He had no conception of the extent to which she had developed her idea, but, whatever it might be, it would be good, Flint knew.

Breaking suddenly on the vision of his passengers out of a remote and apparently uninhabited archipelago, it must prove a source of wonder, conjecture and speculation as to who possibly could have done this thing and why. They would stare at it astonished, photograph it and might even ask him to land, in order to satisfy their curiosity. But he would find some excuse for not doing so, tell them that there might be difficulty in getting up again or other invention. Far better to keep them guessing and speculating and trying to find out what this piece of sky scenery was all about.

And then, if it proved really striking, Flint would play it up for all that it was worth, emphasize the pioneer idea, this building for the air, as hitherto architects and landscape gardeners had built for observations from different angles of the same plane or one but slightly elevated, like a sunk garden seen from a raised terrace or upper window. Or even for effect as viewed from a lower plane like a big house on a hill top or cliff along the shore.

He was anticipating amusedly the surprise in store for his passengers when a few days later they set off amidst a proper but not undue amount of well-ordered ballyhoo. Such as might be expected with the inauguration of a new service that had to it a certain tinge of adventure.

There was a crowd of winter holiday makers at the airport and flags and a band that burst out with "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," as Flint took the air in the splendid new 15-passenger plane of which all the places were filled with stockholders and guests, of whom two were newspaper correspondents and two other motion picture cameramen. The day was perfect, clear with a brisk north wind, a fair wind which, if it held up, would lessen their time to the first stop.

The visibility was high and bright and enabled Flint to pick up from afar the landmarks that he had fixed in his mind from study of his hydrographic charts. Once he made his first landfall, Great Bahama, he would scarcely need his compass for the rest of the day's flight.

The plane was steady and the air uniform of pressure, with no holes nor pockets nor counter currents. Nevertheless, there was for the first hour or so that slight tension felt by landsmen aloft, who look down to see beneath them only water, however smooth. Curiously enough and against all reason there is a greater sense of security for many who fly to look down on broken ground, forest or even ragged hills where landing would be impossible with safety, than to contemplate beneath an alien element, however smooth, and on which a landing for this staunch flying boat would be fraught with no danger at all.

Therefore it was with a general sense of relief that Great Bahama revealed itself, a soft distant brushing of blue against the more pellucid blue of sea and sky.

From there on Flint's announcer, an official entertainer, told them that there should be cays and islands almost constantly in sight, scattered all about, to offer a lea for landing at any time. Flint was piloting, visible to the others in his raised position forward. He could look back and observe their visible reactions. Everything was running well. He was keeping an altitude of about a thousand feet. Now and then a vessel beneath, a passenger or cargo boat and a yacht or two had relieved the sense of remoteness. They could see the three white puffs in salute from the whistles of these vessels, for the inauguration of the service had been widely published and Flint had received many good-will telegrams.

His own heart was naturally elate, not only at this fulfillment of a long cherished ambition, but at the idea that very soon now the girl whom he adored and had not seen for over half a year would be gazing up at him from whatever artistic mark she must have been able to achieve. If this were only such a big but delicate depiction of her name flower as she had effected on her ancestral home, it would still be wonderfully effective on the face of that lonely, lovely sea.

Then as morning wore on toward noon with the sun approaching meridian and casting the big plane's shadow on the smooth surface beneath at no great declination, Flint picked up an island mark he recognized as lying at no great distance from Miraflores cay. He took its compass bearing and found that his course was accurate to carry him directly over Narcissa's experiment. "What a girl," he thought to himself. "What a bright intelligence, first to conceive and then, what a moral determination to maroon herself for over six months on the little island for the carrying out of her design." His heart began to thump violently with an almost painful anxiety to discover with how much success her valiant effort had been attended.

He was as eager to behold the result as might have been an early explorer, a Balboa, who climbs a mountain barrier to view the "terra incognita" that must unfold itself beyond.

The minutes sped by, though to Flint they seemed to drag along on sluggish feet. Then far in the distance, almost dead ahead, it seemed to him that he caught for an instant the tiny fleck of a bright color note, alien to the prevailing ones of soft swimming blue, delicate topaz, emerald and paler green. It was extinguished like a distant lone but redly flaming star of a misty night, then presently shimmered out again. It became constant, a minuscule red splash with a gleam of primrose yellow, for Narcissa's name flower was of her choice the yellow one.

Flint lowered his altitude a little, then studying the sun's angle, laid a course that would bring its streaming light on the axis of their line of vision. Suddenly this jab of color, like a drop of bright paint on a marine painting of delicate hues, caught the alert eye of one of the cameramen.

"Hey, look there, what's that?" he cried excitedly.

Flint corrected a slight listing of his airship as the passengers moved to one side. Also he dropped a little lower, to about 700 feet. There was a breathless hush as now this prodigy swiftly and yet serenely revealed itself to the wondering eyes high over it. There beneath them lay an exquisite cluster of lovely flowers as if floating on a fragment of green moss on the great blue bowl of the sea. These vivid blossoms had no look of artificiality. They were as if obviously alive and growing there with fresh delicate shading to their petals exquisitely traced as to corona and corolla. And as Flint planed lower even the pistils and stamens became apparent with some buds starting to unfold and their long stems trailing out over the edge of the piece of moss on which they floated and into the limpid sea where one could discover them still sloping more deeply along the bright sandy bottom.

The sheer beauty of this amazing phenomenon held the party spellbound, deprived it utterly of speech. As for Flint himself, always considered unemotional, he now felt his throat constrict and tears burning his eyes. For him alone it was more than a marvel, the glorious expression of a lovely soul, that of the girl he loved.

The cameramen were the first partially to recover, for the reflexes of craft in the true craftsman are almost independent of thought. Through the open windows they began to wind away.

The others, from being speechless, began all to talk at once. Expressions, less profane when in the nature of invocations, prayers for understandings burst forth in a chorus:

"What is it? What do you know about it? Is it real? Or make believe—why out here, of all the lonely, God-forsaken spots—Dive on it, John. Let's have a closeup—and see how it's done—and what's the reason for it?"

Flint spiraled down for 500 feet. Lower than that he was determined not to go. His alert mind grasped instantly the enormous publicity value of this exquisite mystery that bloomed serenely from the topaz shoals surrounding it and merging into the hazy blue of distance beyond.

He realized that the first reports, the first depiction of this lovely enigma must be infinitely more sensational as long as it remained such and its moving spirit incognitio. There would be immediately a clamor of curiosity and the secret of this brilliant bouquet, floating, as it were, in an unvisited waste of waters, promptly discovered and revealed. But in the meantime it would have roused nation-wide interest and speculation, and the practical business side of Flint's brain fastened immediately on a way in which he could use the power of this unsaid publicity to the benefit of Narcissa and of himself, individually and dually.

For him now to yield to the frenzied importunings of his party of passengers that he make a landing to discover what this was all about, would be, Flint instantly perceived, to spoil everything, or at least seriously to damage it. He did not intend that his crowd should see the inner workings. From their altitude and angle of observation the floral design merged its architectural and garden salients with no perceptible change of key. Even through their binoculars the observers could not discover how it was done any more than they could imagine why it had been done out there in that bright water wilderness. They were not even able to determine that the focal points in the design were habitable buildings and that they were surrounded by perfectly practical terraces and flower beds and verandas and snowy shell paths. The very size of the design was baffling because there was visible no familiar object of known dimensions to serve as a gauge. There was not even a boat, although there was a jetty that might have been anything from a wharf to a rowboat landing. Most intriguing of all was the absence of any sign of human tenantry. No person was visible in gardens and the roar of their plane, directly overhead, the first of its kind perhaps to pass over that region, did not get so much response as a small dog to run out and yap up at them.

This utter absence of any sign of life on Miraflores cay puzzled Flint at first. He had expected a wave from Narcissa and that she might even count on his landing. But the absence of the schooner and any small boat at all indicated one of two things. Either Narcissa had for some reason been obliged to leave just then or else her artistry suggested to her that her work was bound to be much more effective under precisely such conditions as were here, beheld from above as a cluster of titanic flowers or tiny ones floating alone on a solitary sea.

Flint's passengers were storming at him above the racket of the engines: "For God's sake land, John. We want to get a closeup," the newspaper and cameramen raged at him. But Flint merely shook his head and, without getting more than 45 degrees from a perpendicular above the island, banked and started to spiral aloft.

He shouted in the ear of one of them who seemed disposed to drag him off his seat and take the pilot's place himself: "We're too heavy. She isn't lifting like she ought. Engine's not giving good enough. Might have trouble getting up again. Besides, we're late."

This was all entirely untrue, but there was no immediate means of proving it. There may also have been a suspicion that Flint knew more about the business than he chose at that moment to reveal; that here was a surprise in the nature of a feature to the voyage. Tourists will ride a long way to look at a waterfall, visit a cavern, an ancient ruin, the rose garden of an estate or a single masterpiece by a famous painter. Why not then such a spectacle of beauty as this below? Very likely Flint had been holding out on them and now intended to keep them guessing for a while. So it was without much conviction that his principal backer and good friend heard him shout: "We want to be smack on schedule time this first trip. Best keep going. The boys have got an eyeful to start with."

Therefore, at an altitude of a thousand feet above Miraflores cay, Flint put his ship on her course again and presently the bright little island was a fleck of color on the horizon, this time astern. The party was silent, thoughtful and the reporters writing busily. Here was something to describe beyond what was now the almost stereotyped story of a new venture in commercial air traffic that was each day becoming more hackneyed and attracting lessened interest.

Here was mystery, matter for conjecture and further investigation. There is nothing the public so craves as to be mystified and await eagerly for the solution, to get the why and who and how come.

But Flint, as he rushed through the high air away from this brilliant success of the girl he loved, was not entirely at ease about it all. There might be good reason for it, but at the same time there was for him a disquieting note in the absence of anybody at all on Miraflores cay, or so much as a rowboat fast to their jetty. Well, Narcissa must have her good and sufficient reasons for giving no signs of life. Perhaps, for the sake of the very effect that had so moved the observers, she had sent away the schooner for the day and had been watching the plane from under cover. Flint reflected that he might have dropped a message, but he had not wanted to admit that this oasis in the desert sea was known to him.

The promoter part of his mind, which is to say his business imagination, presently engaged itself with the consideration of how to make the most of all this, and little by little the plan of campaign unfolded itself.

First, there was Narcissa's father to consider. Flint had learned a good deal about Cornelius Vandersee and his business and generally a plan of attack in this quarter developed itself. Flint could imagine the various reactions Cornelius might be expected to experience—amazement, incredulity, possibly some resentment at what his daughter had put over. He had supposed her to be wintering quietly on a Bahama island under the capable chaperonage of his old sailing master and a sensible woman who had occupied the position of librarian in his home town and whose personality was sufficiently well known to him. Cornelius was aware of his daughter's liking for the sea and boats and no doubt he had pictured her as fishing and bathing and cruising about and occupying herself with her painting and modeling. At first he might be a little aghast to find her suddenly famous over night. But Flint would make it his own particular business that Cornelius should immediately perceive the enormous advertising value of her departure in its relation to his own construction business. This could be managed without Flint's seeing Cornelius at all. As soon as the first reports were published and world news actualities pictures screened, Flint would give a press interview to explain everything. He smiled to himself as he directed and steadied the splendid big fabric on its rushing course. At the same time he was almost appalled at the amazing perfection with which his ambitions and Narcissa's had worked out and coincided without flaw or hindrance and so far beyond what either of them would have dared to count upon.

Human life and human effort was scarcely ever like this, Flint reflected, and he was smitten through with a sort of superstitious awe. Where was the catch in it, the fly in the amber, the wild joker in the pack? It was all the more like fiction than fact, more like a dream than reality. He wondered if there might not be some sort of rude awakening ahead. What if Narcissa had received word that her father had dropped dead of a stroke or some other catastrophe to submerge her triumph.

Well, such reflections were morbid and so far unwarranted. After all there was no law of God or man against success, happiness, fruition. So why should they not reap the rewards of inspiration backed by months of grinding work. It must have been the hardest sort of effort to devise and plan and work out that island chef d'oeuvre and Flint, too, had combated difficulties and disappointments. And he could not yet be by any means assured that the venture was going to prove a commercial success. He had felt by repercussion the discomfort even of his party of friendly boosters and backers when for a couple of hours there had been nothing but open water beneath.

Then his thoughts went to Narcissa and only Narcissa, the joy of seeing her again in the near future, and of the wonder of her and of the fact that whatever happened she was his and he was hers.

Cornelius Vandersee seated himself at his breakfast table and reached for his morning paper, if the vast compendium of information on every topic imaginable compiled in the Sunday edition of a leading American daily can be called so casually.

happened during the depression in 1921 that the workers in our West Lynn, Mass., plant voluntarily taxed themselves 1 per cent of their weekly wages to provide a relief fund for their fellow employes out of jobs. This struck me as a fine instance of fellow human feeling and really gave me the thought that if we were ever to come to some method of ameliorating the hardships of unemployment all of the people who were working would be glad to help those who were less fortunate, and especially if at the same time they saw the company, as such, would co-operate and contribute.

"Well, all this set me to thinking along new lines about ways and means of helping all our employes to help themselves and one another in times of unemployment. So we drew up a tentative plan and submitted it to the employes in a number of shops, and they turned it down. You see, this illustrates our confirmed policy that we do not want to do something to our people or for our people but to work with them and by them for the best interests of all. In this case unless 60 per cent of the employes voted for it, it was not to be put into effect in that shop or department of the business. It was in 1925, at a time when, you remember, business was very good, that this plan was turned down.

"It may have been the psychology of good times that led to the adverse vote then. But several months ago I got out the old papers and went over the whole thing again, and after discussion it was once more submitted to the works council in each plant in substantially the same general form as in 1925. If the council went on record in its favor it was then submitted to the employes. Only when 60 per cent voted in its favor did it go into effect. In some plants the vote ran 100 per cent and the average of all the plants has been 79 per cent in its favor.

"Of course, there are a great many details to the plan, every one of which has been worked over and over again, and it is, of course, only in its trial stage. We do not yet know how it will work. We cannot theorize; we must experiment, and we are frankly trying an experiment. The essentials of the plan are comparatively simple. The idea is first to raise a fund by contributions of 1 per cent of the weekly earnings of each employe where the plan has been accepted. This is matched with an equal contribution by the company, which means, of course, that the stockholders contribute as much as do the employes.

"The company guarantees 5 per cent interest on the fund and pays all administrative costs for the first two years. The administration of the plan in each plant is in the hands of a committee, half of which is elected by the employes and half by the management. In case a man is laid off for more than two weeks he is entitled to have half of his full time weekly earnings for a period of ten weeks, the maximum payment being $20 a week. There are provisions for emergency contributions, which are made by all employes from the president down, and the company matches any emergency contribution by an equal amount. This is only a sketch in the rough. I might mention that The Survey magazine made quite an extensive investigation of the plan recently through personal interviews with the men, and the weight of opinion among the men was decidedly to the effect that the plan was worth while trying.

"Our hope for this plan lies in our belief that it will work in the direction of giving the workers a feeling of greater peace that comes from security. We are thinking much along these lines in these days and the latest experiment we are trying was announced only today—whereby in 1931 we are guaranteeing 50 weeks of not less than 30 hours each week in our incandescent lamp department. In this department we are dealing with a standardized product not subject to deterioration, and therefore we can keep a steady production throughout the year by manufacturing lamps during the summer months, when the demand is not so great, for sale in the fall, when the days are shorter and therefore the demand for lamps is greater.

"Of course, we have a number of other general policies for stabilizing employment which I might list as follows:

"When business is increasing:

1. Add new employes as slowly as possible.

2. Transfer from slack to busy departments.

3. Use overtime where possible rather than hire new workers.

4. Postpone repairs and plant renewals.

"When business is decreasing:

1. Cease hiring at once.

2. Cut out all overtime.

3. Increase transfer from slack to busy departments.

4. Try to induce customers to buy for future delivery.

5. Make careful two-year plan on all standard goods based on last three years' average sales.

6. Bring all stocks everywhere up to maximum.

7. Make needed repairs, using our own men.

8. Build new plant facilities previously planned, using our own men.

9. Drop new employes first, beginning always with unmarried employes with no dependents.

10. Inform all employes whether lay off is permanent or temporary.

"Along the same lines of giving a greater sense of peace and security to the minds of the workers, plans have been worked out in the company for life insurance, where the company and the employes both contribute; also plans of assistance to the employe by the company in building homes, providing facilities for stable and sound investment of their savings, where the men also take part in the management of the company, and also a pension plan for their old age, where again the man as well as the company contributes.

"I might emphasize in conclusion that these plans are neither revolutionary nor unique, but they are evidences of the fine spirit and sense of responsibility of an organization. I think we see an additional evidence of this responsibility for the other man that is laying hold of the business world by the way this present depression has reacted upon the community in general.

"To me the most gratifying thing about the present unemployment situation is the way that it has developed and aroused public conscience. Never before have all classes rallied so generally and loyally to lend a hand. I have never in my experience known businessmen so ready to leave their offices and sit up nights, if necessary, attending meetings to help solve the situation.

"Not only this, but all the way from the humblest man who has a job up to the executive, instead of, as heretofore, 'letting George do it,' everybody, young and old, rich and poor, is trying to help. I think this is the most hopeful sign of this depressing time and the best assurance we could have that out of it better machinery and better methods to prevent its recurrence, or to handle it should it recur, will likely be developed."

hunters and Stewart's boy had settled to sleep, Sublett told Stewart that he was going to his gold mine at the point of the Guadalupes. He said that while riding along that day he had realized as never before how old he was and that he had decided positively never to make another trip after gold. "I have always declared that the secret would die with me," he said, "but now that I have met up with you out here I somehow want to take you with me and show you the mine."

Stewart replied that he would not think of leaving the men, who were depending on him for guidance in that wild country.

When Sublett set out next morning, however, Stewart did accompany him "as far as the top of a blue mound toward the west." Here Sublett halted and, while Stewart looked through a long spyglass, tried to show him where the mine was located, asserting at the same time that such long-range directions would never be of any use. He said that he would be back in three days.

The third day, just after dark, he drove into camp. As soon as supper was over and the hunters had bedded down, Stewart asked, "What luck did you have?"

For answer Sublett picked up a dried deer hide and put it, flesh side up, on the ground, where the low fire cast a light over it and also where some boxes of provisions hid it from the eyes of any man who might be awake on his pallet. Then he poured nuggets out on it from a tobacco sack of the 15-cent size, which was jammed full of gold.

In the morning Sublett left. He had gathered his last nuggets. The next that Stewart heard of him he was dead. Stewart soon afterward attempted to find the mine, but failed.

Sublett's death occurred in 1892. He was buried in Odessa, a little too far away from the Guadalupes to realize his wish for a grave within sight of them. Certainly, however, he left behind him something to talk about. In the wide, wide lands of the Pecos, from its mouth far down on the Rio Grande to old Fort Sumner in New Mexico, there is hardly a town, a squatter's cabin or a rancher's home in which the story of Sublett's mine has not been told. Prospectors by the score have looked for it, and prospectors as well as many men who are not prospectors are still looking for it.

He Stopped Whiskey!

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town;
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown.
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more,
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

We're Safe and Happy Now—because mother found a way to stop papa's whiskey drinking.

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT,
(As sly as sly could be)
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.
And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.
And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.
"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Thee GOLDEN TREATMENT.

Hands Across the China Sea

Japan Is Penetrating China, but the Maneuver Is One of Peace—a Commercial Venture in Charge of Business Men Who Plan To Be Waiting at the Door When Their Huge Neighbor Regains Political and Economic Stability and Starts Large-Scale Buying

By Earl Chapin May

Author of "Just Circus People," "2,000 Miles Through Chile," Etc.

A GROUP of important Japanese militarists was gathered about a conference table at Tokyo one spring day in 1928. The meeting was informal, but of great importance. From Shanghai a well-organized army of Chinese was marching northward against the anti-nationalist war lords who had set up a provisional government at Peiping. Tsinan, capital of the Province of Shantung, with its large colony of Japanese businessmen, lay directly in their path.

The Japanese militarists were discussing the advisability of sending a Japanese army into Shantung to protect their nationals. An American newspaperman was called in.

"What do you think of our sending a small force into Shantung?" they asked him.

"What for?" the hard-boiled news merchant countered.

"To keep the nationalist army out of Tsinan and thus protect our nationals," one of the group explained patiently.

"How large an army do you think you'll need?" the correspondent asked.

"Not a very large one—say 6,000 to go to Tsinan and 4,000 to protect Tsing-tao. We don't need many to clean them up."

"Don't do it. Don't send any army at all into Shantung," the correspondent warned them. "I've just come from China and I can tell you that the nationalist army will lick your army and will kill a lot of Japanese. Then the Chinese will declare a trade boycott that will cost you plenty. If you'll take my advice, you'll tell your nationals to move out of Tsinan to Tsing-tao until the nationalist army is back south again."

But the Japanese did not believe him. The army was sent to Tsinan, where the nationalists gave it a beating. Then the 400,000,000 Chinese, who had been warring with each other for quite a while and were still engaged in armed civil conflict, unanimously agreed on a Japanese boycott. In spite of miserable roads through most parts of China, in spite of the relative scarcity of telegraph lines and radio, the news of the Japanese invasion and consequent boycott promptly spread through the confines of China. And all the Chinese just as promptly refused to buy anything Japanese that was offered for sale.

Before that boycott was lifted Japanese business had taken a loss of many millions of dollars. It also had taken umbrage at Japanese militarists.

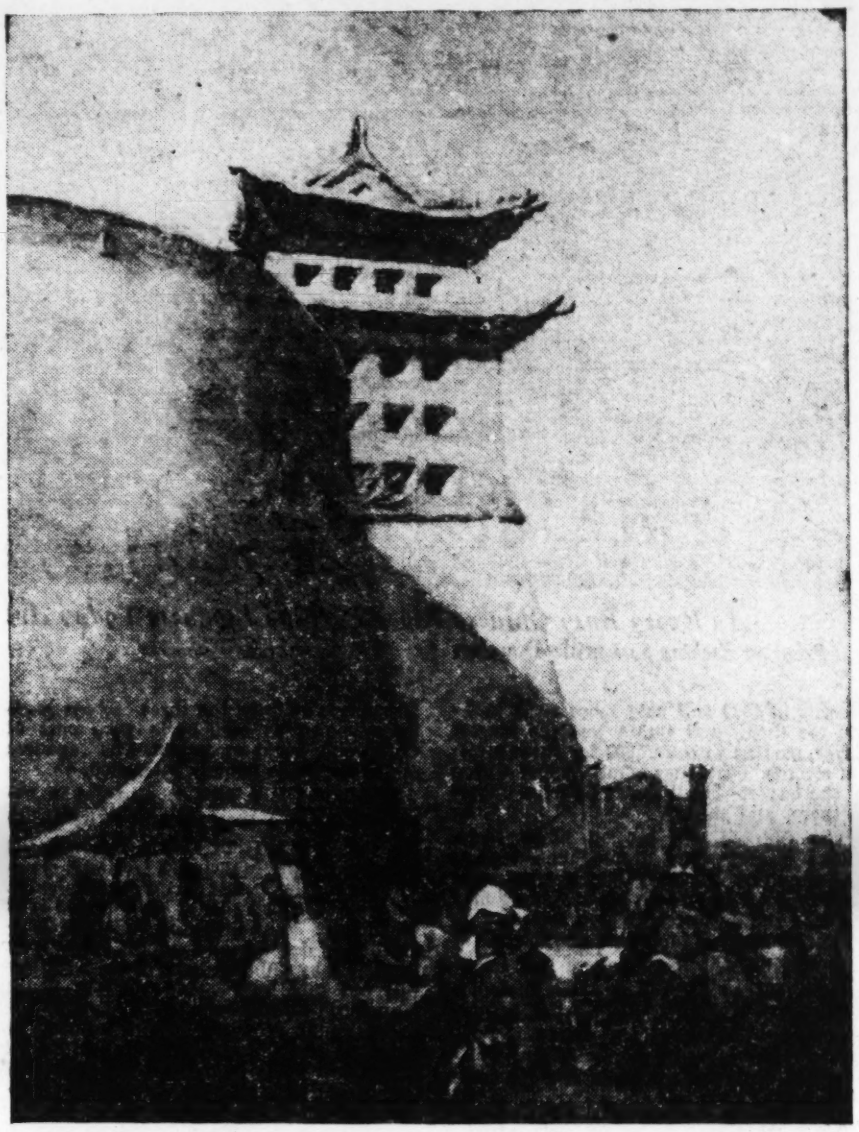

Perhaps you noticed a press dispatch from Hankow last summer which described the approach of a body of southern-born fighters opposed to the nationalist or Nanking government. "As a result," the dispatch said, "Hankow is being placed under an extremely heavy guard. In the Japanese concession, too, preparations are under way to provide for an emergency. Rear Admiral Yonai, commander of the Japanese-China squadron, who arrived this morning aboard the warship Ataka, is personally in charge of the defense of the concession district in conjunction with Japanese consular officials."

About the same time you may have noticed another dispatch from Tsinan stating that revolutionary troops had invaded Shantung and that the Japanese consul was asking for guaranties that the fighting would not include the Japanese concession. Something also was said about transferring Japanese police from the Shantung railway to Tsinan.

But nothing was said about an army arriving from Japan.

For Japan had learned her lesson. Since the 1928 invasion of Shantung there has been a change in the personnel at official Tokyo, a change which puts a party pledged to only peaceful trade penetration of China in charge of the nation's military policy.

Japanese are particularly clever at learning a lesson—often much cleverer than most Americans, though we learned a good lesson during the joint expedition from Tientsin to Peiping (then Peking) during the Boxer uprising. Looting by troops other than those from the United States and Japan was so general that we will never participate in another joint expedition into China. We cannot afford to keep such company. Neither can Japan, for the very same reason. And the boycott of 1928 taught Japan that peaceful penetration is more economical.

The Peking Wall—No Such Barrier Now Hinders China's Trade

While sailing last summer from Nagasaki, Japan, to turbulent Shanghai, I met a cultured young Japanese gentleman named Denjiro Kumura, who told me, in English, that he published the "Kiyashigu Shinbun" at the city of Kumamoto, capital of Higo province and not far from Nagasaki. In addition to getting out his daily paper, Mr. Kumura was interested in various lines of business.

"I am going to China," he said casually, "as one of 40 representatives of the Kumamoto Chamber of Commerce."

Kumamoto has a population of about 65,000. I attended a meeting of the chamber of commerce on board ship the next morning. It was conducted much as are our own chamber of commerce meetings. The 40 delegates were bound for China to encourage an exchange of commodities between the two countries which got into trouble over the Tsinan expedition.

This chance contact with the Kumamoto Chamber of Commerce delegation was one of many evidences offered me, during a Far Eastern tour, of a desire to harmonize Japanese and Chinese commercial interests. The Kumamoto tour was but one of many similar business boosting tours that are constantly being made by the Japanese through all parts of China. Thus is Japan carrying on her peaceful penetration.

On the way to China I met Mr. Walter R. Dockrill, president of the Canadian Trading Company. Mr. Dockrill has been selling Canadian lumber in Shanghai for a decade. In Shanghai he led me along the busy bund with its junks, sampans and warships and its banking buildings, which would look quite at home in Wall Street. The cries of the Chinese stevedores appealed to me.

"What are they saying?" I asked my friend.

"Search me!" he answered, "I can't speak a word of Chinese. It takes a lifetime to learn the language. I transact all my business through a comprador."

And in so doing he followed a general practice among Occidental businessmen in the Orient. A comprador is a Chinese middleman who arranges all sales or purchases and guaranties the accounts. Most of them have large bank balances and are reliable, but sometimes a comprador is kidnaped and held for ransom. This and other commonplace accidents sometimes slow up business transactions considerably, yet nearly every Occidental businessman believes he cannot get along without the comprador system.

After I had returned from China to Tokyo I attended a farewell luncheon at the Tokyo Club given by the American-Japan Society to its president, Prince Tokugawa, who was about to sail for America. The Japanese gentleman who sat at my left was a prominent Tokyo newspaper publisher. We naturally talked about troubled China.

"How are your businessmen getting along over there?" I inquired.

"They are doing a great deal of peaceful penetrating," he replied promptly and positively.

"But," I remonstrated, "conditions in China are very bad, not only on account of civil war, but because silver is way below its normal value."

"In spite of which, he insisted, "Japanese firms are in a strong position, largely because they have learned how to do business with the Chinese directly and without the intervention of a comprador."

Another example of the thoroughness with which Japan is now carrying on her policy of peaceful commercial penetration of China!

Japanese trade is also penetrating China by extending home country hospitality. During the Far Eastern Olympic games in Japan the Chinese participants were treated royally—which is another way of shaking hands across the China sea.

What has been the result of all this peaceful penetration?

Japanese ships go to all parts of the world. You will invariably find them at every port in China, clear to the upper reaches of the Yangtze river. At every important Chinese trading center, and at many a trading center that is only potentially important, you will discover Japanese storekeepers, agents for Japanese shipping concerns and manufacturers, Japanese official or semi-official representatives of their agricultural and commercial departments.

If Japan finds China is taking the market away from her in low grade cotton goods she either goes into China, where labor is cheaper, or she specializes in the higher grades with which she is better equipped by experience and with machinery to meet competition.

Japan has 6,000,000 spindles working in her own territory, which gives her seventh place among the spinning countries of the world. But she also has nearly 1,000,000 spindles in Shanghai, 250,000 in Tsin-tao, 75,000 in Manchuria, 25,000 in Hankow and 26,000 in Woosung. All told, nearly 40 per cent of the spindles in China are under Japanese ownership or management, though the laborers are Chinese.

The millions of dollars she has invested in China is only the humble beginning of what she has set out to do. Japan is dificient in iron ore resources, so she has to import most of the iron for her own steel mills. She imports nearly ten times the amount she produces, and 70 per cent of this comes from China, with which Japan has a special contract.

While I was in the Far East Japan and China negotiated a new tariff treaty which gave China complete tariff autonomy in return for which China agreed to abolish the annoying and frightfully expensive likin and transit taxes by which goods in transit can be taxed progressively as they move along. Japan enjoys the most favored nation treatment and there is a reciprocal treatment for various Japanese commercial and industrial commodities and for a few Chinese raw materials.

Since the World War China, with one-fourth of the world's population, has become the world's greatest undeveloped market, and any country seeking a Far Eastern foothold must reckon with this biggest of all nations. Japan, nearest of all the world powers to China, has the greatest interest there.

Since 1913 China, next to the United States, has been the most important country in Japan's program for foreign trade development of exports. In imports China has been rivaled only by the United States and British India. Japan is more dependent for economic existence on the extension of foreign trade than any other world power, with the exception of Great Britain. Japan has been forced by the steady increase of its population to turn from agriculture to manufacturing. And thus the presence of those 400,000,000 potential purchasers of manufactured goods that make up the population of nearby China takes on an additional importance.

From 1902 until civil war disrupted business in the Chinese republic, Japanese exports to and imports from all China steadily increased in both value and quantity, until Japan purchased nearly one-fourth of all Chinese exports and supplied nearly as much of China's imports.

It was during the World War that Japan made her greatest strides in China. Germany had built the important Shantung railway in 1904. It was constructed not only to give Germany's private Chinese port, Tsing-tao (then known as Kiao-chow and occupied by Germany under a 99-year lease), access to north-and-south railway transportation in China, but also because close to the 250 miles of standard gauge roadbed were large deposits of coal and iron. So the Germans built short branches to the Tzuchuan Colliery, where a coal seam with an average thickness of 18 feet underlies a large area, and to Tien-shan, where about 80,000,000 tons of good iron ore were available. These investments and activities were covered by a German-Chinese agreement.

When Japan threw her World War lot in with the allies she not only threw Germany out of Tsing-tao, but she also took over the Shantung railway and its mining properties and ran them, profitably, until Tsing-tao and the railway and mines were given back to China in accordance with the Washington conference of 1922.

But this did not mean the end of Japanese influence in Tsing-tao. In that German-built city today about 20,000 of the 54,000 residents are Japanese. Silk filatures, cotton spinning wheels, egg albumen factories and former German breweries are in the hands of Japanese. At Tsinan, at the western end of the Shantung railway, about 2,500 Japanese reside. Most of them are engaged in business.

Because of the generally low scale of living in China and the poverty prevailing in most of its provinces there is a popular conception that Chinese have too little buying power to bother them. Facts show this conception to be erroneous.

The three cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang, about 1,500 miles up the Yangtze river, are near the center of China proper. The Yangtze is the great artery of trade through this center, being nearly two miles wide at Hankow. The three cities have a native population of 1,300,000, but Hankow is known as "The Chicago of China" because it is the collecting point for nine well-to-do provinces; that is, well-to-do when ravaging revolutionist and communist armies stay away from them.

Important armed forces opposed to established government are likely to descend on Hankow because it has steel mills financed by British interests; a Chinese electric light and water plant; cotton mills managed by Chinese and a match factory in the Japanese concession. Hankow is rich picking for all looters. Thirty-five prominent foreign firms have offices there. Great Britain, Russia, France and Japan do business from their concessions.

Ask these foreign firms whether China's buying power is too small to bother about, and they will point to the tobacco company which developed a profitable Chinese market for cigarets by an extensive system of free sampling. They will call your attention to the surprise parties that China has pulled. For instance, the Orient bought 1,770,000 American-made talking machine records in 1929 and paid more than $750,000 for them—and China was the biggest buyer, parting with $227,000 for these musical records. That, they admit, is just a drop in the bucket—but it shows that the bucket is there, and thirsty.

The Chinese will bet on horse races, smoke cigarets, buy gramophone records and anything else they like if they want to, no matter how much poverty there may be. And the Japanese are too smart to go to sleep on such a promising market.

It may be that the Japanese lack imagination, but no one can question their determination and thoroughness once they set a task for themselves. They are abnormally proud and abnormally sensitive—but they can sit silent under adverse criticism if they have to.

At a luncheon given in Peiping by Mr. Kao Chi-yi, managing director of the Chinese-British owned Peiping-Mukden railway, the United States was represented by several writers, while Japan was represented by four couriers. Mr. Kao made the formal address of welcome. His text was that in spite of the Japanese-owned South Manchuria railway, the three eastern provinces known as Manchuria were part of China and would so remain. The Japanese sat at the table politely interested.

Manchuria is a sore spot to Japan because she got a large slice of it by treaty but lost it again—all save a lease on the narrow South Manchuria railway zone, which will lapse not many years hence. Manchuria, which should have been a land of promise to millions of Japanese emigrants, is densely and almost exclusively populated by Chinese. None of these settlers will sell any land outside of the South Manchuria railway zone to a Japanese. The seller would promptly lose his head, by order of the Chinese government. So all Japan can do is to make a lot of money out of her railway zone, as common carrier, miner and manufacturer.

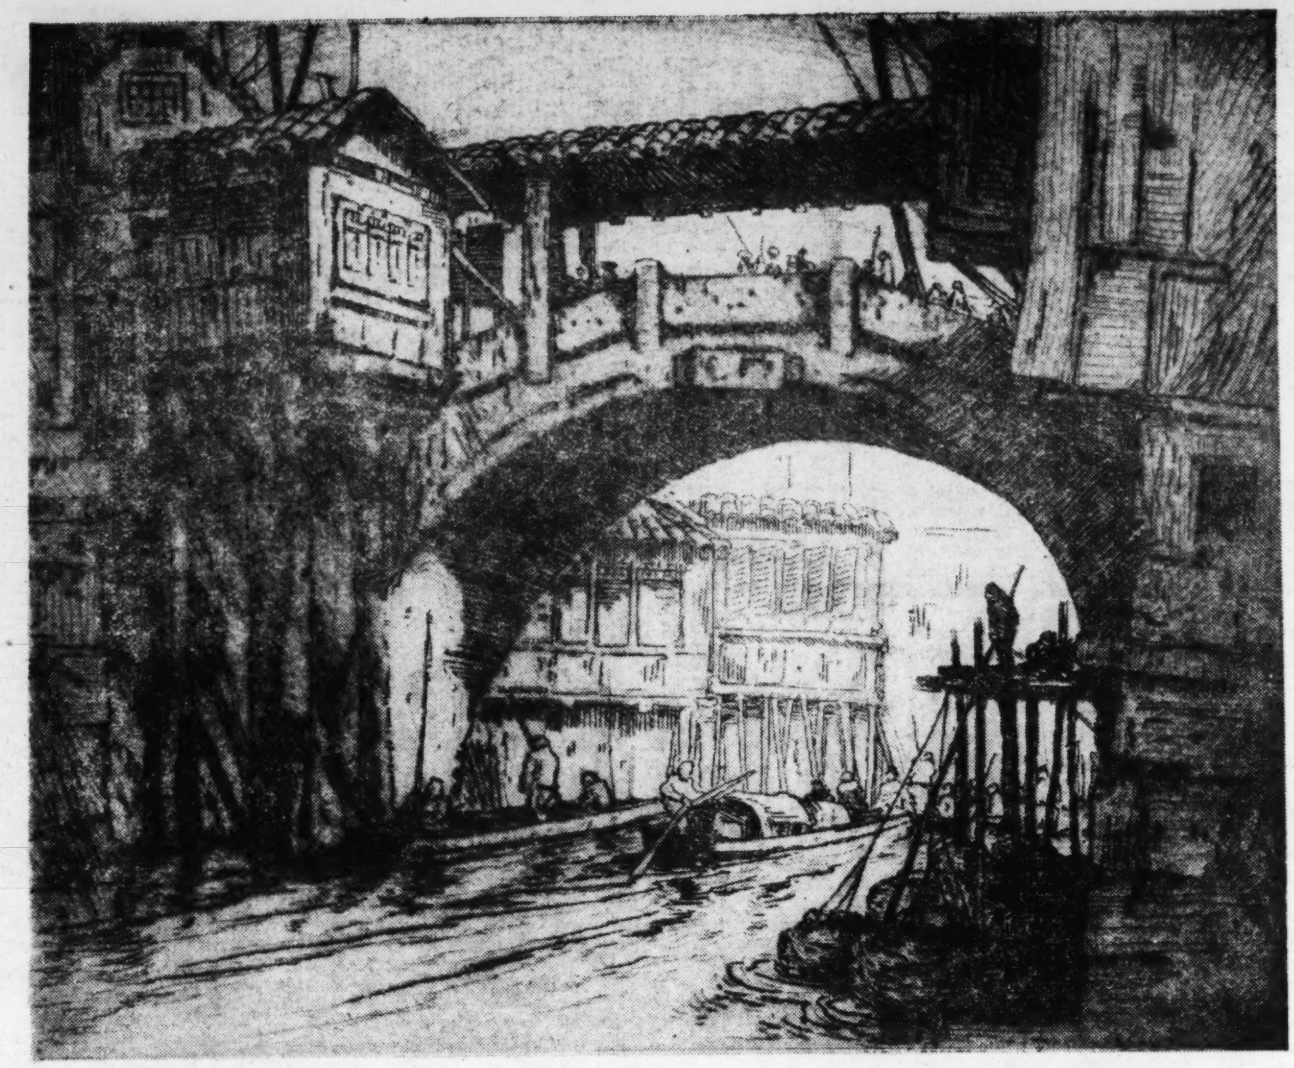

Recently Soviet Russia has been making what appears to be attempts to destroy Japanese influence in Manchuria by fomenting trouble with Mongolia. The soviet controls outer Mongolia—that part of the vast, windy, sparcely populated region north of the bleak Desert of Gobi—and has cut off Mongolian trade with China, to send it via the Trans-Siberian railway.

Japan has firmly stated its position, but has not strengthened its military establishment in Manchuria. Instead, it officially recognizes the soviet government. And from Japan, as from the United States, France and Germany, technical experts have gone to the soviet's assistance.

If the cross-currents in Mongolia and Manchuria plunge China and Russia into war, Japan probably will preserve its neutrality. But Japan is not going to add to the difficulties of her neighbor—she is more inclined to smooth them down when such an opportunity is offered.

For today Japan realizes more keenly than ever before that whereas China is the world's greatest potential market, she cannot begin to buy more merchandise until she gets better transportation and settles her interior and exterior difficulties.

If and when the 400,000,000 Chinese really do get down to purchasing in quantity, Japan will be on the doorstep, ready to take orders from the samples shown by her trade missionaires, who today are found in all parts of China.

THE LUCKY MAN

more than that phrase, spoken in her clear, well-bred voice. It was somehow so young; the old house behind him, all that dim old world, receded into nothingness. The rain pelted down on his uncovered head, but he didn't mind that.

"I'm sorry now," she said. "I asked her for a week's salary in advance, because I—well, I wanted it. I might have known it would upset her. She couldn't help being—queer about money. She's never been poor, and she doesn't understand."

All his heart responded to her careless frankness, her lovely kindliness.

"I came back to get my gloves," she said. "Isn't it strange that we just happened to meet again—like this?"

"No," he said. "I think it—had to be this way."

Again he saw her color mount.

"Well," she said, "I guess I'd better be——"

"Don't go away!" he cried. "I've—— You can't imagine what an idiotic mistake I've made! You see, my aunt was talking about 'Caroline,' and I thought it was you."

"She must have meant Mrs. Morris."

"She did! But I thought you were Mrs Morris. And you see, I had rather a row wtih my aunt—about her will, and I though it would be a good chance for you—when I thought you were Caroline, you know—to go and make her peace with the old lady. So I telephoned to you—to her, and advised her to go, and I asked you to dinner. It was you I wanted to ask. Won't you come to dinner with me?"

"Yes, thanks," she said, promptly.

He took the umbrella from her, and held it carefully over her head, shortened his stride to suit her step.

"When you—saw me this afternoon," he asked, "did you—I mean—did it—make any impression on you?"

"I thought you looked rather nice," she said, with restraint. Then, impulsively, she added, "And now I know you're nice! To do a thing like that for poor Mrs. Morris."

"It wasn't for Mrs. Morris," he said. "It was meant to be for you."

They went on in silence for a moment.

"You know," she said, "for you to—just happen to come now—when I was so worried and miserable. It's——"

"It's destiny!" he assured her. "I knew I'd see you again."

Suddenly she clutched his sleeve.

"But what were you doing there?" she cried. "Weren't you waiting?"

"I was!" he said, horrified. "I was waiting for Caroline."

"Then you've got to go back."

"Well, I won't!" he said flatly. "I'm not going to leave you now."

"I'll meet you another time——"

"No!" he said.

"O, dear!" she cried. "How obstinate you are!" But his obstinacy evidently did not displease her. "Well," she said, "shall I come with you and Caroline?"

He agreed to that and they turned back. They had scarcely reached the corner when the door of the old house opened and a lady came out. For a moment she was clearly visible in the light from the hall behind her, a plump, fair-haired little person, modishly dressed. As she came down the steps Cowan advanced to meet her, but she did not recognize him.

"I'm George Cowan," he said.

She kissed him on the cheek and began to weep.

"I shall never forget this, my dear boy!" she said. "I've had the most beautiful talk with Aunt Eliza! So touching! She wants me to go to Atlantic City with her next week."

She dried her eyes with a small handkerchief.

"I haven't see you since you were a little boy in a sailor suit," she said. "And to think of your doing this for me!" She began to cry again a little. "I'm afraid you don't realize what a great sacrifice you've made, my dear boy! Aunt Eliza was expecting you to come back. I think it was really you she wanted. But, as you say, the poor soul really was lonely, and when it was I who came—George! Is that some one with you?"

"It's Miss James," he said, turning to look at the girl, who stood waiting on the corner. And he forgot to look away again.

"Then," said Caroline, "if you can possibly get me a taxi, my dear boy——"

"But you've promised to dine with me!" he said, smiling.

"But in the circumstances?" said she, archly.

"Please!" he said. "I want to celebrate. This is my lucky day."

When Justice Triumphed

they also found the blue sedan. But they missed Jake by ten minutes.

George De Moss recently was accused of a Tracy, Col., postoffice holdup.

Ralph Fleagle, a gray-haired, heavy-set man of 55, eldest son of old Jake, protested his innocence. The investigators were inclined to believe him, for the descriptions they had received did not at all agree with the description of the prisoner. However, nobody informed Ralph that he wasn't suspected, for the police hoped to reach young Jake through the brother, and with that idea in view they received Ralph's protestations with a firm air of skepticism.

Meanwhile old Jake and the other two sons, Walt and Fred, had been closely questioned. They refused to explain where they got the $50,000 deposited under a joint account in a Garden City bank. Later the police uncovered several other accounts, maintained under various names, in nearby cities. Yes, it had been an exceedingly profitable farm.

The authorities continued to press Ralph for a full explanation. They threatened to indict and prosecute the whole family if he didn't come clean. They pointed out to him that prejudice against the killers had become so pronounced that convictions were inevitable. If Ralph wished to save his own neck, he had better spill the whole story.

Finally the prisoner weakened. He would tell everything if the authorities would see that he didn't go to the gallows. Would they agree to that? The answer was that they would.

His story in substance was as follows:

"Early in May of 1928, my brother Jake, George Abshier and Howard Royston told me of their plan to rob the Lamar bank. Royston had inside information by which he could tell when the most money was kept in the bank.

"I had always taken a great interest in Jake; he was my favorite brother. I told him that the job was much too dangerous and it was foolish for him to even consider it. But he insisted, so finally I agreed to go with them and look over the lay of the land. I wasn't long in determining that it was a risky proposition, and I again tried to talk Jake and his friends out of the plan. But all my arguments were useless.

"We visited the place five times and made careful plans. Finally we decided on the day. We drove to the bank intent on injuring no one, but as soon as we got inside that old man grabbed his gun. It was his life or ours. Then that boy of his started shooting and we had to pop him, too.

"We took a road direct to a deserted ranch house 400 miles from Lamar, near Garden City, and stayed there six days. Then we hiked to Minneapolis and disbanded."

One gathers from this that Ralph Fleagle played almost a minor role in the whole business, but at the time the police were surprised to learn that he had even participated. It goes to show how eyewitnesses can err in furnishing descriptions. Until Ralph Fleagle admitted taking part in the robbery, the police had not the faintest idea that he had been anything more than an interested behind-the-scenes worker.

As a result of Fleagle's story, Royston and Abshier were promptly captured, Royston in California and Abshier in Grand Junction, Col.

Royston, as might be expected, put much of the blame on Ralph Fleagle, insisting that Ralph had been the one who slew Wineinger.

"We were scared to death as we hid in Fred's deserted ranch," he said. "Posses were all around us, so we decided to try to break through the lines and get to Minneapolis, where we had friends. We had nearly $250,000 and knew that if we could get out of this pinch we would be on easy street for life. But Ralph was afraid that Kessinger and the doctor would be able to tell too much, so he decided they would have to die."

He said Ralph ordered Kessinger to be brought before him.

"Get down on your knees," said Fleagle, according to Royston, "I'm going to blow your brains out!"

Kessinger dropped to his knees and pleaded for his life. He told Fleagle that he had a wife and baby, that they sorely needed his help and support. Fleagle fired while the man was speaking, said Royston.

"You're next!" Ralph told Dr. Wineinger, who had witnessed the slaughter. "Come here!"

The doctor did not speak nor move.

Then, said Royston, Fleagle went over to the physician and informed him that he was free. He untied the man's hands and told him to beat it. Then, as he started to walk away, Ralph fired.

Such, at any rate, was Royston's version. He may have laid it on a bit in a spirit of revenge against the man who had betrayed him. Royston was the one who had been shot in the bank.

The Lamar affair, it developed, had not been the only operation by any means. For ten years the Fleagles had ravaged that region, all the while posing as law-abiding citizens. The police said their loot must have totaled $1,000,000.

Royston and Abshier decided to throw themselves on the mercy of the court and pleaded guilty September 12, 1929. This availed them nothing, for they were promptly sentenced to death.

The trial of Ralph Fleagle, who had been assured that he would get no worse than life imprisonment, began October 22, 1929, and four days later the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree. When he, too, was sentenced to death, despite the promise made to him, the defense lawyers went into a high state of rage, insisted that the state keep its word, and called upon higher officials to save Fleagle from the gallows.

ARGUMENTS GO ON, BUT TO NO AVAIL.

Judge Holenbeck, the trial judge, refused to interfere. Most of the officials, however, thought that, since the state had given its word, the man's life should be spared.

Chief of Police Harper, who fought to spare Fleagle, was backed by Attorney General Smith of Kansas, W. D. Hemming, one of the richest bankers in Colorado; J. E. Mowry of Lane county, Judge L. L. Cunningham and many others.

Against this, Granby Hillyer, special prosecutor, and Malcolm Erickson, district attorney; argued that the state's hands were tied, that since making the agreement with Fleagle they had discovered that the law had no right to bargain with a criminal.

The argument raged for months, and in July, 1930, Abshier, Royston and Ralph Fleagle went to the gallows at Canon City.

That left young Jake still to be accounted for.

Unfortunately for this survivor of the Lamar robbery, the U. S. post office department was after him. This is always a bad break for a criminal. The postal inspectors thought Jake might have taken part in the robbery of a Southern Pacific mail train at Pittsburg, Cal., in June, 1929, and so the hunt did not relax.

By October the authorities knew several things about Jake. One was that he had a peculiar way of writing the letter "D". Another was that he made a practice of using the want ad columns of newspapers to communicate with other criminals.

Blind ads were placed in newspapers in and around Missouri, where Jake was hiding. Finally an answer came to an ad in a Springfield, Mo., paper. Through another advertisement the inspectors instructed Jake to meet some of his old pals at Branson, Mo. He took the hook. He was waiting on the station platform on the afternoon of October 14 when a train carrying five officers arrived.

The officers were E. H. Kline, California postal inspector; Harry Wilde and C. A. Lloyd, Los Angeles detectives, and E. L. Nelson and Orville King, of Kansas City.

Jake entered the car, got his orders to throw up his hands, and immediately reached for his own gun. A bullet in the stomach, however, interrupted his plans. He died a few hours later. His dying statement caused a jury to acquit Fred Fleagle of the robbery.

Incidentally, it was from a farm owned by Fred Fleagle that the gang set out, that day of the robbery. The police have tried to prove that Kessinger was slain there, but never succeeded in this. The most they could bring against Fred was that he had evaded the income tax law.

All together, it was a thorough cleanup, thanks to that fingerprint.

THE SAHARA BECOMES A PLAYGROUND

young man elegantly dressed, came up to me and asked in very presentable French what I was looking for. I told him that I was trying to find a place to sleep for myself and my friend, and that my friend was at the edge of town with the guide and the artillery.

Quickly he turned to one of his followers (there were some half a dozen) and said, in French, "Sidi Bou has no business stopping people of this sort. Go tell him to let them pass and bring Monsieur and the guide to the square." The retainer disappeared.

Then, turning to me, he added, "If you will come with me I will find a room for you." I thanked him and we set off. Around two corners, across a wide, dusty square, and my new friend was fumbling in the pocket of his haik for a key. He found it and opened a door, and we went into a large, spacious, tile-floored room, bare and unfurnished but spotlessly clean.

"Will this do?"

I assured him that it would, thinking meanwhile that we could curl up on the floor for the night. He turned to his servants and said quickly in Arabic something that I could not understand. They all went away. Then my friend arrived with the guide and the burros; we unpacked and paid the burro driver. And then the servants began to reappear. To our desert-weary eyes it was like a scene from the Arabian Nights. They brought beds and mattresses and tables and chairs and washstands and immaculate linen. And finally they set the table and produced from somewhere a marvelous dinner.

But once we were seated, the servants were not allowed to come near the table. Our new-found friend and his two brothers insisted in waiting on us themselves. And after we had eaten, the fourth brother, the caid of all the district south of Khenechela, called and invited us to lunch with him the following day. At his home it was the same story. He cut our bread, served our chicken and cous-cous, ate, after we had finished, from what was left. And he the caid of a region almost as large as Belgium!

After dinner he put on his deerskin coat and posed for some photographs. (I later sent him prints of these, together with a picture album —"The Wonders of New York." I received from him a note couched in the worst and most elegant French imaginable.) He pressed us to stay for several days, but our time was getting short and we told him, reluctantly, that we should have to push on to Biskra. So he gave us two horses and sent a guide with us on a third, recommending us, meanwhile, to the Caliph in the next town, Zeribet-el-Oued.

Many times, I hope, in the years to come, I shall follow dim trails to the far-off corners of the world. But never, I am afraid, will I see the desert as I saw it next day while on our way to Sidi Okba. For a fortnight I had been drinking of the waters of Africa; with anything like luck I shall go back, more than once, to drink of them again.

As a matter of fact I did go back—back to Africa at least. I reached Casablanca one morning early in February, with an idle fortnight on my hands and the old urge for out-of-the-ordinary travel as strong as ever. I proceeded to buy a racing bicycle from a second-hand dealer and set out for Oran, six hundred miles away.

I saw not only that very exquisite Morocco which the tourist sees—Rabat and Sale, facing one another like two white birds across a shallow weed-grown estuary; Rabat, garden-city of the old sultans; Sale, old pirate town, in which Cervantes and Robinson Crusoe were sold as slaves; Meknes, lovely, crumbling capital of Moulay Ismael; Fez, a green and white checkerboard, cupped in a valley between gray-green hills that roll back to the Middle Atlas; Tiemcen, "pearl of the Mohgreb," Sidibel-Abbes, home of the Foreign Legion —but I saw not only these, another Morocco as well. A Morocco of dark little bistros in which one can drink with the workers in the cork forests west of Meknes, of soldiers who ask you about American skyscrapers and will not believe you when you tell them, of pathetic, dust-covered upland gardens, watched over by lonely French colonists, of giant cedars that have been growing in the Atlas foothills for 500 years, of nomads who pitch their curious little woolen tents in fertile valleys overflowing with wild narcissus.

The byways of North Africa are indeed, as my friend told me seven years ago, adventurous byways.

The S. O. S. Recouble Has a Tremendous Value at the Right Time

By Shepard Barclay

OPPORTUNITIES for using the so-called informatory redouble—or S. O. S. redouble, as many term it—are not frequent in either auction or contract. When they do arise, however, it is a weapon of tremendous value in enabling a partnership to wind up in the best declaration for the combined hands.

An ideal situation for it arose recently in a hand dealt in a contract game to Mrs. Robert Byrns, one of the leading experts of northern New York state. She held the West hand in this situation:

Following a pass by South, she bid two hearts, under the forcing system, which North doubled informatorily. After East's pass, South made a business pass because of the heart strength and general weakness otherwise. Now came the big chance. Mrs. Byrns felt that game was almost sure if she could find out partner's longest suit, so redoubled. A redouble in this position, following the business pass of an informatory double, is an informatory redouble insisting on a reply from partner. North now passed rather than reveal his distribution, feeling that the opponents would be sure to wind up playing the hand and not caring which of the suits partner might lead. East now replied to the informatory redouble with three diamonds and Mrs. Byrns took it to five, which were made after some difficult play.

At auction the bidding would ordinarily be one heart by West, double by North, pass by East, business pass by South, informatory redouble by West, two clubs by North, pass by East, pass by South, informatory double by West, three clubs by North and three diamonds by East.

The jack of clubs would be the standard lead in either game, won by the ace. North would now put his ace on dummy's trump lead and return another trump, won by declarer. Another diamond would exhaust the hostile trumps, then the heart finesse of the ten would be absolutely necessary. It would work and three more heart leads would bring discards of two spades by declarer. After the ace of spades was cashed, another spade would put declarer in again by trumping, a club would now be ruffed in dummy and the third spade would be ruffed by declarer. Though the ten of spades would now be established in dummy's hand, there would be no way to get over and lead it, so a small slam could not be made.

If South avoids the standard lead and instead underleads his queen of spades because the partner's double indicated likely major strength, the game can not be made; two spade tricks and the ace of trumps would prevent it.

The Sage Says:

Bridgers don't care how much lighter and bigger golf balls are made, so long as nobody reduces the size of aces.

A Law a Week

Is it unethical or discourteous for a dealer to shuffle the cards just before dealing, after they have already been shuffled by the opponent at his left?

This has been a subject of frequent discussion. It has just been brought up again by a player who writes as follows:

"It has been my habit as dealer to shuffle the cards once or twice before passing them for a cut.

"The other evening my right was disputed—which the laws of course cover—but a player at another table spoke up, saying that I had the right to shuffle, but that it was against bridge etiquette and was discourteous.

"Some one even went so far as to say it was justified when playing with crooks.

In Love

Three rounds of play used up the hearts
  And next the spades all fell,
The two long cards brought two more tricks;
  He said: "Now all is well;
My contract's safe; they get the rest";
He grinned with glee at East and West.

"You lucky dog!" his foes replied,
  "You needed every break,
In playing hearts before the trumps—
  A crazy chance to take;
You surely should have got the bumps."
He sighed: "I thought that hearts were trumps."

"How the exercise of any right or privilege under the rules can constitute a violation of bridge etiquette or be an affront to any one is beyond me.

"I have read nearly every bridge book available, also each of your weekly articles, but I have yet to find any reference to this subject under etiquette.

"There is quite a bit of feeling over this and as a matter of simple right—or wrong, if I'm wrong—I would greatly appreciate an expression from you.

"If there is any discourtesy involved, I would like you to state what that discourtesy is and where it lies."

Such shuffling by the dealer is indeed his right under the laws. Doing it does not imply any question regarding the honesty of the opponent's shuffle, for the preamble to the laws expressly suggests ostracism as the only course when there is any question of honesty involved. Neither does it question the thoroughness of the opponent's shuffle. It may be merely for the purpose of providing an extra-thorough shuffle to produce different types of hands from those that have been running, or the dealer may merely be indulging a habit—or following what he considers a "lucky hunch."

It is a mistake for a player to object to such a shuffle, just as it would be a mistake for him to feel hurt when an opponent wishes to enforce a revoke penalty, feeling that the opponent is accusing him of revoking intentionally. To object in such cases is to reveal a lack of knowledge of the game. The experienced player intends no offense or discourtesy when he shuffles.

There is no denying the fact, however, that in some circles certain ideas have grown up which are out of harmony with the foundation of the game. One of these is the widely prevalent idea about such shuffling being a discourtesy. When we find ourselves in a group of people with a certain set of ideas, it is not always within our power to alter them, nor is it always wise to attempt to do so. It is sometimes easier and more considerate to conform to what we consider unsound ideas.

This question then simmers down to a matter of our definition of discourtesy. If running counter to the ideas of others and doing that which they consider discourteous is to commit a discourtesy, then shuffling the cards in such circumstances is discourteous. In fact, the doing of that which we know will offend some one—even though the offense be caused by the offender's lack of enlightenment—would be classed by many as not only discourteous but deliberately discourteous.

What occurs if the player who cuts the cards should also complete the cut by placing the original bottom portion of the deck on the top portion, instead of letting the dealer do it?

Contract Systems

What strictly contract type of bid has been universally adopted and now is in the systems of all expert players?

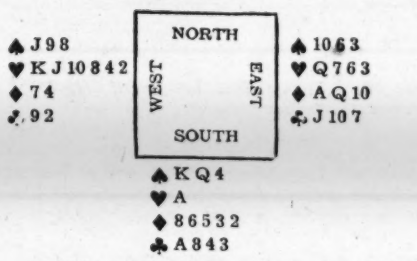

The "forcing takeout," sometimes called "jump shift," has been developed only since contract came into being, though it also would be useful in some auction situations. In the new game its value is tremendous when the partner of an original bidder holds enough additional strength to know that game is practically sure for the side at some declaration, there being doubt as to which one. This situation—game strength divided between the two hands — occurs much oftener than that in which game strength is bunched in one hand.

When the partner of an original bidder holds such strength, he proclaims it by bidding in some yet unbid suit one more than is necessary to overcall the bid which reaches him. The amount for this is generally described as about three honor tricks, quick tricks or high card tricks, though some players will do it with less strength if they possess a strong two-suiter or semi-two-suiter. When a player has that much strength, he knows the opponents cannot, at the outside, hold more than about three defensive tricks, for his partner in making the original bid has shown from two to two and a half, depending upon the system in use.

How much difference between systems is there in the strength required to bid one no trump over partner's original bid of one in a suit?

Auction Problems

How would you bid and play the following hand, South being the dealer?

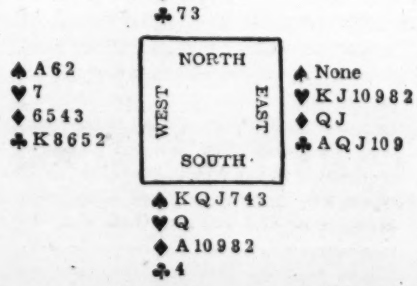

South's one no trump is the only bid to be made in auction. In contract, it would be the opener and North would jump to three or else force with three clubs, causing South to bid three.

West's lead is the top of touching honors in his honor combination of king-jack-ten in hearts, his jack. When South wins with his ace, he sees quickly that his sole chance for game is to run it before the adversaries get the lead again to cash their hearts. He counts his sure tricks—three in spades, the heart already won and three clubs, total seven. Two more are needed. He dare not seek them in diamonds, in which he must lose at least one trick before he develops any. His sole chance is to get a fortunate break in both clubs and spades, establishing a fourth-round trick in each.

First he should run the clubs, because his greatest chance of a good break lies there, since there are eight in the combined hands of the partnership. It happens that both suits break in this case, so he makes his game. Trying a finesse to build extra tricks should as a rule be the last resort of a player, after he has surveyed every other possible way to get the ones he needs.

The New Problem

How would you bid and play the following hand, South being the dealer?

Your Flower and Vegetable Garden

By W. Elbridge Freeborn

THE EARLY VEGETABLE GARDEN

IN TIMES of stress, whether it be from depression, war, or revolution there are two tendencies which are constantly at war. The first tendency is towards some background of security and safeness from which vantage point one may look upon the chaos or near chaos with safety. The other tendency is towards forgetfulness. This just a retreat so that the facts in the case will not be faced.

So we have already found from our correspondents that there is a decided trend toward vegetable gardens. Last fall we heard of numbers of new vegetable gardens that were being started for the first time.

The reasoning that goes on behind the beginning of gardens is perfectly sound. In most cases there is some ground available in the backyard or sideyard that is serving no productive purpose. With only a minimum of time and labor this plot may be put into service and from it there may be secured fresh, crisp, delicious vegetables for the table. After this garden is once in operation there comes a feeling of security regardless of what might happen.

Too, there is considerable economy in raising one's own vegetables. There is practically no cost involved. The only tools necessary are a rake, a hoe and one good back. A handful of seeds, a bit of fertilizer, a prayer for rain on the right days and all there remains to do is pick the vegetables.

There is a natural longing for working in the soil and making things grow that has been handed down to us through the ages until we often call it instinctive. In most cases our fathers, forefathers, even six fathers were all tillers of the soil.

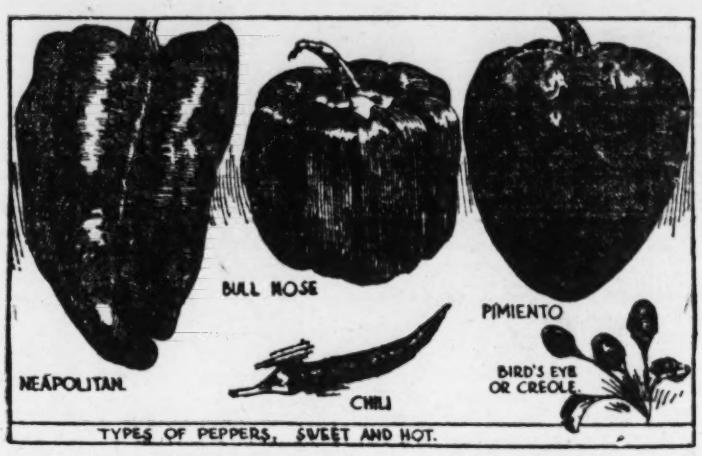

Regardless of the reason behind this desire to have vegetable gardens, there is this desire and it must be satisfied.

The problem that confronts us now is this—what can be done now to begin a good, successful, early vegetable garden?

ENGLISH PEAS

The first vegetable seed that goes into the vegetable garden is almost always the English pea. For the very first peas the smooth seeded varieties, such as Alaska, John L., or Early Bird are usually planted in this section for best results. The reason that these smooth seeded sorts are always planted first is that there is less chance for these smooth-seeded sorts to rot than for the wrinkled peas.

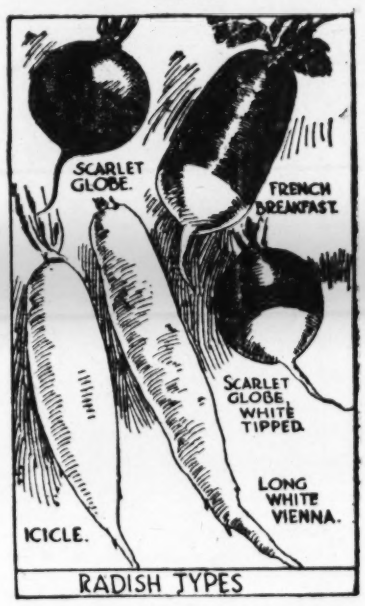

For these very early sorts the seeds should be covered about two inches. These three, Alaska, John L, and Early Bird are all three what might be called bush varieties and need not be staked or brushed. However, to keep the peas from lying on the ground they may be planted in double rows about eight to twelve inches apart.

TYPES OF PEPPERS, SWEET AND HOT.

For a later planting, to be made early in March or late in February, the later heavier-bearing varieties may be best used. The most widely planted late varieties are Telephone, Thomas Laxton and Bliss Everbearing. These three varieties are all the wrinkled sorts and should not be planted until the ground is fairly warm, or at least until danger of freezes is passed.

RADISH

RADISH TYPES

Radishes are a typical cool weather crop and may well be grown in the early spring garden. The universally planted variety is Rosy Gem. Rosy Gem is a round, red, white-tipped, early variety. It is the earliest of all varieties and several crops may be planted and matured before hot weather appears.

For best results radishes should be planted in loose, moist, rich, loamy soil. The crisp, tender flesh of early radishes depends almost entirely upon the quickness with which they mature.

For this rapid growth it is necessary that there be plenty of plant food in the soil for these spicy little fellows. On planting the seeds in the row use some good, high-grade, balanced fertilizer worked into the soil. Follow this once each week with a side dressing of this same fertilizer.

For a continuous supply of crisp and tender radishes plant them every ten days or two weeks throughout the spring. One ounce of seed will plant a row 100 feet long. The seeds should be covered with about one-half an inch of soil at planting. Ill-shaped roots are usually caused by planting in soil that is too stiff and heavy.

PEPPERS

The pepper is a hot weather lover and for that reason it seems strange to be thinking and talking about peppers at this time of the year. But for early peppers it will soon be time to start them in the cold frame, for planting out of doors at Easter time. The cold frame is much to be preferred to the hot house for this purpose as the cold frame will produce sturdier plants.

The peppers are particularly lovers of water, and for that reason it will be a good plan when placing them out into the garden to place them where they may be watered with as little trouble as possible. If it becomes necessary to water them during the spring or summer you may break one gardening rule to the peppers' advantage. The foliage may be sprinkled as well as watering the roots of the plant. The pepper is one of the few vegetables that is improved by watering of the foliage.

The main crop for general use is the sweet pepper, the sweet, or bell pepper, the flesh of which is sweet and mild and has no hot qualities. It is safest to plant the sweet and hot peppers on opposite sides of the garden. By doing this there is no danger of their crossing, and also avoids a greater danger, that of mistaking varieties and using a hot pepper for a sweet one. When in the green stage some varieties cannot be differentiated by a passing examination. Dropping a hot pepper into a stew or soup that needs a sweet one will make it worse than unfit for use.

Give the peppers plenty of room to grow. They may be planted 18 inches to two feet apart and even then the stronger sorts will meet in the row.

There are a number of sweet peppers that are perfectly satisfactory here. Those that have given satisfaction over quite a period of time are large bell or bull nose, Royal King and California Wonder. Ony one of these three varieties may be depended upon to give thorough satisfaction.

For the hot peppers, the hottest and smallest is Red Chili. This variety is very pungent, very hot, very small, very easily grown—in fact is very almost everything. For a larger sort, longer, not so hot, fine for drying, there is Long Cayenne. For an even longer, larger, not so hot variety there is Anaheim Chili.

GREENS

The standby of every typical southern home is greens. This word covers a multitude of evils, but includes turnips, mustard rape, swiss chard, kale, beets, spinach and several others not so widely used. After we had been enjoying them for years and years we found that they were healthy and life-giving, containing vitamines and other strange things. After this information was garnered they tasted no differently but were served more often.

The standard for all greens to be measured by is the turnip. If there is one vegetable that is planted in every southern garden it is the turnip. The turnip is such a well-known vegetable that it seems a waste of time to enumerate its good qualities other than to say that it is invaluable. Turnips will do best on new ground, or ground that has not been in cultivation for two or three years. If stable manure is to be used it should be well rotted and worked into the soil about a month before the time to plant seed. Apply a liberal application of some good commercial fertilizer in the row at the time of planting and repeat this about three weeks later. If the turnips grow fast the greens are much more tender and palatable. Use about one ounce of seed to 100 feet of row.

There are a number of very good varieties that are well worth planting. The standard variety used in north Georgia almost exclusive of the others, is the purple top globe. This is a white, globe-shaped variety with a purple or red top. It makes a fairly large amount of greens and very fine turnips. For a good early variety, try flat Dutch; for a yellow variety use amber globe; for stock or chickens, use cowhorn.

There is a new variety that is meeting with a great deal of success in a number of sections in the south. A recent introduction from Japan. This variety makes an unusual amount of very fine quality greens, and at the same time has a fine root. The root is pure white about the size of purple top globe and its greatest plea for distinction is the fact that it is louse resistant. There have been cases of lice destroying purple top globe and not touching this Japanese turnip, where they were planted in the same field.

SPINACH

For a little variety in table greens, it is a good idea to plant a few other things at the same time that the turnips put in the ground. Spinach, largely due to its healthful qualities, is fast becoming the most popular green, next to turnips. Spinach may be planted any time that the ground is not frozen. It germinates in the coldest weather. There are only two varieties that are especially suited for spring planting: Aragon and Bloomsdale. Spinach prefers real rich loamy soil and a heavy application of commercial fertilizer.

OTHER GREENS

Mustard, rape, and kale are all three excellent vegetables for greens. Many people prefer them to either turnips or spinach and everybody enjoys them for a change. Mustard and kale should be planted at the rate of one ounce of seed to two feet of row, rape should be planted at the same rate as turnips. They require about the same culture as turnips. The curled varieties are usually preferred.

WHAT TO DO IN JANUARY.

MULCHING: January is a good month for all kinds of mulching. The rose bed, perennial garden and shrubbery border should be protected. The best material for this mulching is a mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth, one bale of peat moss, 100 pounds of sheep manure, one wheelbarrow of woods earth.

FERTILIZER: It is also time to fertilize the lawn with a light application of some good fertilizer, such as bone meal or sheep manure. These two fertilizers are much to be preferred over the highly concentrated commercial ones at this season of the year. Use raw bone meal for bulbs and perennials.

PRUNING: Take the tall stems out of hybrid perpetual roses as well as the dead wood. Wait until next month to do the final pruning of rose bushes. Remove the dead wood from all shrubbery and evergreens and give the fruit trees a good pruning.

SPRAYING: Now that fruit trees are dormant be sure and give them a good thorough spraying with scalecide or for peach trees use dry lime sulphur.

WHAT TO PLANT IN JANUARY.

VEGETABLES: Sow lettuce, cabbage and onion seeds in the cold frame. Start an asparagus bed at this time. Plant Bermuda onion plants, onion sets, cabbage plants, also garden peas, mustard, rape, turnips and carrots.

SHRUBBERY: Have your shrubbery planted this month. Evergreens, conifers and flowering shrubs.

PLANTS: Set out roses, strawberry and Japanese iris plants.

FRUITS AND BERRIES: This month is a fine time for planting all kinds of fruit and nut trees, berries, grapes and scuppernongs.

JAPANESE LILIES: All of the Japanese lilies may be planted now, including speciosum magnificum, auratum, tiger lilies, album, etc.

BULBS: It is getting late but spring flowering bulbs will still grow and bloom if planted at once. These include hyacinths, daffodils, crocus, tulips and iris bulbs.

JUST LIKE MAGIC

Today being Saturday, we boys held our regular meeting in our clubhouse at 9:30 in the morning, so that the rest of the day we could have to play in the hollow, and upon the river bank I stayed in, as usual, after the meeting was over, to write the minutes. Shadow Loomis had gone out, but within half an hour he was back again.

"Well," I said, turning back to my writing, "if you haven't got anything to do, why don't you go away and stop bothering someone who has?"

"You've got more important work than that scribbling to do," he said, coming in and taking a chair across from me. "It beats me how you can sit there and push that pen, when there are so many exciting things waiting for you outside."

"All right!" I said, throwing aside my pen, and pounding the stopper in my inkbottle. "I'm ready! What's on your mind?"

"The thing that needs investigating," he said, slowly, "is how those pony riders disappeared so quickly, last night, in the pass between the two tall pine-trees at the back of the cliffs."

"You're right, Shadow! It was a puzzle to me, how they disappeared last night—"

"But now it is daytime," broke in Shadow, "and we can see the whole thing clearly, if we go and look. Believe me, nobody can fool me in broad daylight—"

"Hardly," I cut in, with a smile. "But if you think the same things will happen in daylight that you saw last night—well, you're goofy, that's all!"

"No, I don't think the pony riders will ride in daylight, if that's what you mean," said Shadow. "But we can over the same ground, and see what it looks like in daylight. And, perhaps, something in that strange pass between the pines may lead us to a clue—"

"As usual, you are the most sensible boy in our club, Shadow," I said, with a smile, and I patted his shoulder. "Of course, you are right. Lead the way. I will follow you to the pass between the sentinel pines!"

Hardly had we started for the door, when we heard the sound of horse's hoofs out in front. And then a voice that seemed strangely familiar shouted "Whoa! There, you Bolivar! Straighten him up, Cap! Straighten out his stubborn head, and he'll whoa for ye!"

We moved toward the window. Two boys had come down from their saddles, two ponies were pawing the ground in front of our clubhouse. One boy, a stranger, was fixing their hitching straps to the saplings while another, not a stranger, was hot-footing it for our front door. We moved forward to meet him.

"Hah!" he exclaimed, on seeing us, "so I'm just in time, eh? Just in time—"

"Just in time to bet too late," I said, as I stepped out onto the porch, pulling Shadow behind me. I drew the door shut and pulled out my keys to lock up. "Sorry, Mopey, we've go to be going—"

"Oh, no you won't!" he broke in, pointing at me. "You'll answer every question I put to you, Seckatary Hawkins, or I'll know the reason why—"

"And if I refuse?" I put in.

"Haw! You won't! You know my Mob, right enough. Mopey's Mob ain't a crowd of guys to fool with, and none o' yer smart talk goes, see?"

"You're right, Mopey. We know your mob. Well, what's the question?"

"You heard it before. You know we told you to watch and see if a new family moved in this neighborhood, didn't we? Well, what's the answer?"

"The answer is—No!"

Mopey glowered at me for a moment in silence. I saw, out of the corner of my eye, his fists double up, and his lips quivered. I knew he hated me. And I pitied him for it.

"Well," he snarled, "when you do find out, don't fail to tell us guys of the Mob. We want to know."

"Sure!" I exclaimed. "And where shall we get in touch with you, Mopey?"

He seemed a bit startled at that question. But he quickly recovered himself.

"Over yonder," he said, pointing toward Pelham, which lay across the river, "is our outpost. In Pelham. Give it to a boy named Dave Burns. But don't tell anybody else in Pelham. Only Dave. He won't snitch. Give him the news. Don't let his pal Briggen know! And Dave will give us your message. Then all will be easy sailing between our gang and yours—"

"Just a moment, Mopey—your gang and our club, you mean. We don't call ourselves a gang. It isn't fair and square. A gang is a tough bunch. Perhaps you have a gang—but please call us by our own name, hereafter—the Fair and Square Club!"

"All right, we'll call you what you like," said the bully, with a grin, "so long as you do what we say. Goodbye, and good luck to you!"

We watched him and his partner as they leaped into their saddles and urged their ponies forward. Mopey turned and laughed at us. But I noticed that his companion kept his face well pointed between the ears of his pony. And away they went, up the river path, and turned upon the main road toward the cliffs.

"They're going toward the cliffs!" I said, gripping Shadow's arm. "We've got to find out, somehow, why they always go toward the cliffs! Remember the pony riders' mystery of last night!"

"Well," said the stranger, "why don't you say something?"

"Come on!" said Shadow. "You and I need no ponies, Hawkins. Our legs are strong enough—"

And so we moved on. I'll say Shadow's legs were strong enough. Too strong for me! You see, Shadow is tall and slender, but I'm just a bit too fat to run fast. I get all out of wind and my legs seem like leaden things after I run for a quarter of a mile. Good old Shadow! He waited for me.

"Well," he said, "they've got away from us."

"You mean you don't know which way they went?" I asked.

"Yes, I know which way they went, all right. They've gone up the pass toward the cliff head. But remember, we are in the rear of the cliffs. And the earthquake—"

"You mean the tornado?" I put in.

"Well, call it a cyclone if you like, Hawkins. But that earthquake, as I call it, which happened last month, changed things considerably around these old cliffs—look at that slab, there!"

"Morgan's Stone!" I exclaimed. "What's it doing here, Shadow? A full hundred feet below where it used to be—"

"It's the same with every landmark we ever knew around here," said Shadow. "That earthquake—"

"Tornado, you mean!" I cut in.

"Call it what you like," said Shadow, desperately, "but it caused plenty of change around here—hullos! what's that?"

Together we raised our eyes, and stared in silence, our ears cocked for a repetition of the sound. It came again, a low whistle. The two tall pines could b seen above the cliff-head, but we would have to climb farther to see the long pass. Suddenly there came another sound, just as we were about to start forward. Shadow pulled me behind the great slab we knew as Morgan's Stone—and not too soon, for the footsteps had been growing louder and faster, and now into view came a stranger. He was a tall, lank boy, of fair complexion and a handsome face, set off with two big blue eyes that peered all about him as he stopped a dozen feet from Morgan's Stone. He turned this way and that, and once more from above us came the low whistle.

"Well," called out the stranger boy, "where are you?"

And then out from behind a ledge above us came Mopey, leading his pony. He had a queer look upon his face as he approached the stranger lad. The latter looked at him without a smile, almost without a look of recognition, it seemed. He waited for Mopey to speak. But now we were looking upon a different Mopey. He was not the insolent boisterous braggart that we had talked to just a short time before. He stood still at last, before the stranger, and held his pony's head with one hand, while with the other he patted its nose.

"Well," said the stranger, "why don't you say something?"

"I can't," replied Mopey, in a low voice. "I haven't got anything to report to you."

"Well, then," said the stranger, "there's no use of me hanging around here any longer. I will tell Uncle Bill—"

"Oh, but I don't want you to go away!" hastily spoke up Mopey, holding out one hand to stop the stranger lad. "Not yet, not yet—give me time! I promise you I'll do what you want—"

"I could do it myself, perhaps," broke in the fair-faced fellow, straightening up, and he looked like a picture against the ugly shape of Mopey with his long cape. "But I must not, of course, Uncle Bill is the one to think of—but where did you leave Cap?"

"Down on the river bank!" replied Mopey, in a husky undertone. "Those boys in the cabin that they call their clubhouse—they are too foxy! I told him to stay and watch, and if any of them started up this way, to ride hard for the pass and tell us. You see, Seckatary Hawkins is suspicious—"

"Yes, yes, I know," broke in the tall lad, impatiently. "I know everything that happened around that old cabin until—well, until the book disappeared."

"Ah!" said Mopey, with a crafty smile. "That's proof enough! Now I know he is suspicious, and that's why dou don't find his writing book there any more—he knows you've been in to take a look at it, and find out everything—"

"Well, I've found out enough, from reading that book. And unless you can find out for me what I want to know by tonight, tomorrow I will tell Uncle Bill that I'm ready to go—"

"Oh! no! No! Grundy, I can't have you go—listen! If you didn't stay, my whole mob would break up—they're only sticking together because you will lead them—"

"What good is a leader who can't let himself be known as such?" asked the fair lad, with a sorry smile. Next instant the smile was gone. "Go!" he said, shortly. "I'll wait for you once more. Tao Ling will admit you tonight. Uncle Bill will not be back until tomorrow morning. Until that time I will promise you that I will stay at the head of the line!"

And without another word, he was off, up toward the pass between the pines. Mopey turned and watched him walk away; then, leaping into his saddle, he put his heels to his pony's sides and went thundering down the rocky road, driving like mad.

"He will break his fool neck!" exclaimed Shadow, as we watched, but that pony was used to the rocky paths around these cliffs, and as soon as they were out of sight, Shadow jerked my sleeve. "Come on; let's follow the stranger kid."

We followed, but to no use. By the time we sighted the dead tree he had disappeared. The long pass was empty of any living thing. He had disappeared like one who is swallowed up in magic smoke.

Doctor Waters came down to the clubhouse this evening, and I knew he had something on his mind. While the other boys were having singing practice, he cornered Shadow and me in my writing-room.

"Now, look here, kids," he said, "you've got something up your sleeve. What is it?"

We told him quickly that we intended to watch the pass between the sentinel pines every night until we discovered the latest mystery on this old river bank.

"Hm! I thought so!" said Doc, after we finished telling him everything that had happened. "But you're not going alone. Remember, old Judge Granbery lets you hold meetings in this old clubhouse only on one condition—that you don't get into trouble. And I aim to see you keep out of trouble. Therefore, I'll go along with you. If there's such a mystery as you kids tell me, I'll be able to understand it—and keep you out of trouble too."

"No, Doc," I said, "you won't understand it any more than we do. You see—"

"Well, suppose we go and try," put in Doc, smiling as he rose to his feet. "Come on, we can slip out while these boys are singing—they'll never miss you two, anyway."

And so it was that we three went back to the cliff path that wound around the rear of the hills. It was no trouble in climbing the first few stages, but by the time we came to Morgan's Stone, Doc was blowing hard, and begged us to let him take a rest. I was glad of it, because I was blowing a bit myself. While we rested, Shadow explained to Doc just what we had seen and heard at this spot earlier in the day.

"From what you say," said Doc, "it seems that Mopey is in trouble, eh what?"

"It seems so," said Shadow, shaking his head, dubiously. "I'm not so sure but what Mopey and his Mob are att he end of their string. Surely he is in some kind of trouble, and wants the stranger boy to stay here and help him out."

"Either that, or the strange boy who talked to him is in trouble," I said.

They both turned upon me suddenly, but before they could ask questions there came the sound of a low whistle.

"Watch sharp!" said Shadow, in a whisper. "It's the same signal!"

"Keep in the shadow of old Morgan's Stone!" I whispered to Doc.

And then we saw it. The same long line of pony riders was filing up the cliff road. The sound of the hoofs rang like smothered drumbeats, and we knew that the ponies had been shod with soft shoes, perhaps of rubber or leather. But you don't think of everything, at a time like this. You see, the very sight of that long line of ponies is so inspiring that a fellow just admires it and wishes he were one of them.

"Leave it to me!" said Doc, in a low voice. "Do what I say, and we will find out where they go."

"Doc, get behind this stone if you don't want to be seen!" said Shadow.

And we shoved into the shadow of the slab that we called Morgan's Stone. On came the riders silent save for the dull thud of their ponies' hoofs. Now they were passing us—a noble line, sitting their mounts straight and silent as the night. Look! That was Mopey leading them! You could not mistake the odd plush cap on his head, hiding his ears; nor the long cape, trimmed with fur at the edges, that hung to his stirrups!

On they went, passing us not ten feet away! And as soon as the last one had gone by old Morgan's Stone, Shadow was for leaping out and following them. I was right with Shadow. For we two had seen this happen before, and we knew that time was short if we wanted to follow them to their disappearing place. But Doc was shaking his head, holding us back.

"Don't be foolish!" he said, softly. "If we go out now, they will surely see us."

"And if we don't go now, Doc," said Shadow, "we will not see where they go!"

"But hold your horses, Shadow!" said Doc. "Trust me, I'll find out where they go. Only don't go out until it's safe. I wouldn't want them to know where we stood spying upon them—"

"We'd better go now!" said Shadow.

"All right!" snapped Doc. "Go ahead!"

Shadow sprang out, and I was right behind him. Doc was close at my heels. We could see the last of the pony riders' line far above us, passing between the two tall pines that stood as sentinels at the head of the pass. We raced up the path, and reached the two trees in a few minutes—but Doc gave a gasp of amazement, as he came up beside us, and stood looking down the pass. The old gnarled tree at the end of the pass held its naked arms against the hazy sky. That we could see—and that alone. For the pony riders had suddenly disappeared. Just as if a cloud of smoke had come out of a thunderclap and hid them from our sight. They were gone. Only the long, deserted pass lay stretching before our eyes.

"As we told you, Doc," said Shadow, "you've got to travel fast to follow them. This long pass between the pines is a magic place. Once they get on to it, the pony riders disappear and make us wonder where they went."

"Yes, I see!" said Doc, with a perplexed look about his eyes. "But never mind, Shadow. They have the laugh on us, now. But I'm thinking that you and Hawkins can figure this thing out. But for the present, we must give it up and go home."

Which we did.

Our Weekly Meeting

February is coming—one of the most interesting months on the calendar—and we are sure it is going to make a very interesting title for our contest this week. You can make up any title you wish, just so it has the word February in it. As many members are asking me to suggest a title for their contest papers, I will say that "February Days" ought to supply plenty of material for thought, or perhaps you might just want to write about the peculiar "February" itself—it being the shortest month and the only one of the twelve that gets an extra day every four years, or when leap year comes around.

Anyway, if I tell you too much to write about, you won't know what to select, so just read the rules and regulations on this page, and then get busy and write. Remember, don't quit—don't get discouraged. Try again. A quitter never wins, and a winner never quits.

And now we will call our weekly meeting to order, and take up the first communication before the club today, same being a letter from a member in the Buckeye State:

Dear Seck:
I hope to win a book of tales;
Not of a king nor the Prince of Wales,
But of your previous adventures galore,
That you have encountered on the shore.
Tales of the river whose voice is sweet,
Where you and the other boys always meet.
You gather at meetings fair and square,
Oh, how I wish that I were there.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANK ORAVEC, 13,
218 E. 28th St., Lorain, Ohio.

Next we have a communication from a California pen pal whose own little club will be based on our motto, fair and square:

Dear Seck:
I am so glad you have a section in the funnies, because it reminds me of your motto, "Fair and Square."
Some friends of mine and I are organizing a club, but I am sure even though they are not members of your club we shall try hard to base our club on your motto.

Yours, fair and square,
SYLVIA T. KOHN, 11,
210 N. Catalina St., Los Angeles, Cal.

A pen pal in Pennsylvania is introduced next, a first class scout who thinks our motto is a worthy ideal to follow:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:
I have read in the paper every week of your adventures, and I can hardly wait for the next week to come around, so I can finish it. As this is hard on your patience, I have decided to join your club and win a book so that I can read it anytime I want, and not be left suspended until next week to find out what happened after the place it left off. I am a First Class Scout with a merit badge to my credit. There are two things I want to do: one is to become an Eagle Scout and the other is to win a book of yours. As soon as I get my badge I am going to try for one of your prizes. I have moved around quite a bit in the last few years. Two years ago I lived in Cleveland, Ohio, then a year ago we moved to Corry, Pa., and now I'm living in Oil City, Pa. Next week you may get a letter from me as I am determined to win one of your prises. I am going to take the liberty of using your club motto, "Fair and Square," in closing my letter, as I think it a worthy ideal to follow.

Yours, fair and square,
CLARENCE FREW, JR.
297 Linden Ave., Oil City, Pa.

There is nothing like stick-to-itiveness, as is demonstrated by the next communication from a pen pal down in dear old Georgia:

Dear Seck:
I have been a member of your club for about two years.
I have never won a book, but this is the fifth time I have written to you, and I am going to keep on until I do get one. My motto is "A quitter never wins."
I am in the seventh grade. If luck is with me I will go to High School next year.
I hope this letter wins a book. If it doesn't, I will write again next week.

MARTHA GAY, 12,
99 University Drive, Athens, Ga.

Here we have a fine little pen pal in Alabama who has made good reports in school every month this year:

Dear Seck:
I read your page in the paper every week, and it is always interesting. I have been wanting to be a member of your club, so here I am, will you let me in? My age is nine years, and I am in the third grade. I have made good reports every month this year, and hope to continue to do so to the end of school.
I will write you again soon.

Yours, fair and square,
HOWARD MANN,
Tallassee, Ala.

And next we shake hands with a West Virginia pen pal who would like to hear from girl members of the club in other States:

Dear Seck:
I read your page every week and enjoy it very much. I have read some of your books, one was "Ching Toy," that sure was a good book. I would like to have some pen pals. I will answer every letter. I am a member of your club and I like the motto very much. "Fair and Square."
I hope this catches Mr. Waste Basket on to dinner with his girl. I hope this letter wins a book. I have tried once before, but if it don't I will try and try again. I am

Yours, fair and square,
MARY CARREL ROBERTSON,
313 Seventh Ave., Hinton, W. Va.

AND THE PASSWORD—

It is going to be easy to decipher this week, if you have read about Abraham Lincoln. As usual, the letters are all jumbled up, and as it looks now it might appear to mean the name of a little town or something:

LITTLE PARIS

But it is not a town's name or anything of the sort. In fact, after you have solved it, you will find that it is a nickname that they gave Abraham Lincoln, from the early days of his life on the farm. Just change the letters around and you will find it very easy. I'll give you a tip—it begins and ends with the same letter.

NOTE TO ALL CLUB MEMBERS

If your letter is printed in the "Seckatary's Mail Box," it means that it has received only honorable mention. But if it is picked out for special mention like the above letters, and the Seckatary introduces it with a few words of comment, THEN YOU WILL GET A BOOK.

ADIOS.

And now we adjourn for another week. Next week we will hold our regular meeting on this same page. The members whose letters appeared in this meeting will receive a copy of our club's adventures that have previously appeared in this paper. If you are not yet a member, don't lose another day, but send in the membership blank, properly filled out, and receive your pin and certificate. Then take part in all of our contests.

The solution of last week's password was "Basketball."

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

In this week's contest the title must contain the word "FEBRUARY." You may write a letter or story or verse. Write on one side of paper only. Your composition must be written without any assistance from older persons. All compositions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. The contest will close Thursday. Prize winner will be announced February 1st.

PRIZE WILL BE A SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOK

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

:-: :-: IN THE SECKATARY'S MAIL BOX :-: :-:

Dear Seck:
This is the first time I have written to you. I like your club motto, "Fair and Square."
I am going to describe myself: I am 13 years of age, five feet tall, light headed, blue eyes, fair complexion. I would like to win one of your books. I have only one pet and it is a dog. His name is Bob.

Yours, fair and square,
CALVIN CLARK,
Acworth, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have have been reading your page for some time and enjoy it very much. I think your motto, "Fair and Square," is splendid. I also like your colors, blue and white.
The school I go to is the largest grammar school in the city of Atlanta. It has 1,250 children going to it.

Yours, fair and square,
ELAINE WHITE,
568 English Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have just finished reading the story in the magazine. I sure did enjoy reading it. You sure were lucky for finding that money and brave to go up there in that dark steeple, I would have been scared to death.
Seck, I sure was proud of my book. My brother beat me reading it through. He sure did like it. The name is "The Red Runners." I hope to win another one just as interesting as this one.
My grandmother liked to read my book, too. She was just carried away at me winning a book. She is 85 years of age.
I have received a good many letters from the club members.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY ELIZABETH SWANSON,
Route 1, Palmetto, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Don't you think it would be a fine thing if the members would write a little about their town? If so, I will write about my town next time.
I am a girl 13 years of age and have light hair, blue eyes and light complexion.

Yours, fair and square,
JUANITE BORDEAU,
Burgaw, N. C.

Dear Seck:
As this is my first letter to you I will describe myself: I am 13 years old, am in the eighth grade, I am about 58 inches high and weigh about 85 pounds. I have red hair, blue eyes, fair complexion and freckles. My birthday is March 16. Have I a twin? If so please write to me, also lot of others. I will answer every letter I get.
One of my friends up here in the mountains is going to write to you to. We are going to try to win a book so we may let the rest of "Our Gang" read them. We are going to organize a club. We think we will call it "Our Gang."
My best hobby is reading. My other hobbies are swimming, going to the movies and bicycle riding.

Yours, fair and square,
FLORENCE HUGHES,
Cranberry St., Newland, N. C.

Dear Seck:
I am a boy 8 years old. I have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am 4 feet 3½ inches tall. Seck, I have been reading about Stoner being captured. Isn't he a bad boy?
Seck, I sure wish I could see your little club house out on the river bank.

Yours, fair and square,
REGINALD LESLIE,
Glade Spring, Va.

Dear Seck:
How are you? I hope you feel as good as I do. What makes me feel so good is because I am trying to win a book. I have been a member of your club for some time and never won a book yet. I like your club colors best of all and your motto, "Fair and Square." I never will forget your saying "a winner never quits and a quitter never wins." I like to read about Stoner's Boy and Robby. I think the boys are very brave about going into the cave.

Yours, fair and square,
BRADER CHASTAIN,
Cartecay, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I am a little girl 8 years old and in the high second grade at school. Every since I started to school in the first grade I have had all ones (which mean from 90 to 100 per cent) on my report card. My mother and daddy tell me to keep it up, which I hope I can. I have never been tardy and absent only half a day, when my daddy came for me one Friday right after lunch to go to Andalusia. I weigh 52 pounds. My hair is dark brown and my eyes are light brown.

Yours, fair and square,
RUTH MADARIS,
R. F. D. 2, Union Springs, Ala.

Dear Seck:
This is the first time I have written you. I am four feet and four inches tall. I have brown hair and brown eyes. I read your page every day and Sunday, too. I sure did enjoy the Mystery of Lake Tapaho. It was the best and most exciting one of all, but it was hard too.

Yours, fair and square,
ROBERT MATHAS,

Dear Seck:
I have written forty-eleven times
But I've never won a book,
This time I will try in rhymes,
And see what I can hook.

I read your stories every Sunday,
And think that they are fine;
I read them again on Monday,
And never miss a line.
I will close with this line,
I hope you feel fine.

JO CASPARY,
498 Winton Terrace, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I wish to be enrolled as a member of your club. I am enclosing a two-cent stamp for my club badge.
I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade. My hair is brown and my complexion is dark.
I surely like your motto, "Fair and Square."

Yours, fair and square,
FRANK BELL,
Route 2, Duluth, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Well, Seck, here I am knocking on your door to let me in to have a chat with you.
This is the first time I have written you for a long time. The letters I wrote before all landed in the waste basket I guess, for not a one was printed in the paper, so I stopped writing. But today after I finished reading your page and read all the letters the other boys and girls had written made me think of your old saying, "a winner never quits and a quitter never wins," so I decided to write. I said, I would never be a quitter. No sir-ree—not me.

Yours, fair and square,
HAROLD CAMP,
Conyers, Ga.

"MY HOBBY"

My hobby is to sew
For my dolly you know;
If I did not, I've no doubt,
That she for dresses would be without.

To make my blue eyes shine
Just give me a bright new dime,
That I may to the counter go
To buy more cloth for to sew.

The pattern upon the cloth I put,
I take the scissors, then begin to cut.
Away I stitch and stitch the seams,
While my dolly has sweet dreams.

IDA MAE LEWALLEN,
Commerce, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Yes, by heck,
I'm standing now on the burning deck,
Reading Seckatary Hawkin's
Mail by the peck.

I like the motto, "Fair and Square,"
Think it's the best anywhere;
Like the colors, blue and white,
Follow the rules with all my might.

I'm a girl with only one hobby,
Reading Seck's books in the lobby;
Now, Seck, please be good,
I'd do the same to you if I could.

Yours, fair and square,
THELMA GIBSON,
Union City, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have, at last, found my twin. She is Dorothy Bhumann, for she said in her last letter that she was born June 2, and that is my birthday, too. And I am 10.
I have never read one of your books, but I would like very much to win one. I have been a member of your club a long time. My hobby is bicycling.
My pets are ducks and one cat. My dog was stolen. I hope you and the other club members had a very merry Christmas.

Yours, fair and square,
LUCY LESTER,
3468 Peachtree Rd., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:
This is my second time that I have written to you, but have not yet succeeded, but I shall never forget that a quitter never wins and a winner never quits. I read your adventures every Sunday and like them very much. I can hardly wait until the paper comes every Sunday to read your adventures. I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and colors, blue and white.

Yours, fair and square,
J. Y. McCLUNG,
Route 6, Dallas, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I read your page every Sunday and enjoy it very much. I also enjoyed your adventures trying to solve the mystery of the ghost of Lake Tapaho, which at last you were successful in solving.
My birthday is February 19, and I will be 12 years old. Have I a twin? If I have, boy or girl, please write me.
Here comes the old "war cry" for corresponding friends. Everyone please write me and I promise an answer to each and every letter I receive.
I remain, yours, fair and square,
LEILA MAE NORTON,
Conyers, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I like to read and write and go to school, and sew for my dolls, and help my mother.
I will describe myself: I am ten years old and in the fifth grade and I am dark complected. I have black hair and dark brown eyes. I was born in Monterey, Mexico when my mother and father were missionaries.

Yours, fair and square,
ALMA GRACIA,
Athens, Ga.

Dear Seck:
The 6th of January is my birthday, and I wish I could be with you on the river bank. Seck, when you all captured Stoner why did you let him get away. He is a very mean boy. I would love to hear Lew Hunter play the organ and hear you all sing.

Yours, fair and square,
EVELYN PARRACK,
Glade Spring, Va.

Dear Seck:
I enjoy your stories very much in the papers. I think this week's story of the "Mystery in the Belfry" was very interesting. I think the club motto, "Fair and Square," is just fitted for your club, and blue and white are very good colors for a club like yours.

Yours, fair and square,
JANE S. PAQUETTE,
1436 Heath St., Augusta, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I hope you remember your old friend. I have moved from Raleigh, N. C., to Cary, N. C. I am a perfect blond, 10 years old. I have seven pen pals which are very nice.
Your stories in the papers are so very good.

Yours, fair and square,
MINNIE WILLIAMS COX,
Cary, N. C.

Dear Seck:
I have only been a member of your wonderful club two months, but I know it is the most wonderful club that there is for boys and girls.
I already have seven pen pals, one boy and six girls. My first two pen pals are girls, and I am crazy about them both. They are Louise Miller and Betty Parker. I sure do enjoy writing and receiving letters from all of my pen pals, and I would like many more.
I am 11 years old and in the seventh grade, my birthday is January 22, I have brown hair and blue eyes and I am about five feet three inches tall.
I had a very merry Christmas and a happy new year, and I hope every one at the clubhouse did also.
I sure did enjoy the Mystery of Lake Tapaho. I have just read your page about the man that stole the money from the bank that you helped to catch. I sure did like it. I am expecting some more pen pals soon.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY GILBERT,
236 E. Ponce de Leon Ave., Decatur, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have just become a member of the club. I read your page most every Sunday. I surely did like the Mystery of Lake Tapaho. The January password is McKinley. I am in the sixth "A" and I like it very much. Your colors, blue and white are beautiful and I love the motto, "Fair and Square." If you picked them out you are pretty good. I am 11 years of age. I am a blonde with blue eyes. I hope to hear from boys and girls.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY SIMON,
524 Commerce St., Albany, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have just finished reading your page and have enjoyed it awfully much.
We have had two weeks for Christmas vacation. I sure have enjoyed it, too. We go to school tomorrow.
My birthday was January 2. I was 12 years old.
Well, Seck, I hope old Santa was good to you. He sure was to me. We helped some of the poor people and it made me happy to see them so happy.

Yours, fair and square,
BETTY WARD,
408 South Madison, Albany, Ga.
